ADVICES FROM WEST MOST SATISFACTORY REGARDING SYLVESTER MFG. COMPANY

The Post takes much pleasure in informing its readers that advices received from the west by the organization committee are most satisfactory, not only direct as regards the immediate order for drills but also as to the future great requirements of Western Canada in farm implements, and most particularly binding and harvesting machinery. This, of course, bespeaks for the Sylvester plant, a very bright future, and gives promises of large increasing profits to those identified with the company, as well as assures the repayment of any loans of credit by the town within developed. When one considers the time of its advance. The present development in the west is enormous, and requirements of farm machinery correspondingly great but today is as nothing compared with the possibilities in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Not only will this development be rapid, but it will be secure and firmly established. Careful study of conditions there shows that the growth is logical, and not the spasmodic settlement of isolated sections or of an untried territory in an untried way.

The settled sections have not been picked out as of a special province, the course of transportation as it but have grown logically, following total climate average, and than the relatively small proportion of cultivation of today, the plane of the implement dealers of that section are prepared to absorb expenditure of twenty to thirty millions of dollars and within a few years are not little enough.

It can be easily seen what this means to Lindsay as the manufacturing home of one of the most successful of western machines, expectably suited to the needs of the land. Established, as it is, at the beginning of this great development in the field, with a good name for successful work, it assures to Lindsay a great future for the manufacturing plant, owned and controlled by our own people, it means that from the black mould of a thousand centuries on the western prairies shall come the golden grain of Alberta Red that coined into golden dollars will come pouring into Lindsay to make rich in money and happiness our people. It's up to us to bring about this result. The committee cannot do it alone It requires the work of each and all the financial and willing their power. The Sylvester plant must remain in Lindsay. We and our children must depend on this factory for happiness and dollars from the golden west. Now altogether for the big PULL.

RATEPAYERS WANT MORE INFORMATION ON THE LOCAL POWER PROPOSITION

To the Editor of the Evening Post, Lindsay, Ont.

Dear Sir,—

The writer is one of many of our citizens who does not fully understand the power question, which is shortly to be placed before us for decision by vote, and would consider that the "Post" was doing a valuable service to some of its readers if it would ascertain which or my understanding of the power situation is correct.

The report of the Hydro-Electric Commission shows that the power plant, which we are recommended to purchase can be operated at an annual cost of $26,629, and that the plant has given a maximum output of 918 h.p. It would appear, therefore, that after the purchase power will cost, land down in Lindsay, about $27 per h.p. per annum. The report shows that the plant can be further enlarged to give us more power at a lower unit cost but the original Hydro Electric Commission report on the Trent River showed the total power at Fenelon Falls to be about 700 h.p and until this last report was published, no one ever thought that more than 1000 h.p. could be obtains from the rights of the Lindsay Light, Heat and Power Company. It is certain that the earlier reports were all wrong, and only the last one right, because if not it would appear that Lindsay, with 137 h.p. will have a poor chance competing against Toronto buying power from the Commission at $18 and with Peterborough and Trenton which are freely advertising power at $15?

We should be glad to know which of the conflicting reports is the question investigated and which are results. It seems far from wise to commit us to the expenditure of a quarter of a million dollars on the sole opinion of one young Engineer.

We shall be glad if the Post will ascertain the facts for the benefit of its readers.

Yours very truly,

RATEPAYER.

MOVING PICTURE LAW DELAYED

Telegrams come to the illness of Col. Hon. A. J. Matheson, the new provincial law, regulating moving picture films and machines will not go into effect until June 20. It was to come into force on Thursday, but the absence of the Provincial Treasurer makes it necessary to have a postponement. The Board of Censors will be named, probably at the end of the week. Another law to come into force on June 1, is that taxing stock transfers. The illness of the Provincial Treasurer has also delayed, to some extent, the work of preparing the necessary schedules and the making of arrangements for the collection of the tax.

HAS DR. NESBITT TAKEN HIS LIFE?

Toronto News—I am convinced that Dr. Beattie Nesbitt is dead. He is not the type of man to return a fugitive from justice. He was a universal man, proud of the political influence that he once exercised; proud of his former membership in the Legislature confidence in himself and ambitious. He could not contemplate defeat and that he will never be heard of again on this earth.

This startling statement was made at the Junction cattle yards this morning by a former political colleague of Dr. Nesbitt's. He knew the supposed fugitive former president of the Farmers' Bank intimately and had a good insight into his character.

His medical knowledge would suggest certain convenient means of suicide," he added. "I also know that since the night of his flight from Toronto, with the police hot on his trail that no line of message has been received from him. Dr. Nesbitt is dead. That is my conviction.

BOLT HIT CHURCH AND STRIPPED HAT

Villa Nova, May 31—While the congregation of the Salem Methodist church at Nober were engaged in worship on Sunday afternoon, lightning struck and demolished the chimney and demolished the church, scattered the stove pipes through the building, stripped the linoleum from the floor, and finally gave a fine electrical display on the wire frame of a hat worn by one of the fair worshipers.

When exhibition was over the covering of the millinery creation had been completely stripped from the hat, but the wearer was not hurt.

During the same storm the steeple of the Trexterville Methodist church was struck, and the large barns on the farm of Jas. Slogitt were destroyed with heavy loss. The electrical storm was very severe all through this part of the country of Norfolk.

MR. N. SMALE IMPRESSED WITH BRANDON THINKS CITY HAS A GREAT FUTURE

The Brandon Daily Sun contains following interview with Mr. Newton Smale who is at present on a business trip to the west,—

"Among the visitors in the West on Monday was Newton Smale, assistant manager of the Victoria Loan and Savings Co. of Lindsay, Ont. Mr Smale is one of the old timers of the Midland district of Ontario, and has been prominent in public affairs in that district for many years. This is his first visit to Brandon, and he is delighted with the general appearance of the city and the progress that has been made here.

"I know Eastern Canada pretty well," said Mr. Smale, "and I cannot recall one of the small cities in the East that has anything on Brandon This city looks to me like an ideal residential place and so situated as to become one of the West's greatest business centres. It is quite evident that Brandon has been doing more than exploiting the East with faraway subdivisions. The very modern appearance of the city and the apparent stability of this place indicates that while other places have been selling their adjoining territory and building lots to Eastern widows, the territory adjacent to Brandon has been raising hard wheat and fine horses and cattle and building up here a commercial centre. I very much more than ordinary importance.

It was intimated to Mr. Smale that Brandon had been much abused, that Brandon was not known in the East like other Western points.

"Well it is time," said the Eastern visitor, "quite true, but I venture to say that there is not a place in Western Canada, that is as favorably know in the East as this little city. There are places that are better known because their outside property has been exploited all over the east, and while the holders of that property are hoping against hope to get their money out of it, they talk about those places more than they do about Brandon. The great majority of them however, are beginning to feel that they are buncoed, and I can hardly believe that the publicity that towns get from disappointed investors is going to result in very great profit to these towns.

"Take it from me, the city of Brandon with its fine situation is bound to come into its own, for with its safe, conservative policy of city building, the investment of Eastern people as one of the best business locations in the West. It is felt that this city has been in a policy in which the main view is for the future and adherent to such a policy should lead to build up here a large and prosperous business centre."

SPECIAL INTERESTS FAIL

The efforts of the special interests to commit the Federal Opposition to a policy of open hostility to reciprocity is not meeting with unqualified success. Hon Mr. Haultain, leader of the Provincial Conservative party in Saskatchewan, has, with his whole legislative following, declared unhesitatingly in favor of the measure. Among the convinced supporters of the agreement in Ontario and who are also leading Conservatives are Lewis Wigle, ex-M.P. of Essex; J. E. Johnston, manager of the Norfolk Co-operative Fruit-Growers' Association, Hon. Fraser, of Brant County; Harry Corby, ex-M.P. of Hastings; ex-Mayor Graham, of Belleville, and J. B. Anderson, Treasurer of the Eastern Ontario Dairyman's Association. In Nova Scotia R. S. Eaton, President of the Nova Scotia Fruit Growers' Association, and a well-known Conservative, is also on record as being in favor. Nor are these isolated cases. The evidence indicates, indeed, that reciprocity is approved by a practically unanimous West, by an overwhelming majority of farmers in Ontario, and by all classes in the Maritime Provinces.—Toronto Weekly Sun.

CANADIAN EMIGRATION

In 1906-1, 19000 Americans crossed the line into Canada. In 1910-11, 110,000 American farmers went to Canada and settled on the virgin wheat fields of the old Dominion. According to Col. Andrew D. Davidson, who is known as "the father of American immigration," the number of Americans, farmers families, with their goods and chattels and will cross the boundary into Canada this year will exceed 200,000. Col. Davidson is in close touch with the immigration agents in the United States, and his prophecies a record year in Canadian settlement.

Thousands of colonists are already taking the railways, and hundreds who bought land last fall are moving north to get their crops in as early as possible. Others are going to take up land in some of the huge blocks of new homesteads that are being opened up along the railways.

One block of 10,000 free homesteads has been opened up beyond Edmonton and in a recent bulletin to the Grand Trunk Valley in great numbers. Reports from Edmonton say that for the last three months a steady stream of homeseekers' wagons has been passing through that city and that the hitherto unsettled prairie west of there will be down to wheat this spring. Four million acres of free homestead land is now available along the branch lines of the Canadian Northern, and it is expected that much of it will be taken up in the next two months.—Peoria Star.

THE LADIES AID

We've put a fine addition on the good old church at home
It's just the latest hitter with a gallery and dome,
It seats a thousand people —finest church in all the town,
And when 'twas dedicated, why, we plunked ten thousand down.
Then, we paid five thousand—every deacon did his best,
And the Ladies' Aid Society, it promised all the rest.

We've got an organ in the church—they finished in the land,
It's got a thousand pipes or more, its melody is grand,
And when we sit in cushioned pews and hear the master play,
It carries us to realm of bliss, unnumbered miles away,
It cost a cool three thousand, and it stood the hardest test,
We'll pay a thousand on it, the Ladies' Aid the rest.

They'll give a hundred socials, cantatas, too, and teas,
They'll bake a thousand angel cakes and tons of cream they'll freeze
They'll beg and scrape and toil and sweat, for seven years or more,
And then they'll start all o'er again, for a carpet on the floor.
No, it isn't just like digging out the money from your vest,
When the Ladies' Aid get bust and says, "We'll pay the rest."

Of course, we're proud of our big church from pulpit up to attic
It's the darling of our eyes, the crown of our desire,
But when I see the sisters work, to raise the cash that lacks,
I somehow feel the Church is built on women's tired backs.
And somehow I can't help thinking, when we reach the regions blest,
That men will get the toil and sweat and the Ladies' Aid—the rest.

END OF TRUSTS

By the decision of the Supreme court of the United States the Standard oil trust declared dividend of $9,000,000 months. The court finds that this is a monopoly in restraint of trade and in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. On Monday the Standard Oil trust declared a dividend of $9,000,000 For years the United States has been engaged in a struggle to put down by law a combination that it contended was a menace to the industrial and economic advancement of the nation. At last the victory has been won and the Standard oil company of New Jersey and its 16 subsidiary corporations have been ordered to cease business forthwith Nov. 1st. Justice White read the opinion which was unanimous with the exception of Justice Harlan, and his dissent applied only to a limitation of the application of the Sherman anti-trust law. By this decision the Sherman law becomes an instrument for compelling combinations to be used only in arrangeable way. The court holds that the oil trust was a combination designed to drive others from the field, to take from them the right to trade. The decision meets the wants and expectations of the people. The stock market has discounted it, and there will probably be no disturbance of the money market in connection with the action of the court. The statement that there are other trusts and that trusts, which was lightly received during the Roosevelt administration takes on a new meaning under the ruling of the court. No trust that uses legitimate methods has anything to fear, but one that follows the course of the Standard oil trust must change its system of business now or be compelled to do it a little later. Where the oil trust is the product of the oil wells will be increased is a question. Standard oil made the price because it had the power which a monopoly confers. Now that the restraint is removed, competition will keep the price where it belongs. At the worst the oil business will be conducted according to law, and that is all the consumers desire or expect.

ANNUAL INSPECTION REPORT OF REGT. SATISFACTORY TO MILITIA COUNCIL

Lieut. Col. Sylvester is in receipt of the following from Col. Hendrie, M.O.C., M.D. No. 3, Toronto, regarding the annual 45th, Regt. Inspection report.

I beg to inform you that the annual inspection report for 1910 on the regiment under your command is considered satisfactory in most respects.

The fact that it was only 388 strong and that there were only eight substitute officers in camp, detracts from the otherwise very creditable report earned.

It is pleasing to note that the staff sergts., and sergeants have retained their rank for years, and that the physique of the rank and file was good.

It is noted that the L.E. Rifles are reported as being "in fairly satisfactory condition only."

The establishment of a new system of cover and seating for the men's messing is highly commendable, and I am to convey to you the appreciation of the minister of Militia Council at the enterprise shown in doing so.

The generosity of Hon. Lt.—Col. W. Mackenzie in donating $1000.00 towards the funds of the regiment has been noted with pleasure, and you will please convey to him the thanks of the minister in council for it. W

Although the figure of merit for musketry continues good, there has been a falling off since last year, 3.6 compared with 4.07.

I am to convey to you the satisfaction of the Militia council at the present state of efficiency of the Regiment, and express the hope that no efforts will be spared to have it maintained as good, if not better inspection this year.

New Regulations Take Effect Soon

The new provincial regulations governing moving picture machines and operators comes into effect on Thursday, the 1st of June, as provided in the bill which it was introduced in the Legislature. The names of the Board of Censors, on which there will be three members, will be announced to-day or to-morrow by the Hon. Col. Matheson, Provincial Treasurer, who is expected to return to the Parliament Buildings to-day after several weeks absence through illness

The licenses have been graded, as June is the first month in the license year. Film exchanges must pay a license of $500 a year, the exhibitor $100, and the operator $5. Licenses issued in later months are graded according to the time they are paid. The film must be passed by the censors before being shown in the province.

HYMENEAL

MAWBY—STUBBINGS.

Cambridge st. Methodist church was the scene of an interesting matrimonial event at ten o'clock Monday morning when Miss Elsie Mary Stubbings was united in marriage to Mr. J. P. Wilson, to Mr. J. A. Mawby.

The bride was gowned in a charming cream suit with hat to match and carried a spray of lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid, a sister of the bride, was attired in a dress of maize muli, with hat to match and carried a bouquet hat trimmed with velvet. Mr. S. Stokes officiated as groomsman.

Mr. and Mrs. Mawby will reside in town.

Advice to Delivery Boys

The Medical Advocate of recent date contains the following advice that does not seem out of place in Lindsay:—"Complaints are frequently heard that delivery rigs are frequently driven on the boulevards in front of residences, and that delivery boys run across lawns instead of keeping to the walks. Probably no one is greater pride taken than in our own town in keeping lawns and boulevards in good shape. Would it be well for those who employ delivery boys to instruct them to respect the town by-laws in regard to boulevards and lawns?"

DIED

WHITE—In Lindsay, on Sunday May 28, 1911, William L. White aged 43 years.

The funeral will leave his late residence, 20 Russell st. east, on Tuesday, June 6th at 3 o'clock, and proceed to St. Mary's Church, thence to the Roman Catholic Cemetery.

Please omit flowers.

Rev. S. C. Moore Goes to Oshawa

The following from the Trenton Courier refers to a former Lindsay resident—

"Trenton citizens, irrespective of denominational creed, have learned with regret that Rev. S. C. Moore, Pastor of Kingest. Methodist church, is to leave Trenton for a new charge at Oshawa, in June. Mr. Moore's stay in Trenton has been productive of good abundant measure, to this community, since he came here some four years ago. Filled with the spirit of his holy office, Mr. Moore has been a most solicitous pastor to his own people, but withal he has been the warm-hearted friend to strangers of creed other than his own; a cheery acquaintance and a sterling citizen. He will leave a host of friends behind him whose best wishes will follow him wherever he goes to spread the glad news of cheerful, practical, religion.

Three Bicyclists Were Fined

At the police court this morning three boys faced the magistrate charged with riding their bicycles on the pavement. They were each fined $1 and costs.

Police Magistrate Jackson said the by-law prohibited bicycles using the sidewalks and it must be lived up to. If, during unfavorable weather, when the roads were impassable, a bicyclist was charged with violating the by-law, and it was shown that he had dismounted in meeting pedestrians, this fact would be taken into consideration by the magistrate in disposing of the case

Counting Noses Starts Thursday

Look out! It will be as well to look out as far as possible but centre your attention on Thursday next, for on that date the census taker will be turned loose in the land to spy out your name, number and every and inmost secret of your soul.

This census taker will go from door to door to count noses all over Canada. This will be his first object, but he will not confine himself to this. He will also, again not very much, and "The census taker is going to be the old original question mark from the hills. He will ask you things which are your business and things which are nobody's business and some more things which never will be anybody's business

These questions are gleaned from history, ancient, modern, profane and sacred, from fiction and from sundry and other sources. "Where do you come from baby dear?" will be least of what He will want to know where you work and why. How much you children have you and are you satisfied with it?

Are you single? Were you ever married and if so, how much? Do you expect to be again, and if so do you think it will take? How many children have you and are you satisfied?

Where did you come from? Why? Do you think you will ever go back, and if so how often—and on whose money? Where were you born and are you glad of it? If so do you think the satisfaction has spread? Have you ever committed murder, arson, or disobedience to your parents or anybody else's parents?

Are you blind, and if so, how do you know? Are you deaf, and if so do you like music? Are you dumb, and if so, why don't you say so? Are you crazy, and if so, why are you so, and if so, are you any more so than these questions?

A Accident on St. Paul Street

An accident occurred this morning at the bridge over the creek on St Paul street. The covering of the bridge is broken in three places and a horse belonging to Mr. Easton went over the end of the structure and was suspended by one hind leg and the harness for some time until Mr. Wm. Fee, and others came to his relief. The city engineer has been complained of some time ago and the council should have it repaired at once.

A STRANGE QUACK

Grant, of Maidstone, Described Himself to the Coroner as a Human X-Ray

An extraordinary quack came before the Maidstone coroner recently in connection with an inquiry into the death of an aged woman named Winn, of Barning. Mrs. Winn, who died from heart failure following kidney trouble, had consulted a so-called mental scientist named Grant, of Maidstone. Grant, called as a witness, described himself as a human X-Ray. He had been practising about nine months and could not exactly explain his treatment. He simply held his hand over a patient and gave no medicine.

The Coroner:—"Do you hold yourself out as being able to cure people by occult or some hidden mysterious power?"

Witness:—"I can cure any disease that anyone likes to put before me."

Tailor:—"Are you going to be in the county?"

Coroner:—"Oh, yes."

Witness:—"Then, sir, our terms are invariably cash in advance."

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

The Red Year

STORY OF THE INDIAN MUTINY

BY LOUIS TRACY

...ben. They passed through the noble Nakar Khana, or music-room, and entered another and larger square, at the further end of which stood the Diwan-i-Am, or Hall of Public Audience.

Not even in Agra, and certainly not in gaudy Lucknow, had Malcolm seen any structure of such striking architectural effect. The elegant roof was supported on three rows of red sandstone pillars, adorned with chaste gilding and stucco-work. Open on three sides, the audience chamber was backed by a wall of white marble, from which a staircase led to a throne raised about ten feet from the ground and covered with a rarely beautiful marble canopy borne on four small pillars.

The throne was empty, but an attendant appeared through the door at the foot of the stairs, and announced that the Light of the World would receive his faithful soldiers in a few minutes.

The impatient warriors snorted their disapproval. They did not like to be kept waiting, but carried their resentment no further, and Malcolm, with alert eyes and ears, moved about among them, as by that means he hoped to avoid attracting attention.

Even in that moment of deadly peril he could not help admiring the exquisite skill with which the great marble wall was decorated with mosaics and paintings of the fauna and flora of India. The mosaics were wholly composed of precious stones, and the paintings were executed in rich tints that told of a master hand. There was nothing bizarre or crude in their conception. They might have adorned some Athenian temple in the heyday of Greece, and were wholly free from the stiff drawing and flamboyant coloring usually seen in the East. He did not then know that a renegade Venetian artist, Austin de Bordeaux, had carried out this work for Shah Jehan, that great patron of the arts, and in any event, his appreciation of their excellence was spasmodic, for the broken words he heard from the excited soldiery warned him that a crisis was imminent in the fortunes of Delhi.

"Who is he, then, this havildar of gunners from Bareilly?" said one.

"And the other, Akhab Khan. They say he fought for the Nazarenes at Meerut. Mohammed Latif swears he deefnded the treasury there," chimed in another.

"As for me, I care not who leads. I want my pay."

"I, too. I have not eaten since sunrise yesterday."

"We shall get neither food nor money till some one clears those accursed Feringhis off the hill," growled a deep voice close behind Malcolm.

There was something familiar in the tone. Frank edged away and glanced at the speaker, whom he recognized instantly as a subadar in his old regiment.

But now a craning of necks and a sudden hush of the animated talk showed that some development was toward. Servants entered with cushions, which they disposed around the foot of the throne and at the base of its canopy. A few nobles and court functionaries lounged in, two gorgeously appareled guards came through the doorway, and behind them tottered a feeble old man, robed in white, and wearing on his head an aigrette of Bird of Paradise plumes, fastened with a gold clasp in which sparkled an immense emerald.

Malcolm had seen Bahadur Shah only once before. He remembered how decorous and dignified was the Mogul court when Britain paid honor to an ancient dynasty. And now, what a change! The aged emperor had to lift a trembling hand to obtain a hearing, while, ever and anon, even during his short address, belated officers and troopers clattered in on horseback, and did not dismount within the precincts of the sacred Hall of Audience itself.

He began by explaining timorously that while affairs remained in their present unsettled condition he could not arrange matters as he would have wished. He knew that there were arrears of pay and that the food supply was irregular.

"But you do not help me," he said, with some display of spirit. "Respectable citizens tell me that you plunder their houses and debauch their wives and daughters. I have issued repeated injunctions prohibiting robbery and oppression in the city, but to no avail."

He was interrupted with loud murmurs.

"What matters it about the bazaar-folk, O King," yelled a sepoy. "We want food, not a sermon."

The Emperor seemed to fire up with indignation at the taunt, but he sank into the chair on the throne. He raised a hand twice to quiet the mob, and at last they allowed him to continue.

"I am weary and helpless," he said faintly. "I have resolved to make a vow to pass the remainder of my life in service acceptable to Allah. I will relinquish my title and take the garb of a moullah. I am going to the shrine of Khwaja Sahib, and thence to Mecca, where I hope to end my sorrowful days."

This was not the sort of consolation that the mob expected or wanted. A hawl of execration burst forth, but it was stayed by the entrance of two people from the private portion of the palace.

There was no need that Malcolm should ask who the pale, haughty, beautiful woman was who came and stood by her father's side. Roshinara Begum did not share the Emperor's dejection. She faced the rebels now with the air of one who knew them for the canaille they were. But that was only for an instant. A consummate actress, she had a part to play, and she bent and whispered something to Bahadur Shah with a great show of pleased vivacity.

A man who accompanied her stepped to the front of the throne, and his words soon revealed to Malcolm that he was listening to the Shahzada, the heir apparent, Mirza Moghul.

"Why do you come hither to disturb the King's pious meditations?" he cried angrily. "You were better employed at the batteries, where your loyal comrades are now firing a salute of twenty-one guns to celebrate the capture of Agra by the Neemuch Brigade."

He paused. His statement was news to all present, as, indeed, it well might be, seeing that it was a lie. But his half petulant, half boastful tone was convincing, and several voices were raised in a cry of "Shabash! Good hearing!"

"This is no time to create mischief and disunion," he went on loudly. "Help is coming from all quarters. Gwalior, Jhansi, Neemuch and Lucknow are sending troops to aid us. In three or four days, if Allah be willing, the Ridge will be taken, and every one of the base unbelievers humbled and ruined and sent to the fifth circle of hell."

The man had the actor's trick of making his points. Waiting until an exultant roar of applause had died away, he delivered his most effective hit.

"At the very time you dared to burst in on the Emperor's privacy he was arranging a loan with certain local bankers that will enable all arrears of pay to be made up. To-day there will be a free issue of cattle, grain and rice. Go, then! Tell these things to all men, and trust to the King of Kings and his faithful advisers, of whom I am at once the nearest and the most obedient, to lead you to victory against the Nazarenes."

For the hour these brave words sufficed. The sepoys trooped out and Malcolm went with them. A backward glance revealed the princess and her brother engaged in a conversation with Bahadur Shah and a courtier or two. Their gestures and manner of argument did not bear out the joyful tidings brought to the conclave by the Shahzada. Indeed, Frank guessed that they were soundly rating the miserable monarch for having allowed himself to speak so plainly to his beloved subjects.

Malcolm knew there was not a word of truth in Mirza Moghul's brief speech. The Gwalior contingent had gone to Cawnpore. All the men Bareilly had to send had already arrived with Bakht Khan, the "havildar of artillery," who was now the King's right-hand man. Jhansi, Neemuch, and Lucknow had enough troubles of their own without helping Delhi, and, as for the bankers' aid, it was easy to guess the nature of the "loan" that the Emperor hoped to extract from them.

Indeed, while Malcolm and Chumru and their new associates were wandering through the streets and making the circuit of the western wall, there was another incipient riot in the fort. Delay in issuing the promised rations enraged the hungry troops. A number hurried again to the Diwan-i-Am, clamored for the king's presence, and told him roundly that he ought to imprison his sons, who, they said, had stolen their pay.

"If the Treasury does not find the money," was the threat, "we will kill you and your family, for we are masters."

This later incident came to Malcolm's ears while Chumru was persuading a grain-dealer to admit that he had some corn hidden away. The sight of money unlocked the man's lips.

"Would there were more like you in the King's service," he whined. "I have not taken a rupee in the way of trade since the huzoors were driven forth."

It was easy enough to interpret the unhappy tradesman's real wishes. He was pining for the restoration of the British Raj. Every man in Delhi, who had anything to lose, mourned the day that saw the downfall of the Sirkar.

"Affairs go badly, then," Malcolm put in. "Speak freely, friend. We are strangers, and are minded to go back whence we came, for there is naught but misrule in the city so far as we can see."

"What can you expect from an old man who writes verses when he should be punishing malefactors?" said the grain-dealer, bitterly anxious to vent his wrongs. "If you would act wisely, sirdar, leave this bewitched place. It is given over to devils. I am a Hindu, as you know, but I am worse treated by the Brahmins than by men of your faith."

"Mayhap you have quarreled with some of the sepoys and have a sore feeling against them?"

"Think not so, sirdar. Who am I to make enemies of these lords? Every merchant in the bazaar is of my mind, and I have suffered less than many, for I am a poor man and have no family."

In response to Chumru's request the grain-dealer allowed the men to cook their food in an inner courtyard. While Malcolm extracted additional details as to the chaos that reigned in the city the newcomers from Gwalior consulted among themselves. They had seen enough to be convinced that there were parts of India much preferable to Delhi for residential purposes.

"Behold, sirdar!" said one of them after they had eaten. "You led us in, and now we pray you lead us out again. There are plenty here to fight the Feringhis, and we may be more useful at Lucknow."

Malcolm could have laughed at the strangeness of his position, but he saw in this request the nucleus of a new method of winning his way beyond the walls.

"Bide here," he said gruffly, "until Ali Khan and I return, which we will surely do ere night. Then we shall consider what steps to take. At present, I am of the same mind as you."

He wanted to visit the Cashmere Gate and examine its defenses. Then, he believed, he would have obtained all the information that Nicholson required. He was certain that Delhi would fall if once the British secured a footing inside the fortifications. The city was seething with discontent. Even if left to its own devices it would speedily become disrupted by the warring elements within its bounds.

Chumru and he rode first to the Mori Gate. Thence, by a side road, they followed the wall to the Cashmere Gate. Traveling as rapidly as the crowded state of the thoroughfare permitted and thus wearing the semblance of being engaged on some urgent duty, they counted the guns in each battery and noted their positions.

Arrived at the Cashmere Gate they loitered there a few minutes. This was the key of Delhi. Once it was won, a broad road led straight to the heart of the city, with the palace on one hand and the Chandni Chowk on the other.

Malcolm saw with a feeling of unutterable loathing that the mutineers had converted St. James's Church into a stable. Not so had the founder, Colonel James Skinner, treated the religions of the people among whom he lived. The legend goes that the gallant soldier, a veteran of the Mahratta wars, had married three wives, an Englishwoman, a Mohammedan, and a Hindu. His own religious views were of the nebulous order, but, so says the story, being hard pressed once in a fight, he vowed to build a church to his wife's memory if he escaped. When he came to give effect to it he was puzzled to know which wife he should honor, so he built a church, a mosque and a temple, each at a corner of the triangular space just within the Cashmere Gate.

Whether the origin of the structures is correctly stated or not, they stand to this day where Skinner's workmen placed them, and it was a dastardly act on the part of men who worshiped in mosque and temple to profane the hallowed shrine of another and far superior faith.

Malcolm was sitting motionless on Nejdi, looking at a squad of rebels erecting fascines in front of a new battery on the river side of the gate, when Chumru, whose twisted vision seemed to command all points of the compass, saw that the commander of a cavalry guard stationed there was regarding them curiously.

"Turn to the right, huzoor," he muttered.

Malcolm obeyed instantly. The warning note in Chumru's voice was not to be denied. It would be folly to wait and question him.

"Now let us canter," said the other, as soon as the horses were fairly in the main road.

"You did well, sahib, to move quickly. There was one in the guard yonder whose eyes grew bigger each second that he looked at you."

They heard some shouting at the gate. A bend in the road near the ruined offices of the Delhi Gazette gave them a chance of increasing the pace to a gallop. There was a long, straight stretch in front, leading past the Telegraph Office, the dismantled magazine, and a small cemetery. Then the road turned again, and by a sharp rise gained the elevated plateau on which stood the fort.

Glancing over his shoulder at this point, Malcolm caught sight of a dozen sowars riding furiously after them. To dissipate any hope that they might not be in pursuit, he saw the leader point in his direction and seemingly urge on his comrades. It was impossible to know for certain what had roused this nest of hornets, though the presence of a man of the 3rd Cavalry in the palace that morning was a sinister fact that led to only one conclusion. No matter what the motive, he felt that Chumru and he were trapped. There was no avenue of escape. Whether they went ahead or made a dash for the city, their pursuers could keep them well in sight, as their tired horses were incapable of a sustained effort at top speed after having been on the move nearly twenty hours.

He had to decide quickly, and his decision must be governed not by personal considerations but by the needs of his country. If he had been recognized, the enemy would follow him. Therefore, Chumru might outwit them were he given a chance.

"Listen, good friend," he shouted, as they clattered up the hill. "Thou seest the tops of trees in front?"

"Yes, sahib."

"This, then, is my last order, and it must be obeyed. When we reach those trees we will bear off towards the palace. Pull up there and dismount. Give me the reins of your horse, and hide yourself quickly among the trees. I shall ride on, and you may be able to dodge into some ditch or nullah till it is dark. Rejoin those men from Gwalior if possible, and try to get away from the city. Tell the General-sahib what you have seen and that I sent you. Do you understand?"

"Huzoor!—"

"Silence! Wouldst thou have me fail in my duty? It is my parting wish, Chumru. There is no time for words. Do as I say, or we both die uselessly."

There was no answer. The Mohammedan's eyes blazed with the frenzy of a too complete comprehension of his master's intent. But now they were behind the trees, and Malcolm was already checking Nejdi. Chumru flung himself from the saddle and ran. Cowering amid some shrubs of dense foliage, he watched Malcolm dashing along the road to the Lahore Gate of the palace. A minute later the rebels thundered past, and they did not seem to notice that one of the two horses disappearing in the curved cutting that led to the drawbridge and side entrance of the gate was riderless.

Chumru ought to have taken immediate measures to secure his own safety. But he did nothing of the kind. He lay there, watching the hard-riding horsemen, and striving most desperately to do them all the harm that the worst sort of malign imprecations could effect. They, in turn, vanished in the sunken approach to the fortress, and the unhappy bearer was imagining the horrible fate that had befallen the master, whom he loved more than kith and kin, when he saw the same men suddenly reappear and gallop towards the Delhi Gate, which was situated at a considerable distance.

Something had happened to disappoint and annoy them—that much he could gather from their gestures and impassioned speech. Whatever it was, Malcolm-sahib apparently was not dead yet, and while there is life there is hope.

Chumru proceeded to disrobe. He kicked off his boots, untied his puttie, threw aside the frock-coat and breeches of a cavalry rissaldar, and stood up in the ordinary white clothing of a native servant.

"Shabash!" muttered he, as he unfastened the military badge in his turban. "There is nothing like a change of clothing to alter a man. Now I can follow my sahib and none be the wiser."

With that he walked coolly into the roadway and stepped out leisurely towards the Lahore Gate. But he found the massive door closed and the drawbridge raised, and a gruff voice bade him begone, as the gate would not be opened until the King's orders were received.

CHAPTER XVI.

In the Vortex

Malcolm was not one to throw his life away without an effort to save it. Once, during a visit to Delhi, Captain Douglas, the ill-fated commandant of the Palace Guards, had taken him to his quarters for tiffin. As it happened, the two entered by the Delhi Gate and walked through the gardens and corridors to Douglas's rooms, which were situated over the Lahore Gate. Thus he possessed a vague knowledge of the topography of the citadel, and his visit that morning had refreshed his memory to a slight extent. On that slender reed he based some hope of escape. In any event he prayed that his ruse might better Chumru's chances, and he promised himself a soldier's death if brought to bay inside the palace.

Crossing the drawbridge at a fast gallop, he saw a number of guards looking at him wonderingly. It occurred to him that the exciting events of the early hours might have led to orders being given on the question of admitting sepoys in large numbers. If that were so, he might gain time by a bit of sheer audacity. At any rate, there was no harm in trying. As he clattered through the gateway he shouted excitedly:

"Close and bar the door! None must be admitted without the King's special order!"

The spectacle of a well-mounted sepoy officer, blood-stained and travel-worn, who arrived in such desperate haste and was evidently pursued by a body of horse, so startled the attendants that they banged and bolted the great door without further ado.

Already the story was going the rounds that the precious life of Bahadur Shah had actually been threatened by the overbearing sepoys—what more likely than that this hard-riding officer was coming to apprise his majesty of a genuine plot, while the flying squadron in the rear was striving to ...

PLEASANT POINT

(Special to The Post)

The fine sunny weather, accompanied with occasional thunder showers, and rain is showing its effect, on the green fields of grain and hay. But it is also effecting other things. The river and lake are becoming very dangerous for wading and boating, which is attracting the people of the towns and cities back to their old haunts, where the beach will soon be inhabited once more.

Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Mitchell, and two children, of Omemee, and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Kennedy, of the Scotchline, spent Sunday at Riverview.

This peaceful and progressive community, the moral standing of which is rated AI, was the scene recently of a Sunday of a disgraceful mix up. The public is not concerned with private quarrels, but when men disturb the peace and violate the Sabbath day, and on the street in loud accents, make charges that if true make one a menace to the community, and if false, make the slander of public morals, then is the public affected and the county authorities should investigate.

After tea Powles and Zion nine played a game, Zion again winning the game was over, but Powles were chased to a certain grove by the ball game promised the local. Some lively balls a chase getting hours in. Dad broke I one, while others had to be satisfied with using his pancakes. That was a delicious supper.

Obituary

JOHN DONOVAN

The death took place in Peterboro last evening of Mr. J. Donovan, cousin of Mr. M. E. Tangney, of Lindsay. The deceased was a well known merchant in the Electric city and was well known by many Lindsay citizens, who will regret to hear of his demise.

HANNAH O'CONNELL.

The death took place yesterday of Hannah O'Connell, at the home of her son, John O'Canselt, south of Logieret. The funeral will leave the family residence tomorrow at 8.30 a.m., and proceed to the Roman Catholic church, where service will be held at 9 o'clock, and thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

MRS. JOHN HAM.

Death came with great suddenness to the home of Mr. John Ham, merchant of Coboconk, on Monday morning at 7.30 o'clock and claimed his beloved wife in her fifty-seventh year. The deceased lady had been in excellent health, and her untimely demise was therefore a great shock to her relatives and friends.

The late Mrs. Ham, whose maiden name was Matilda Brandon, was a cousin of Mr. J. Brandon, of Fenelon Falls. She is survived by her sorrowing husband, two boys and one girl, and two sisters and three brothers. She was a member of the Anglical church.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock from the family residence to Coboconk cemetery.

MR W. L. WHITE

It is with regret and the deepest sympathy for the family we chronicle the death of Mr. William Louis White, a former merchant, which occurred at his home on Russell street on Sunday, in his twenty-eight instant.

The deceased was born in the city of Quebec fifty-eight years ago. With his parents and other members of the family he became a resident of Lindsay in 1869, in which town he with his father conducted one of the most up to date and best boot and shoe business' in Midland district. Ten years ago failing health compelled Mr. White to retire from active life, and since that time he has vainly endeavored to renew his former healthy physical strength and vigor. In August eighteen hundred and eighty-eight, he married Miss Annie E. Duck, daughter of Patrick Duck, Esq., a highly respected land owner

The deceased was a cousin of the late Hon. Thomas White, a well known politician, and member of Sir John A. Macdona's cabinet, also Richard White, proprietor and editor of the Montreal Gazette

He was considered one of Lindsay's shrewdest business men, full of original ideas

He was a devoted member of Saint Mary's Roman Catholic Church, also a honored member of the CMBA.

He is survived by his wife and four children, one son Louis A., of Dundas and Flavelles Ltd, and three daughters Misses Edgeworth, Vivian and Hortense, his mother, two sisters, Mrs. Albert Duck, of Glenelg street, town; Mrs L. M. McHugh, of Omaha, Neb, and one brother, Samuel Alexander White, prominent manufacturer of oils and varnishes, Detroit, Michigan

Messages of condolence were wired from friends in Quebec and Detroit, who sympathize with the family in the bereavement. After mass on Monday Mass, which was celebrated by the Venerable Arvhdeacon Casey, the remains were conveyed to St. Mary's Cemetery for interment.

The members of the CMBA, and a large concourse of friends followed the remains to the grave

The pallbearers were Messrs T. Brady, B. J. Gough, P J Breen, J. Killen, A O'Loughlin, R F Spratt

PRESENTATION TO MR. ROBT. J. MENZIES BY STAFF OF D. & F. STORE LAST NIGHT

From Saturday's Post.

Last evening a very pleasant event took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Menzies, Albert-st, Dundas sub Flavelle's store, some when almost the entire staff of thirty in all, assembled to bid them farewell, before their departure for Saskatoon. The affair had been very quietly arranged, and Mr. Menzies was leaving the house when the surprise greeted him. After all had assembled, Miss Jessie McLean stepped forward, and read the following address, the presentation being made by Mr. E. C. Armstrong:

Mr. R. J. Menzies,

Dear Mr. Menzies:

We, your fellow employees of the firm of Dundas and Flavelle's Ltd., have learned with regret of your intention to sever your connection as one of our number. For twenty years, through all their various changes you have worked side by side with us, and your happy joyous manner, and general disposition has won for you a very warm spot in our hearts.

We regret your departure, but our best wishes go with you, and we know that in the great west where you intend making your future home, your untiring efforts will win for you success of the truest kind.

We ask you to accept this ornament from your fellows as a remembrance of your old fellow employees of Dundas and Flavelle's, Limited.

Grow old along with us,
The best is but to be,
The last of life for which the first was made.

Our times are in His hand,
Who saith, a whole I planned,
Youth shows but half;
Trust God, see all, nor be afraid.

Signed on behalf of your fellow employees.

Mr. Menzies made a very feeling reply in which he thanked those present, for the evidences of their esteem for him emphasized in the address and presentation. He would always look back with pleasure to his pleasant association with the staff of the D. & F. store.

Refreshments and ice cream were afterwards served.

Dr. F. Merchant Takes Important New Post.

COWLEY TO SUCCEED HIM

Several Educational Appointments Are Announced by Ontario Government—Chief Inspector of Schools Fills the Vacancy Left by Cowley and Dr. Waugh Moves Up to Fill the Vacancies.

Toronto, June 1.—A number of important educational appointments were announced by Sir James Whitney today. The first is the appointment of Dr. F. W. Merchant as director of industrial and technical education for the province. It is understood that the Government will, later on, allow Dr. Merchant to spend some months abroad with a view to his acquiring such other knowledge as he may require in his new position. As chief inspector of public and separate schools, Dr. Merchant is succeeded by Dr. Waugh, who is at present continuation school inspector. The growth of continuation schools, which last year numbered 139, has been so rapid that it demands a second inspector, for which provision has been made by Legislature last session. The Government has appointed Dr. John Seath, of the Ottawa Normal School staff, and formerly inspector of Ontario County, to succeed Mr. Cowley, and the additional inspector is Mr. Hall, of the Ottawa Normal school staff, for formerly inspector for North Simcoe, Dufferin County; F. M. Clement, Dutton, Lynn County; J. C. Duff, Markdale, Grey County; J. E. Smith, Kemptville, Norfolk County; W. E. Edwards, Newmarket, York County; and J. E. Wilkins, Norwood, Peterboro County, have been appointed teachers of agriculture in high schools.

ADRIFT ON LAKE.

Three Toronto Boys Spend Unhappy Time In Boat

Toronto, June 1.—After being tossed to and fro on little 14-foot dinghy on Lake Ontario, without food and with the guarded clothing for one day and two cold nights, G. E. Mackleim, aged 19, of 340 Indian road; Edward Flourp, 22 Brooklyn avenue, and W. G. Harvey of Roncesvalles avenue, were cast ashore yesterday morning very faintly. They had been blown when they lost no time in securing a good morning breakfast, and in jumping to Toronto relatives of their sale, but hardly realizing that the soil far from where they had set sail.

The adventure began at Toronto Monday afternoon about 4.30, and rowing out the western gap followed the course taken by the yacht Lily of Lake Ontario, the boys thought, they realize the peril they were in when they had proceeded about an hour after little craft against the stiff gale which had taken from the city lights by the time the real glow of the western sky had vanished.

Helplessly they tossed all night on the waves, living in the hope that some steamer would pass their way.

The night came, but no vessel appeared within hailing distance. The night again passed, but the warm morning light appeared the boys with some distant shore. Hope revived and the plucky youngsters manned a oar and put successful effort to reach safety.

TWO MEN KILLED.

M.C.R. Train Is Derailed Near Bridgetown.

Cantham, June 1.—Crushed and scalded to death beneath their engine, engineer Stephen Quinlin and Fireman Russell Oakes met a terrible death yesterday morning when a passenger train of the M.C.R. was derailed near Bridgetown.

Passenger train No. 9, New York to Chicago, in charge of Conductor George Mazr, due in Kidgetown at 6.32 a.m., was running a few minutes late. The Kidgetown home signal was set "Proceed." In an instant the locomotive, tender and four baggage cars were piled upon the ditch, with the engineer and fireman crushed beneath. None of the passengers were injured, high cousidering the wreck of such a few of the passengers being aroused by the shock.

At the distant signal the train came to a full stop, the train dispatcher, owing to the board being displayed at "caution." Farther on the engineer found the home protection signal displayed "proceed." Quinlin apparently had his train well under control, when he noticed more than sixteen miles per hour, which accounts for the absence of shock or damage to the passenger coaches.

St. Thomas, June 1.—"There is no question about it, it is a case of this newspaper," said Supt. Shearer of the M.C.R. last night, when asked as to his opinion of the cause of the wreck of the Chicago special. Mr. Shearer had been at the scene of the wreck all day, and made all possible investigation into the whole affair. The subpoenas were served off both ends of the rail and spikes pulled out from the rail removed and placed in the centre of the tracks, and, as far as we could see, no spikes had not been moved by the wrecking of the train. Mr. Shearer, He had not time in informing Crown Attorney Smith of Chatham and Inspector Rogers of the same place about the affair, and they responded by placing a provincial officer in charge of the case. M.C.R. Detective Heehan is also at work, but so far they have not found out the identity of the perpetrators of the crime. The company will conduct its private investigation, but will assist the authorities in ferreting out the criminals.

WILL REFUSE CHANGES.

Democrats Will Not Accept Amendments to Reciprocity

Washington, D.C., June 1.—Democratic leaders of the House of Representatives have notified President Taft they will not accept the proposed Senate amendments to the Canadian reciprocity agreement. The President was informed the Democrats they will stand by the reciprocity proposals, as it was passed by the House, it was adopted by the House.

The Democratic leaders of the House leaders means there will be a deadlock between the upper and lower branches of Congress, and that the extraordinary session will be prolonged until late in the fall. In the event of the reciprocity measure being amended by the Senate, it will be necessary to send it to a conference committee. The Democrat members of the conference will be men who stand out against the Senate amendments, definitely, or until the upper branch of Congress is forced to yield.

A canvass of the House has developed that the regular Republicans who voted for the reciprocity measure will join the Democrats in a united effort to force the adoption of the reciprocity proposition as negotiated, thus obviating any amendments on the part of the Canadian Parliament. President Taft, the Democrat leaders, feel, the obstacles in the way of his pet measure, is hopeful that the attitude of the House Democrats will have great influence in winning his cause against the Senate amendment.

Vote Next Wednesday.

Washington, June 1.—The Senate finance committee decided yesterday to report the reciprocity proposition bill on Wednesday. It had been planned to send use hearings last night, but additional witnesses will be heard on Monday.

BANK ATTACKED

Clerks Exchange Fusillads of Shots with Bandits

Danville, Que., June 1.—A daring attempt to rob the Danville branch of the Eastern Townships Bank was made yesterday hour yesterday morning by three masked men who had allowed to be part of a gang of ruggmen, who crossed the line from the United States some weeks ago. Shortly before nine o'clock two of the bank clerks, Thorbe and Greenfields, who were alone in the bank, were startled awakened by the sound of breaking glass. On examination of the rear entrance of the bank, the two clerks saw three men, closely masked, attempting to gain an entrance into the office.

Screening themselves behind the desks, Thorbe and Greenfields opened fire on the intruders with their automatic revolvers and for a time there was a fusilade of shots exchanged, the burglars returning the fire with alacrity as they retreated from the building. The sound of the shooting soon aroused the residents of the neighborhood, but by the time any appeared on the scene the ruffians had decamped in the direction of Richmond, leaving no trace of their identity

Chief McCaskill of the provincial detective department, was notified of the attempt early yesterday morning and despatched one of his men to Danville, in the afternoon to work in conjunction with the local authorities in the attempt to trace the gang.

Acting on information recently computed to him by Chief McCaskill, J. P. Knight, of the Canadian Bankers' Association, and warned bank managers throughout the province that a well-organized gang of safe robbers was believed to be in Canada, the this part of the country and advised officers of the necessity of the protection of branch banks at night. The advice of Mr. Knight was followed by the manager of the Eastern Townships at Danville, and two clerks were detailed to sleep on the premises. The unsuccessful attempt of yesterday morning shows the wisdom of the step.

PURIFIED HIS BLOOD

. Morse's Indian Root Pills Healed Mr. Wilson's Sores

When the sewers of the body—bowels, pores and skin ducts—get clogged up, blood quickly becomes impure and germs seres break out over the body. Way to heal them, as Mr. Richard Wilson, who lives near London, Out., did, is to purify the blood. He says:

For some time I had been in a low, pressed condition. My appetite left me and I began to suffer from sores on my legs. Quite a number of small sores on the knuckles formed all over my skin. I tried medicine for the blood and used a few kinds of ointments, but without satisfactory results. What was wanted was a thorough cleansing of the blood. I looked about in vain for some medicine that would accomplish this.

At last Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills came to my notice, and they are one of the most wonderful medicines I have ever known. My blood was purified in a very short time, sores healed up, my indigestion vanished. They always are a place in my home and are looked on as my family remedy.

The Morse's Indian Root Pills cleanse the system thoroughly. Sold by all dealers at 25c a box.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE

The Kaiser Has Honored the Members of a New Institute

Members of the new institute for the advancement of science, which was created by the Kaiser last October, have had a number of extraordinary honors showered upon them. Before the inauguration of the institute the Kaiser decreed to them a dark green uniform, heavily embroidered with gold and faced with purple velvet. They are now to have a medallion portrait of the Kaiser fastened in their breasts. But perhaps most remarkable ornament is that which the Kaiser has conferred upon the president of the institute, Dr. Harnack, the well-known Professor of Church History and Doctrine. This is a elaborate neck-chain, richly enamelled in remembrance of his leading a crusade against forgotten notes and female lands. Suspended from the chain is a sensible eagle of brilliant coloring and remarkable proportions, with the Kaiser surrounded by a laurel wreath. Dr. Harnack may safely say that the president of no other learned body in the world has a finer decoration.

An International Army May Be Used Against the Tribesmen

Paris, Mar. 7.—All of Morocco is in arms against the Sultan, Fez, the capital, and Tangier, are cut off from the outside world, and Europe is spreading against foreigners, and the international patrol party of French, German and Spanish troops may unite to put it down. Reports received from the American consul yesterday stated that the insurrection is spreading to all the tribes formerly friendly. The Sultan's troops are in retreat, and it is reported that 300 have been killed in several conflicts.

AMBASSADOR BRYCE COMING

Ottawa, Mar. 7.—It was announced to-day that Ambassador Bryce will arrive in Ottawa from Washington on Friday. He will be the guest of Earl Grey. FIRST AID

This little story comes from a very remote fishing village in Cornwall. There had been a wreck, all the crew were saved; but one man was brought ashore unconscious.

The curate was present on the beach, and he asked if he could do anything.

"We do you usually proceed in the case of one apparently drowned?"

WAKELYS

How to Treat Skin Troudles

Greasy Ointments of No Use The Trouble Must be Cured Through the Blood

It is not a good thing for people with a tendency to have pimples and a blotchy complexion to smear themselves with greasy ointments and such things. In fact they couldn't do anything worse, because the trouble does not lie in the skin, making the complaint worse. When there is an irritating rash a soothing or bland wash may help to allay the pain or itching, but, of course, it doesn't cure. Skin complaints arise from an impure condition of the blood and will not get well until the blood is purified. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured many cases of eczema and skin eruptions because they make new, rich blood that drives out the impurities, which are the cause and separate cause of health. Mrs. S. L. Brunton, Brandon, Man., says: "I suffer for years with eczema, which was brought with it other troubles such as a poor appetite, headaches and nervous and dizzy spells. I was unable to put it down. Reports appeared from the American papers to-day stated that the insurrection is spreading to all the tribes formerly friendly. The Sultan's troops are in retreat, and it is reported that 300 have been killed in several conflicts.

MOUJIK WEDDING FEAST

Peasants Give Themselves Up to the Enjoyments of the Occasion

When the day's work is done the Russian moujik's recreations are of the simplest. Perhaps he dances, or plays a concertina, or sings some melancholy air. But when a wedding has to be celebrated, and the priest has united the couple, the peasants give themselves up to the enjoyments of the occasion.

The writer well remembers peeping into the brightly-lit room of a two-roomed log-cabin where such a wedding was in progress. The evening was a cold one, so one room, as small that only four couples could with elbow room dance, was used in progress. The perspiring couples had to be quite close together to enjoy themselves. There was a kind of determined rush through back of their faces, and evidently they had great difficulty in keeping to the order in Chambers' Journal's. In the same room, ranged along the sides of the walls, were onlookers waiting till a young should drop out to take their place in the dance.

The second apartment was laid out with refreshments. A side-table groaned with all kinds of dishes dear to the peasant palate, the knife, serviette napkin, one fork, did service for every two guests, and even these were three sides, and picked up here a cucumber, there a cold medlar, or there at a hard sausage.

One old man was pointed out as the stalloonmaster of a tiny wayside station. He was a great favourite, being better groomed and less savage than his companions, the fellows, and once heard afterwards that the cause of the trouble at a wedding feast made him forget on that evening his duty as stalloonmaster. A freight train waits and there for a signal at danger, flag vodka and dancing at the wedding—the train proceeds. The driver reports all the next morning.

Result: Two months afterwards the stalloonmaster, for neglect of duty in his capacity of signalman, is degraded to a charge at a smaller station.

A NEW SPRING NOVELTY

Now we have straw and chiffon moiffs. They are decidedly chic and pretty, but most American women are too practical to carry a muff for anything but protection from cold. This is not the case, however, with the French woman; she dresses for effect, but if one of these new novelties adds to the beauty of her toilette, she would not be without one.

A fetching model is black and white straw, with plaited brim and a bouquet of pink chiffon on each side. A huge pink rose rests artistically on top.

Other summer muffs are fashioned of loops of ribbon, giving the effect of immense flowers.

TALE OF A SPARROW

An Incident in Which Ellis, the Hangman, Figured

A ragged little urchin was torturing a young sparrow at the corner of Elizabeth and Elm streets the other morning. He had a string tied around its leg and was pulling it along the road.

A man walking down the street saw the poor bird painfully fluttering in its efforts to escape. He approached the child. Placing his hand on its head, he said:—

"Now, sonny, don't you know that it is only heathen people that torture anything. You should be kind to everyone and they will be kind to you.

The kindness of his voice reassured the urchin, and taking a handful of piece from his pocket he gave it to the boy saying: "Now, give me the bird and promise not to do such a cruel act again."

The boy willingly did so, and the man climbed a neighboring porch and placed the little sparrow so that it was beyond capture by any boys throwing stones. Then he left the whistling merrily.

That man was Arthur Ellis, the official executioner for the Dominion of Canada, spoken of more familiarly as "the hangman."

Collegians Won Saturday's Game

The Collegiate Institute baseball team added another win to its string of victories on Saturday, when it took the Peterboro C. I. outfit into camp to the tune of 17—7.

The game was pulled off in the Agricultural Park before a large crowd made up principally of L. C.I. students, who kept things lively by their school cries, and their words of encouragement to the players.—

The game could not be called a first class exhibition. The locals did not play up to concert form, and dish up the quantity of ball, they are capable of serving On the other hand the visitors were well up in organization, and the game in consequence was a listless one; but at times, some good ball was served.

Williamson was on the mound for the locals, and save for one innings, when the visitors scored six runs, and the visitors pretty well at his mercy. He has all the earmarks of a coming twirler. Ryley did the receiving and handled himself with credit.

The visitors had a southpaw twirler, and the locals connected with his benders atewill. He had a slow delivery, which was taken advantage of by the winners, who romped around the bases like young colts. Charley Ray, the star intermediate hockey player, covered third for the visitors.

Dick Butler umpired the game to the satisfaction of both teams.

The teams were:

Lindsay L. C. I., Williamson p. Ryley, c. Hopkins 1st. b. H. Brown 2b. Shields s.s.; Anderson 3b; Dougan c.f.; Naylor r.f; Keenan l.f.

KEEP A-GOING!

KEEP WELL DRESSED!

IF women did not have a clear notion of what clothes really mean, I hate to think what men would look like nowadays. In the beginning nearly every youth tries to look his best for the sake of some member of the opposite sex. After he is married his tendency is to revert to type. It is a pretty hard struggle for some women to keep their husbands well dressed, even when money isn't the most serious factor.

Don't get sloppy! Don't have your wife nagging you to get some decent clothes. You can't afford to. Bother? It's no bother if you say to us--

"You've got to dress me and keep me well dressed." You say the word, we'll do the rest because we've got the proper style and quality of clothing for your needs, at prices from

CALL ON FIRE BRIGADE

To The Editor:

Dear Sir, owing to the fact that our council have not taken the question to heart of putting our police force on a permanent footing, I would suggest to our citizens that as large, to avail themselves of our fire alarm system, for which they pay Thus is, there being so many undesirable characters around and in case of assault, housebreaking, drunks, etc., they could turn in a fire alarm, and that would cause the fire team to come, and it would be sure to come quicker than the police. Now several of our firemen being constabs, arrests could be made and the fire team used to draw them to the lock-up. So citizens and taxpayers, avail yourself of the best you have, which is the fire alarm system.

Yours truly,
BROCK-ST. CITIZEN.

A DESCRIPTION OF CORONETS

Many of These Used at the Edward Coronation is Styled Will be Worn in June

"Numbers of persons," declared a London jeweler and glycremuth, "invariably contrive to be conspicuous at a great gaid, and studded with priceless gems.

"Well, the fact is we often supply jewels or glycremuts with beautifully enabel light-weight diamond tiaras for gilt for less than twenty pounds. A pearl coronet may cost this sum a hat; but those for peeresses are half the size. Peeresses, thus having plenty of room on their heads—happily for us—wear tiaras as well as coronets. In this way:

"The tiara, high in front, sloping down each side, is placed well forward on the noble brow. With hair bunched on top of the head, puffed out at the sides, the coronet rests on top of the hair, behind the tiara. Plenty of room, there will be at the last moment, of course, altering tiaras for the Coronation, so that they may be worn in this way, for many of them are of the tall variety.

"Most of the coronets donned in June next will be those used for the Coronation. I estimate that two hundred new coronets will be made, ranging in price at an average of £40 apiece—$194.66 in U. S. money.

"One never told me the precise of his coronet for the 1902 ceremony. It was a jordeyn in gilt-edged, crammed. To make room, odds and ends were cleared away. Somehow, he encountered his coronet. The butler, fairly staggered, said he had been pushing it into one odd corner and another for years past. It had come across the other part of the old house.

"The new gorgeous Coronation item, though that is uncertain, will be one of the greatest mental triumphs pallium, or royal mantle of the Kings of England, ever clothed in gilt. Where the 'Field of it in history?—woven from front end to back end, and as pure as will stand the strain of being so used, almost without seam.

"There are very few skilled weavers capable of making cloth of gold. It is exceedingly slow work, and as each thread of material is formed, it is carefully wrapped up, so that it shall retain its glorious hue. Gold is pure, yet, absolutely unspoiled cloth of gold looks more like a blaze of brilliant sunshine than anything you ever saw.

"Many of the State robes will have Indian embroidery—gold and silver thread on silk.

"An ounce of the pure metal is drawn out into a thread half a mile in length for the embroiderers to use. The paid embroiderers, chiefly the ones paid, have learned from childhood, making it up as their trade. The Kings and Queens have their own, which are alike, and one robe can always be used for a queen, saving much, which helps saves marking. The work is usually done in India, but for the Coronation some of the most expert craftsmen of Delhi, where the Durbar robes are being brought over here.

"Lining, crimson velvet, with ermine. Westminster Abbey will be ablaze, and a pure white robe about 20 yards in length bought by the piece. A piece measures about forty yards, and though the velvet is quite plain, without any pattern, it actually takes four months to make.

"British-spun pure silk lining are used, and the ermine is the finest, genuine—really almost purple—velvet lining, which costs about £60 a piece, eight shillings a yard.

"Some of the coronets themselves are not exactly pure gold jewels, one may say, and another the little bill cops on.

To the Editor—Saturday has been proclaimed a public holiday. The writer understands that several of our merchants are trying to remain open on this date.

700 MILES OF FENCE

C.P.R. Will Use 5,000 Miles of Wire in Prairie Provinces

Over 5,000 miles of wire will be used by the Canadian Pacific in the work of building new fences along their lines in the prairie provinces.

This quantity of wire will build 700 miles of fence, which is the amount suggested for the work of the year. The fences are seven strands high, the wire used being the class without barbs.

Some of the old fences will be replaced, but for the most part the wire will be used in the construction of fences where there are none at the present time.

The work of building is done by contract; the company supply the posts, the contractors supplying the wire and doing the work. This latter will be done by one of the local companies.

BABIES TEARS TURNED TO SMILES

The well baby is the happy baby—always cooing, gurgling and smiling. It is only the sickly baby that is cross, fretful and cries. The smile or the tears indicate baby's state of health. Mothers if you want your babies to smile—the smile of good health and freedom from pain—give him Baby's Own Tablets. They never fail to turn the tear into a smile. Guarantee them Mrs. Jas. Hutcheson, Marysville Ont., Writes—"Your Baby's Own Tablets have been a great comfort to me while baby was teething. He was cross and fretful, but as soon as I began giving him the Tablets the effect was wonderful. He became a good natured baby right away and is now fat, fair and healthy. MAN KILLED BY TRAIN IN CALIFORNIA SAID TO BE RESIDENT OF LINDSAY

Acting Postmaster Palen has receiv ed the following communication concerning the death on Malcom McArthur in California.

To the Postmaster, at Lindsay Ontario, Canada.

Dear Sir.—

On the eleventh of this month I a man was run over and killed near Clipper Gap in this county, by a freight train on the Southern Pacific railroad. I found in his pocket a Post Office Receipt dated, March 26, 1910, at the Vina Ranch, Tehama County, California. The tax receipt was issued by J. McArthur, and on the back of the receipt was written, (I presume in his own hand writing) the following: My name is Malcom McArthur, My home is in Lindsay, Ont. Canada, (and then there is something written which is so blurred that I cannot make out,) and my name is McArthur, Lindsay, Ont. Canada."

I had the Undertakers, Messers, Walsh and Meener wire to Archie, hgt received the reply that Mac had left there. So I thought I would write you these few lines, and you may hand this to some news paper man of your city, and let him publish it as a new item. Perhaps some of his relations will see it and thereby know what has become of Joe McArthur. That is the name he went by at the Vina Ranch.

I wrote to the Superintendent of the ranch, and he said his name on their books was J. McArthur, and he worked for them for several months but that was all they knew about him.

Yours Respectfully,
J. G. Bistee Coroner

Will Open Eight Model Schools

It has been decided by the Educational Department that the eight new model schools of the province are to be located at Athens, Bracebridge, Chatham, Clinton, Guelph, Morrisburg, Napanee and Perth.

The six model schools which survived the establishment of the Faculty of Education at the universities a few years ago and the increase in Normal schools were those at Cornwall, Durham, Kingston, Orillia, Renfrew and Tottth Bay. These with the eight new schools make up a provincial model school system of 14 schools well distributed throughout the Province.

All the model schools will re-open on September 5th for the school season 1911-1912.

"PUBLIC" TO "MODEL."

The News was informed at the Department of Education this morning that the establishment of the new schools meant simply the conversion of one public school in each town or city into a model school. The principals and staffs of the various schools will remain unchanged for the present at least.

CARE OF CLOTHES

Teach Children to Look After Their Clothing Properly

Many a woman who is an expert in the cleaning of paint, and who has taught her children correct table manners, has neglected to teach them to care for their clothes properly, and, indeed, many women do not seem to understand that process.

How many throw their clothes down on a chair when they take them of for night? True, they may fold them, but the neatly folded garments laid on top of each other on the back of a chair become creased, and are not properly aired.

When the garments which have been worn were in the body they are necessarily absorbed the moisture from the pores are removed, they should be hung where there is a circulation of air, that they may be properly dried and aired.

Hang up the garments, letting them get thoroughly dry and aired before putting them away in the cupboards or the drawers.

When one gives the matter a moment thought it will readily be seen how untidy and insanitary it is to throw the clothes in an unaired heap during the night, and putting them on again in the morning.

Another bit of advice in regard to the care of the clothes is to remove any grease-spots immediately on taking off the goes.

Rub it at once with some French chalk, powdered chalk on the soiled spot lightly, and letting the garment lay overnight in the chalk then shake it off the next day.

Magnesia may be used instead of the chalk; but whichever you select, remember that the best way to treat a white garment is to rub it with chalk or magnesia when you take it off, fold it in blue tissue paper, and lay it away in the big box or drawer that you want to wear it, then shake out the chalk. You will be surprised to know how long a white blouse may be worn without sending it to the cleaner if you treat it in this way.

TO ARRANGE SCHEDULE

National Lacrosse Union Will Meet in Toronto

The N.L.U. schedule meeting will be held in Toronto on Saturday, April 15th, at the Prince George Hotel. The adoption of the schedule will provide for 16 games. The season will commence on May 24th, with both the Toronto and the Tecumseh playing away from home. The revised rules will also be considered at the meeting for consideration. A demand for a share of the gate receipts on a 40 and 40 per cent basis, has been made by the Ottawa and Cornwall clubs, but this idea does not seem to meet with much favor from the other clubs in the Union.

Prayed While She Burned to Death

Hamilton, May 28—As a result of religious dementia, Miss Janet Weir, who lived with her parents on Burton St., about a mile east of the Cockey club, on Saturday afternoon set fire to her clothing with suicidal intent, and before assistance could reach her she burned to death. For some time Miss Weir has been subject to mental aberrations caused by religious meditations, and on Saturday her father noticed her acting in a peculiar manner. He spoke to her and received the assurance that she was all right. Shortly afterwards she ran into the back yard a mass of flames. Dr. E. F. Glendenning, who was called found the girl dead when he arrived. Coroner Dickison was notified and had the body removed to Blachford's undertaking parlors, where he viewed the remains on Saturday night. His investigations disclosed that the dead woman had committed suicide. Miss Weir was 25 years old. Her father is a market gardener, and an elder in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

GRAND TRUNK TO SPEND MILLIONS

Orillia Packet—Mr. W. G. Brownlee, Manager of the Transportation Department of the Grand Trunk Railway, stated last week that the G.T.R. will spend several millions of dollars on improvements in Ontario this summer. Among the important undertakings of the railway will be the construction of a round-house at Midland. Mr. Brownlee observed that the railways have been interested in its undertakings by the scarcity of labor. "The Canadian Pacific is employing many men building its line from Victoria Harbor," he asserted, "and this is making it harder for us to secure men. They seem more plentiful in the cities, but when taken on outside work they stay with their jobs in many cases for only a few days, when they get some money and quit."

Net Pass Summer

It is rumored that the C.P.R. will not get busy in operation with the Bobcaygeon to Toronto through Coboung, Port Hope and lake front towns this summer. Location work of right of way is to commence shortly, we understand. Meanwhile there will be considerable speculation all along the line as to where property will be hurt, or required to benefited by the C. P. R. new line.—Port Hope Guide.

They Took The Hint

During the past week or so, two drunken characters from Peterboro, have been roaming around the town and vicinity. On Saturday they were met on the road near Reaboro by an enjoinment agent who knew them of old. In answer to a query they stated that they were making for Peterboro as the Lindsay police were making it hot for tramps and such like.

Remembered by Firm

Mr. R. J. Menzies, who severed his connection with the D. & F. firm on Saturday, was the recipient, from the members of the firm, of a tangible recognition of his services.

Appointed Agent

Mr. James Gillooly, jr., has been appointed local agent for the Continental Fire Insurance Co. of New York. The Company made a good selection in making that gentleman who is one of the veterans in the fire insurance business in this district.

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Higher, Chicago Exchange Closed—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, May 31—One more day remained of the May wheat option, and it was to appear that they will have cornered it, as the bull leaders show no disposition to change their attitude. The position has thrown the Chicago market out of line, and other commercial centres are of smaller flour from the interior and Pacific Coast, and the demand for cash wheat is so pronounced at present. Theoretics of May are fictitious or compared with cash wheat was always the rule for 2 and number 2 hard selling the to the usual May. It is a technical, but not a legitimate, situation. The shorts have to pay the bulls for the privilege of being allowed to take the cash grain on track, and to put it into stores in time to make his delivery on May wheat. A rake of June wheat was made here Monday at 8c, or 1ge over May, and by under the May. This was in line with the cash wheat in the Northwest, and the June is the only option between May and June at this time, and the year is something strikingly unusual and not experienced before. Chicago Board of trade was closed to-day, Decoration Day.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, May 30.—There was some more business in Manitoba spring wheat from foreign buyers, but as the prices did were not quoted, the trade in the states was made. The demand for oats from European buyers was quite satisfactory, but prices did were just flat with the market for the Canadian grain, and the demand for Canadian feed oats passed by oats at firm prices. There was an improved enquiry for Manitoba buyers for spring wheat flour, but, owing to the uncertainty in wheat, we understand an advance of 40 per sack on the prices told. CANADIANS DINED

Lord Strathcona Presides at Distinguished Gathering.

MUST LINK UP COLONIES

Premier Ward of New Zealand Urges a Better System of Communication Between His Country and Canada —Union of Dominions Would Mean Solidity to the Empire—Laurier Replies to Toast.

London, June 1.—There was an exceptionally large gathering at the Canadian Club dinner here last night. Lord Strathcona presided, and among those who gave Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. L. P. Brodeur, Sir Joseph Ward (Premier of New Zealand), the Right Hon. Lord Selborne (Secretary for the Colonies), Hon. Richard Jones, Premier of Newfoundland, Hon. W. L. Bowser (British Columbia), Hon. Rodmond Walker, K.C., Deobarats, Col. Sam Hughes, Dr. J. A. Macdonald, Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Sir Donald Mann, Hon. Walter Scott, Hon. Frank Oliver, Hon. Charles Marcil, A. L. Sifton (Premier of Alberta) and Charles Murphy, K.C., M.P. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, responding to the toast of "The Dominion," said it was a large analogy on Lord Strathcona. Returning to the growth of Canada, he said the population of Canada was really only discovered within the last generation. Canada was a constellation in the western sky, a land of the future. Canada was linked up with the British institutions which Canada appreciated at their value. The toast of "Canada," concluded Sir Wilfrid, ought to be the toast of the first of the twentieth century, a gem in the British crown.

Sir Joseph Ward, Premier of New Zealand, said he was congratulated on the halfway post across the Pacific between New Zealand and the British Kingdom, and he was sure fully that in future years there would be much more commercial intercourse, more Australia and New Zealand. He hoped that the ties between the three countries and the United Kingdom would be closer. He had spent twenty-one days of London and without any delay, he was sure, would draw the people of these countries closer together, so that every part of all parts of the Empire to be one in reality.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier had already responded to the toast steamship service across the Pacific, continued Sir Joseph Ward, and now Britain should link up the Empire by way across the Atlantic.

He was the great galaxy of countries under the British Crown," concluded Sir Wilfrid, "and I have no under-current directed to the bringing about of a practical union of Canada and the different part of the Empire, and so the whole Empire irresistible."

Sir Edmund Walker said the great Dominion of Canada was the work of the immigrants of various nationalities part of the British people. "Probably for a thousand years," continued Sir Edmund, "Canada will have to look to Britain for the money for further development."

WAGE RELENTLESS WAR ON WORMS CRUSH OUT THE CATERPILLAR PEST

Neither the people, perhaps, not the town authorities, realize to what an extent the tent caterpillar pest is upon us. Richard Hill, if he were in Lindsay now, would have plenty of subjects to justify his wail—"Let's talk of graves and worms and epitaphs." We have the worms by millions.

Two gentlemen coming down town to-day at one o'clock saw fifty street maples, with from one to three large clusters of tent caterpillars bunched on the trunks. These worms were evidently taking their siests after a dinner on leaves. These clumps were seen on at least fifty trees, and the clusters of worms must have contained thousands if not tens of thousands of caterpillars.

It is probable that similar clusters of worms would be found all through the town.

A good way is to crush the worm clusters with the closely worn stump of a broom or fold three or four ply newspapers over the cluster and have some one hold it and crush the worms underneath the paper, the cleanest and neatest way.

Some persons have been knowns to load breach-loader shells with gunpowder only, and holding the muzzle of the gun close to the worms, blow them out of existence. Morning and evening the worms cluster on some part of a tree altogether, and this is a good time to destroy them.

Whatever is found best, relentless war must be waged upon the worms. They are about us everywhere on nearly every tree, and will be found if we look at the right time. Whatever way is found best, the worms must be destroyed, both for the comfort of the citizens and looking ahead to next year. If we leave a million alive this spring that means at least you million next year. Let everybody recall the devastating pest of caterpillars a few years ago, and if most strenuous efforts a destruction are not made, next year or the year after will be as bad.

Smash or spray with Paris green solution, or do anything that will end the life of a caterpillar. By so doing you kill you next year for each one. The street trees seem to be particularly infested this year, and it therefore becomes the duty of the town to declare war at once on the caterpillar pest, and every citizen should co-operate.

Deported Elopers.

Brockville, June 1.—The services of the Canadian immigration officers were brought into effect this morning in connection with the visit of two women from Syracuse, N.Y., Mrs. Webb and Miss Lena Silkey, both had eighteen. On Saturday, they suddenly left Syracuse in company with a man, supposed to be Albany, Ont. The trio put up at a hotel in Brockville, and yesterday when Mr. Webb, accompanied by his father-in-law, J. A. Kaetz, arrived here in search of the elopers, the women were found at a private residence. Mrs. Webb and the companion duly refused to return. The aid of the immigration inspector were enlisted and the women were placed aboard the ferry steamer and sent back to the other side as undesirables. Foley has left for parts unknown.

POINTS TO CHINESE ARMY.

Novoe Vremya Warns Countrymen Against Danger.

St. Petersburg, June 1.—In a leading article yesterday The Novoe Vremya points warningly to the Chinese armament in Manchuria, which, it says, is a matter of the greatest vigilance on the part of Russia.

The paper declares that 6,500 European trained troops are being quartered in the towns and villages within a three days' march of Harbin, and that auxiliary troops are being maintained in the same area; that 9,000 so-called rural guards have been drilled along the Chinese Eastern Railway, and that four divisions of regular troops have been stationed at the various strategical points in the province.

Russia, The Novoe Vremya says, can place in opposition to this force only the feeble ranks of the railroad police, which now are scarcely able to cope even with Chinese bandits.

The newspaper reminds people of "beginners in diplomacy," referring to Premier Stolypin, who, since Foreign Minister Sazonoff's illness, has taken over the actual charge of the Foreign Ministry. Russia for decades, the paper says, has carried out and enforced a foreign event in full armor, and as a consequence her unprepareedness and irresolution are exemplified by the recent episode with Turkey.

BAD FIRE AT CURTIN'S BRICKYARD
GOOD WORK DONE BY WILLING HELPERS

Last evening, shortly before eleven o'clock, a brilliant reflection was noticed on the sky about two miles east of the town, and on enquiry was found to be at Frank Curtin's brick yard, at Pottery Corners.

The fire was noticed by some men come home from town to the railway construction camp, who gave the alarm and went to the scene of the conflagration, and rendered very valuable assistance in saving the property. There has burned the carbin and boiler house, and the building in which the brick press was located. The loss will be considerable and was not covered by insurance. It is hoped, however, to have the plant in operation again in two weeks, and Mr. Curtin will also be able to take care of his trade in the meantime.

ROBT. J. MENZIES LEAVING LINDSAY
GOES TO SASKATOON ON MONDAY

From Friday's Post.

Lindsay is losing another well known and popular citizen in the person of Mr. R. J. Menzies, who has resigned his position with Dundas and Flavelle's and will leave Monday for Saskatoon, where he will accept a splendid position in the R. B. Irvine and Co. Lumber and coal office in that city.

"Bob" will be much missed by his many friends in town and district, but all will join in wishing him every success in the flourishing city of Saskatoon.

Mr. Menzies is a veteran in the dry goods business, and has been in the employ of the D. & F. for for some twenty years, and which is in itself a splendid tribute to his worth and ability. He is probably the oldest employee of the firm.

Bob started at the dry goods business in his teens. He entered the employ of the late J. Thompson in Petrboro and afterwards went to Rochester, where he filled an important position. In 1885, "Bob" journeyed to Winnipeg, and remained there for a short time, and finally came back to Lindsay, where he became identified as clerk with the firm of Dundas and Co. during which time, he managed, with great success, the local opera house. Afterwards he entered the employ of Dundas and Flavelle's when they conducted the single store, and has seen the business of the firm grow to the grand position it occupies today.

Mr. Menzies is an enthusiast curler, a member of the C.O.O.F. and A.O.U.W. He is an adjutant officer, of clean leg timate sport, and was secretary, and the motive power behind the famous Lindsay Wild Birds for several seasons, at a time when they won the Midland League Championship, and brought fame and glory to the town. In fact, Mr. Menzies has been identified with baseball for twenty years.

Messrs Norman and Harry Menzies, sons of Mr. Robt. Menzies at present occupy responsible positions with the firm of Dundas and Co.

Mrs. Menzies will remain in Lindsay for some time.

SUPT. IRWIN GIVEN A SEND OFF
BY C. N. R. STAFF AT SASKATOON

Saskatoon Capital: A large number of the C.N.R. staff gathered in the superintendent's office in the for the patrol leaders and corporals the purpose of showing Mr. Irwin their appreciation of his unwinning courage in the interests of the company which they all served, and also the esteem in which he was held by every member of the staff of this division. After everyone was present Mr. Irwin was informed that as there was no chair which they could ask him to stand was paid for the music. They then told him stand on the floor. Mr. A. J. Hughes then read the address which was as follows:

John Irwin, Esq.—The staff of the Canadian Northern Railway in this city whose names are subscribed hereto, desire to voice their appreciation of the manner in which you have conducted the affairs of the company here, and of your cheerfulness of manner and attention to duty, by which you have endeared yourself to us, and to ask that you accept for yourself and Mrs. Irwin this little gift upon the eve of your departure. While we regret your departure, yet we feel that it is a move in the right direction, and we hope that your uprightness of character, your ability, and your unselfishness will stand for you in the new district, the great esteem and regard with which you have been held here.

It was then presented with a traveling companion.

Mr. Irwin though considerably surprised, was soon able to find his voice, and made an appropriate reply, thanking the staff on behalf of himself and Mrs. Irwin, and concluding said that he would always have a warm place in his heart for the staff at Saskatoon.

Mr. Irwin leaves for his new division today at Dauphin, and his position here will be filled by Mr. Fisher.

Omemee Secures A New Armory

Omemee is to have a new armory. The Militia Department at Ottawa has announced that a class D armory of cement and brick will be built in the village on the sight of the old frame drill shed.

It is now a settled policy with the Militia Department to build armories where companies are stationed in order to keep them up to their full strength.

No Holiday On Saturday

Saturday, June 3rd, the King's Birthday, has been proclaimed a legal holiday throughout the Dominion of Canada. In some centres an effort is made to observe the day by suspending business in the stores and factories, while in the majority of places the occasion will be observed by the banks and law courts.

Lindsay merchants, it is understood, will keep open on Saturday.

A petition was circulated this morning among the merchants in favor of keeping open shop, and it was signed by practically every businessman.

PRESENTED WITH CASE OF PIPES

On Saturday, Mr. R. J. Menzies, who left today for Saskatoon, was the recipient of a case of pipes from the Lindsay Curling Club. Mr. George McFadden and Mr. T. Tiffany, waited on Mr. Menzies in the R. B. Lodge Room, and made the presentation on behalf of the club. Mr. Menzies made a graceful acknowledgement.

OILING STREETS IN PETERBORO

Visitors from Lindsay to Peterboro yesterday had an opportunity of seeing the effects of oil on the streets Peterboro has experimented with oil this year and the results are highly satisfactory. In conversation with several business men, on the matter, they stated that dust nuisance had been practically eliminated. Of course, a slight oil from the oil was quite perceptible, but it was far from being disagreeable.

On Simcoe-st a quantity of tarvia had been laid, and this promises to be a success.

VAGRANT GETS A SIX MONTHS' TERM

A six months' term in the Central Prison was handed out this morning by Police Magistrate Jackson, to a worthless character who has been wandering the streets of Lindsay for over a fortnight. It is to be hoped this punishment will be the means of deriving the other bums from our borders.

The prisoner this morning, who gave his name as Brodey, was a big six-footer. He visited a house on Russell-st west yesterday and frightened the housewife by his insolence. He evinced no desire to leave, but the presence of a visitor soon forced him to make tracks. Brodey exercised little judgment, when he thought he could get more at a spending office. He held up the stenographer in the Post for cash but of course he got none.

The six months will do him good and the magistrate is deserving of the thanks of the citizens for meting out the punishment.

Another character named, Simpson alias Burke, who was classed as a vagrant, was remanded until Thursday, when a charge of theft will be preferred against him.

Here's Another Monster Egg

Lindsay hens seem to be vying with each other to see which can produce the largest hen fruit. Some worthy examples have already this particular time of fruit ready been noted but the latest, was an egg laid by a Rhode Island Red, belonging to Mr. Coquargood, Adelaide street. The egg in question measured 8½ by 6½ inches in circumference. An egg that would mean a very respectable meal in itself.

DIED AT THE BREAKFAST TABLE

Peterboro, Ont., May 24.—Mrs. T. H. G. Denne, wife of ex-Mayor Denne, died suddenly this morning about 9.20 at Maplehurst, the family residence.

She was sitting at breakfast with her two daughters when she was seized with an attack of heart affection, and died almost instantly. She was a daughter of Mr. J. I. Davidson.

STABBING AFFRAY IN EAST WARD
AFFAIR SURROUNDED IN MYSTERY

A mysterious stabbing affray took place in the East Ward this morning as the result of which Leslie Gobeen was severely stabbed in the right arm with a knife or stiletto.

It appears that Gobeen accompanied by two companions named Lynch and Abercrombie, were on their way home, about two o'clock this morning. According to a story told by one of the party, shouts were heard in a yard by the swing bridge. The trio proceeded to investigate and claim they found a woman and a number of Italians. The woman on being questioned, said she was anxious to get away from her companions. An altercation followed in which a piece of counting figured prominently, and it is claimed that Gobeen was left to fight it out. The result was that he was severely stabbed three times in the arm. A local physician was visited and the wounds were dressed.

IS THE CATERPILLAR PEST WITH US?
EXAMINE YOUR TREES FOR NESTS

Unless our citizens take prompt action, there promises to be a repetition of the caterpillar plague, which swept this province some years ago.

A citizen, who was out west of the town in the neighborhood of Bryson's school house, states that there are millions of the pests on the trees and shrubbery, and unless steps are taken to exterminate them, a great deal of damage will result. Many were destroyed yesterday, when their nests were burned.

A visitor to Peterboro yesterday, states that the caterpillars have made their appearance there in good numbers. The citizens, however have taken the bull by the horns and a warrant issued by the Examiner of that city, and are combatting the pest with vigorous measures.

The critters have also made their appearance here in different parts of the town, and unless prompt action is taken, the result will prove disastrous.

SESSION OF BEEKEEPERS' ASSOCIATION
MR. JAS. STORER RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT

Ex Victoria Day, the annual meeting of the Victoria County Beekeepers' Association was held in the Public Library with about thirty delegates present. The president, Mr. James Storer, presided. The session was a most enthusiastic one and the discussions on information in selling honey and other questions pertaining to apiculture elicited valuable information for those present.

Interesting addresses were delivered by Mr. James Armstrong, of Cheapside, acknowledged authority on apiculture, and Mr. Johnston, of Canandaigua.

A cigarette box was also one of the important features of the session. During the day the election of officers took place and resulted as follows:

President—Jas. Storer, Lindsay.

Vice President—Mr. Whitcside, of Little Britain.

Sec-Treas.—Mr. Webster, of Glandorf.

The resignation of Mr. A. H. Noble, as secretary of the county Association was received with regret, as that gentleman has filled the position with credit for eight years.

The Victoria County Bee Keepers Association is affiliated with the Ontario Beekeeper's Association and this and similar associations in the province, are handled by the Government, similarly to the Farmers' Institutes.

HOLIDAY BLAZE DAMAGED RESIDENCE

Yesterday morn ng about 11.20 the fire brigade was called out to put out a fire which had begun on the roof of Mr. Thos. Carew's on Adelaide-st. It was thought that a spark from the chimney started the blaze. Fortunately a strong west wind at once spread over the whole roof. Rockets and water pails were brought into service until the brigade arrived, but on account of the fire being largely beneath the roof it could not be very well reached with water. When the firemen arrived, however, it was soon brought under control. The loss is not very great, but the roof is practically a wreck.

TWO WOMEN'S LIVES

Two babes were born in the salt-same town,
On two very same bright day,
They laughed and cried in their mother's arms,
In the very self-same way.
And both were pure and innocent,
As falling flakes of snow,
But one of them lived in the terraced house,
And one in the street below.

Two children played in the self-same town,
And the children both were fair,
But one had curls brushed smooth and curled,
The other had tangled hair.
The children both grew up apace,
As other children grow,
But one of them lived in a terraced house,
And one in the street below.

Two maidens wrought in the self-same town,
And one was wedded and loved,
The other saw through the curtain's page,
The world where her sister moved.
And one was smiling a happy bride,
The other tears were and woe,
For one of them lived in the terraced house,
And one in the street below.

Two women lay dead in the self-same town,
And one had tender care;
The other was left to die alone,
On her pallet all thin and bare.
For one had many to mourn her loss,
For the other few tears would flow
For one of them lived in the terraced house,
And one in the street below.

If Jesus, who died for the rich and poor,
In wondrous holy love,
Took both the sisters in his arms,
And carried them above,
Then all the differences vanished quite,
For in Heaven none would know,
Which of them lived in the terraced house,
And which in the street below.

Central Prison For Stealing Boots

Last Friday John Kelly took the liberty of removing a pair of boots from the J. J. Walsh shoe store. He pleaded guilty in Police Court this morning, and as he could not remember where he put the boots in question, he was handed out a four month's sentence in Central Prison.

Another pair of boots was stolen from the Fisher shoe store. The accused party in this case will face the charge next Thursday. The boots have been returned.

JAMES GILLOGLY CAUGHT IN STORM

Minden Echo—Mr. James Gillogly, of Lindsay, was out here on business and got caught in Tuesday's hail storm. Although a good teamster, he was unable to keep his horse from making every effort to leave the place as quickly went wild, and Mr. Gillogly pulled until the bridle parted. Almost immediately he discovered a new way of getting out of the buggy, which was going nicely. He did not make such rapid progress after that but succeeded in reaching Mr. Graham's, where he was given a shelter in time of storm. He carries many marks but we trust he may be fully recovered before this 12th of July.

Sunday's Storm Demolishes Barns

Among other damage, the barns belonging to Mr. Kelly Mitchell were completely demolished. Fortunately no not touch our village but residents here was the disturbance in the north taking the form of a spiral column, of a brownish nature.

TIME TO CHASE THE MUSCA NOW

Have you seen Musca today? Did you kill them? If not, and his progeny are treated with the same respect, you are responsible for many thousands of his family in Lindsay this summer before September.

Musca in his primitive form is a disgusting little object; but when he grows, he is exceedingly with his eleven thousand, nine hundred and ninety-nine brothers and sisters, and contains and carries germs in about a period of rotten stable manure, or in a little greater quantity of house refuse until he reaches the condition of a small black insect not unlike a diminutive beetle, then he develops wings, and leaving himself with the souvenirs of his hitherto happy home he goes forth to see the world. A tomato outside a street attracts his attention, and after carefully wining his feet on it and leaving a few of the souvenirs he collected in the previous house, he finds the decaying part, and collects enough from it to carry to his next stopping place. Being fond of children he alights on a baby's face and the baby's feeding bottle and has a wash and brush up in the drop of milk just oozing from the bottle. Another nipple all ready to be put in baby's mouth a few minutes later. Then he goes to see how his brothers are getting on, and brings them all back to a nice joint of meat he has noticed exposed in a butcher's shop. They have been joined on the way by some matrons of the family who find in the meat a nice place to lay a few hundred eggs, and then on they go to a sugar basin, impartial distributing their souvenirs of disease and death. Once the sugar is in the milk or coffee, perhaps they investigate the jam a little too closely just before Johnny has it for supper. They are not at all shy and if Johny fell down and eat his hand they want to know all about it and wherever there is a hand to be seen which is beginning to fester.

There is no greater danger to human life than Musca, there he goes, Typhoid fever and all intestinal diseases are known to be carried and propagated by it, yet what are the citizens doing to get rid of it.

Five cents worth of permagamate of potash will make sufficient disinfectant to kill all the flies around the average dwelling house. It should be diluted according to instructions, and then plentifully sprinkled everywhere where flies may be feeding. Afterwards the refuse should be destroyed either burning it or burying it deep down in the ground. This will not give the flies any further opportunity to place their eggs.

Much can be done by the individual in directing public opinion. If for one week every housewife when she visits into astore was to tell the storekeeper she would not purchase any more from him unless he covered all his vegetables, meat and other food from the flies, there is not the shadow of doubt but that she would not only have more satisfactory service for her self but would be the means of saving score family, perhaps her own, from sickness, even death. The destruction of the fly in town's work and economy work is exactly along lines of prevention. Flies cannot live without food and the food they most need is garbage. It matters not whether the garbage is the steaming manure heaps or basin in the corner of the sink, or the food left on plates needing cleaning up after, and the sanitary open tubs in which house refuse is kept. Garbage is the food upon which it lives and the breeding place in which it lays its eggs.

WEST'S GREAT WORK

On Buffalo Alleys Was Surprise to Bowlers at the Big Tournaty—Money on Him

On Canadian night at the Buffalo bowling tournay, 14 teams from Toronto, Hamilton and Montreal were on the alleys, the grandstand back of their section was filled with friends, the Union Jack fluttering solidly whenever a good score was made.

One of the big surprises of the tournament was the showing of Gilbert in his match game with Joe West, of London, Ontario. This match for $100 a side, and there was a world of other money wagered, the Canadian back in much from it to the limit. It was a beautiful match, but only eight games were necessary, West rolling a phenomenal game of games averaging with 267, the best score of the tourney.

LASSOED THE LAWYER

The Daring Act of a Woman Found Guilty of Murder

After sentence of twenty years' hard labor had been passed on an elderly woman for killing her husband, an unprecedented scene was witnessed in the Court House at Aylesbury. The Woman had so conducted herself during the trial that the sympathy of her jurors was with her, and when she tightened it he was pulled to the floor. Had not several of his colleagues and the gendarmes in the hall hastened to the rescue, the prisoner man would have been strangled outright. As for the excited and too zealous widow, a tremendous struggle ensued before she could be rescued.

SURPRISE

A BAD OLD KING AND HIS DAUGHTERS WILL CONTROL ALL COMPANIES

Once upon a time there was a king who had three very beautiful daughters.

Their names were Hekla, Thekla, and Sarabella, and they had the most beautiful heads of hair.

Hekla was very fair, with pale-blue eyes; Hekla's hair was like burnished gold. Thekla was brunette, with very deep, deep blue, like the summer sea, and her hair was a beautiful raven black. Sarabella was of being lovely if you are shut up all day in a dirty little attic, and your hair was like fine gold.

One a week the King used to play a little game which pleased his wicked heart very much. He would call his Princesses, made them put on close veils, and then he would go on talking but their eyes, and then led them out into the world to see.

Trumpets were blown, and a proclamation made that any Royal Prince who wished to marry one of the beautiful Princesses was to look at them with window and then come and ask the old King.

Hundreds of young men—handsome and ugly, clever and dull, grave and gay—came to look at them, for the time of the beautiful princess has always had plenty of the third.

When they saw the three pairs of eyes looking out at them, they hurriedly in favy with themselves, whose eyes were, of course, the prettiest, the cleverest, and then they hastened to see the old King.

"Which of the three you have made your choice, sir?" he would say.

"Sarabella, sir, if you please."

"And why always answered.

"Because I saw a child on the right as she sat at the window.

"Very well," the King would say, "I will give you the Princess Sarabella, if you choose her prince. And remember, my dear, if a second, with a wicked eye, 'If you choose wrong you shall never go back to your mother.'"

So he led the astonished Princess into another room, where her Prince was in a row with Hekla and Thekla, and only their wonderful hair to be seen, and it was generally agreed that the lovers pointed to HER a good choice.

Those deep blue eyes could only go with their fair, golden hair.

Or sometimes they said:

"Thekla, sir, if you please." Thekla could only belong to the maiden who had the black hair.

"But no one thought that red-haired Sarabella could be a match for the raven-haired.

Then the old King would laugh a scornful laugh and press a little button and the poor young Prince disappeared through a trapdoor into the dungeon below, and never seen back to his mother.

But one day there came a Prince to whom Sarabella was nothing, and he was an artistic eye.

He looked at them in a row by the window in their little white caps, and he squinted up his artistic eye, and he said to himself:

"She ought to have red hair, that maiden with eyes like the summer sea."

So he went to the bad old King, and braved the danger of the dungeon, and he came to the room where one of the long-haired maidens, he marched straight up to Sarabella and said:

"Only red hair like this could go with blue eyes."

Samantha rose and turned to him, and he was so astonished by her wonderful beauty that he could not speak.

The old King was very angry because his favorite game was taken from him, now that a Prince had chosen rightly. He stamped with his foot, and behold! the trapdoor opened and in he fell, and was never seen any more.

Then Samantha and the Prince were married, and lived happily ever after, and red hair became the fashion in that part of the world.

"Did you find what caused the motor accident?"

"Not exactly; but when we lifted the machine and cleared away the debris we found that a woman was at the bottom of it."

Important Extension of the Power Vested in the Hydro-Electric Commission

The request of Sir Henry Pellatt that the McNaught Municipal Power bill be withdrawn will not be granted, but there will be some modification however in the first draft. The jurisdiction of the Commission will cover all the power and electric light companies in the province. The authority given to the Commission last session to supervise the plant, equipment and operation of all companies will now be extended to the erection of poles, stringing of wires, and laying of conduits. This will make the Commission the electric commission just as the Railway Commission is a railway commission. Just as the Railway Commission adjudicates all disputes between railways and between railways and their customers, the Hydro-Electric Commission will be the court to which all disputes between electric companies will be referred, and also the direction of which they will carry on their business. In addition to the powers given in the bill, Mr. McNaught said that the Commission will act as a court of arbitration in the experience in Toronto, it was first had to consider the question of fixing municipal and private plants by the case in Brantford, where the city was injured by defective municipal power, so that the town had to pay very heavy damages. The clause last year in the bill was found to be imperfect, so it these clauses were added that a power could be made the Commission's power defaults. While in such matters the orders of the board are final, the question of damages will be settled by another board. Mr. Pellatt said that to a certain extent the Commission was a partner in municipal power in Toronto, and there should not decide what the municipalities or the companies were to adopt under its orders. Under the bill in its new form the question of damages will be settled by a board of arbitration under the Railway Act. In such instance, if the Commission orders that a power shall be installed, the municipal plant are to be strung on an existing company's poles. Mr. Pellatt said that he was the company will be allowed to take to a board of arbitration the question of how much the municipality should pay for that privilege.

BURGLARS' MESSAGES

Scotland Yard Detectives Never Solved a Certain One

It is a fact not generally known that professional "croaks" frequently use cyphers of their own invention, in order to communicate with other confederates. Quite a number of these have appeared in the "Black Museum" at Scotland Yard, and all of them have been decipherable enough.

This solitary exception, which has baffled all the experts, was found on a burglar named Macdonald, who was sentenced some time back at the Old Bailey to twenty years penal servitude for the attempted murder of Detective-Inspector Hooper and other officers by shooting at them with a revolver while he was being taken in a four-wheeled cab to Dutch Station Custody.

The Fleetwood Office, the Secret Service, and the Home Office, have all in turn tried their hands at it, but without success. Yet it is known to be a genuine cryptogram, and not a mere meaningless jumble of letters and figures.

Its construction must be very clever, because many of those who have deciphered are of exceedingly intricate construction. One took six weeks to unravel. It was worth the trouble, however, for it revealed the clue to the kidnapping of $13,000 worth of stolen jewellery.

AN ACTIVE LIFE

Sketch of the Career of the Late Archbishop McEvay

The late Archbishop McEvay was born in Lindsay in 1842. In that city he received his early education, completing his classical studies at St. Michael's College and the University of Toronto. He then took a post graduate course in theology in the Grand Seminary, Montreal, after which he was ordained at Trenton by Archbishop Lynch in 1865, at the age of twenty-six. As a priest his first duties were at Kingston, but he was soon transferred to the Diocese of Peterboro, and given charge of the missions of Bobcaygeon, Galway and Fenelon Falls. From this time on his progress in the Church was exceptionally rapid. His clear insight and business ability, together with his religious zeal and profound learning, carving out for him a speedy and distinguished career.

In 1887 he was appointed as rector of St. Peter's Cathedral, Peterboro, where he was at once entrusted with the management of the affairs, the purchase of property for the future benefit and the acquisition of a number of houses for parochial use, all of which enterprises he brought to a most successful issue.

From Peterboro the venerable Archbishop was transferred to Hamilton, where, in addition to his duties as rector, he was made secretary to the Bishop. In 1889 he was made Vicar-General of Hamilton, undertaking the administration of the diocese.

From this time he was singled out for Papal notice, for he was appointed private chamberlain to his Holiness Pope Leo XIII. Shortly after this appointment followed upon the resignor he was advanced to his first episcopal honors, as coadjutor Bishop of London, in which position he remained for over eight years.

On April 13, 1908, the Pope's signature was subscribed to the Bull which conferred upon the Bishop the highest sacred position which Ontario could offer a Roman Catholic—that which confirmed his appointment to the Archiepiscopal Chair, and on June 17 of the same year he was officially installed in the Archbishopric.

THE GREAT PEACE RIVER

Potentialities of the Far Northwest—A Comparison Made With Siberian Progress

One hundred million acres of agricultural land, practically free of, if capable of bearing No. 1 hard wheat, are awaiting settlers in the Mackenzie River watershed, so Mr. J. K. Cornwall, M.P.P., of the Peace River district of Alberta, told the members of the Toronto Canadian Club. The farmer would be subjected to no frost the year as Manitoba was, but at Fort Vermilion, 700 miles north of the boundary, the farmers averaged at the present time three crops out of five.

The greatest unfished fresh water lakes in the world were there, teeming with fish of the highest commercial value—whitefish, herring, Spruce and poplar trees were very plentiful, and the forests of the country were good for a million horsepower. "What the country wants," said Mr. Cornwall, "is men, money, and transportation."

The speaker made an interesting comparison between the Peace River Valley district and the Province of Tobolsk, in Siberia. Tobolsk, he said, was in a similar position, had a population of 1,454,700, grew twelve million bushels of wheat per year, and exported twenty million pounds of butter. The speaker said that Tobolsk city stood 100 miles farther north than Fort Vermilion, 700 miles north of the boundary, the farmers averaged at the present time three crops out of five.

Mr. Cornwall described how he happened to go to Siberia to the Peace River. "I went home on wheat in Canada, and wheat in Siberia, and I found a good many people in Canada who knew as little about Siberia as they knew about Edmonton." He address a story of Siberian pioneer life, and said that "we are all seeking citizens up there."

GUIDE BOOK OF TRENT VALLEY CANAL WILL PROVE BOON TO BOAT OWNERS

The Peterboro Examiner has in course of publication, a book that should have a wide circulation throughout this district. For some years past there has been a demand from owners of gasoline yachts, canoeists and others for a set of charts showing the navigation channel along the various lakes that constitute the Trent Canal. Up until the present time there has been nothing of any kind published, and the need of such information is keenly felt. The book now in course of publication by the Examiner, contains a set of charts that will prove to be a great boon to the owners of gasoline launches, yachts, and others who may desire to make the trip over the canal.

The forthcoming Trent Canal Guide book will contain more than merely a set of charts of the lakes. The history of the Trent Canal, from the time Champlain passed over the route in the year 1615, down until the present is most interestingly told. The hydraulic locks on the canal, are dealt with at length and other phases of the Canal touched upon are—A summary of the first survey of the Canal by R. H. Bated, C. E., more than seventy years ago; An account of the construction work in progress, between Rice Lake and Trenton; The wonderful power development on the Trent Canal; the amount of power developed at each dam in feet; The distances from point to point from Trenton to Georgian Bay are given; The book will contain many interesting views of all points along the Canal. It is 8x10 in. in size, and is being neatly gotten up and substantially bound.

The idea of compiling a book of this kind was promoted by the hundreds of enquiries made of the Superintendent of the Canal during the past few years, for information about the canal generally. There is every reason to believe the Trent Canal Guide book will be enthusiastically received.

FORTUNES CAME WITH THE IDEAS

Inventions That Have Been Worth Millions to the Men Who Owned Them

The report that an invention for making well was recently sold to an American syndicate for no less than $5,000,000 once again illustrates the remarkable value of good ideas in the way of new commodities in the commercial world. We cannot, of course, think out this material and laborious process which are going to bring us in a comfortable, but we can keep our eyes open for useful inventions which, although they may not at the moment seem important, may prove little gold-mines; for the world stand not so much in need of some enormous fortunes have been made from little things.

Simple toys, puzzles, and games, have often proved most attractive to put thousands of dollars into the pocket of the inventor. One man, who invented the tin trifle for bables to suck, made a quarter of a million money, while the man who thought out the idea of the toothpick, which consisted of an ordinary vulcan or wooden ball to which was attached a long chain of odd pattern, to the extent of $50,000 per annum. The thing he had in mind was a toothpick which enabled its inventor to live in the best of style and practically all his life, while the once popular toy known as "Hoopla Jack" is said to have yielded its patentee an annual income of upwards of $20,000.

Inventor of Roller Skates

It is not so many years ago that everyone indulged in the use of boots from the lowest hole to the top. There was much trouble in lightening or easing of the laces into the most of the boots, and the idea of a new lace-boot is provided. The inventor of the boot-lace, it is said, sold the patent outright for the sum of $250 and the amount of the royalty to have made $1,250,000 out of the idea.

John Harvey Kellogg invented the cornflake he made $2,500,000, and Mr. Plimpton, the inventor of the roller-skate, made a fortune out of his idea. Probably our readers will remember the rush for the roller-skates some years ago, when in the course of one Christmas we inspired that the inventor of the metal roller-skate for attaching to boots and heels of shoes from wear sold 1,000,000 pairs in 1876, and in 1887 the number reached a total of 142,000,000, with a corresponding profit of $1,500,000 for the year.

Baby Rewarded

But the inventor does not always reap such magnificent rewards for his pains. Take the case of Mr. Z. Longridge, the famous engineer who invented the wire-rope gun, for instance. Longridge invented the gun in 1856, and did all in his power to place it before the authorities, but they would have none of it for 20 years. Thirty years afterwards, however, the Ordnance Department at Woolwich, subjected one of the guns to extensive tests, and so satisfactory were the results that they declared that nothing could equal it for heavy ordnance purposes, and it was ordered to be made for a broken heart before the end was attained.

In all the world's history, however, there is no more striking instance of ingratitude and forgetfulness than the case of Henry Cort, a native of Gosport. He expended the whole of his private fortune of $100,000 in perfecting his inventions for puddling iron and for rolling bars and plates. Then he was robbed of the fruits of his toil by the chicanery of certain government officials, and in the end left a pauper. He was at last, in fact, and given constant employment to about 600,000 workmen for the past four generations.

WONDERFUL CAT'S BIG DAILY SWIM

A Deptford Feline that Crosses the River Thames Every Day—A Remarkable Feat

A cat that swims across the Thames River every evening and swims back early next morning is certainly in the nature of a novelty, but the people of Deptford claim that they possess such an animal. The trip to which such remarkable feats are attributed belongs to the ferryboatman who used to transport the hands of the shipyards of Messrs. Robt. Thompson on the Southwick side and Messrs. Lewis on the Deptford side. This man had up to about a fortnight ago formed a small boat across the river, and on his return found a little cat, which had apparently discovered "pastures new" in Southwick, accompanied him in his boat each evening, and returned by the ferry on the next morning. On some times, however, the cat would travel so far in the boat and tired to be free will would leap overboard and finish the journey with a beautiful paw-over-paw stroke.

On the occasion of the ferry arrival the boatman thought that the cat would check its roving disposition and remain on its own side of the river, but evidently poser found that the rule and rule on a Saturday night was not to be compared with those at Southwick, for early last night with a beautifully graceful jump it takes the surface and swims across the river, regarding first thing next morning with a wonderment and self-satisfied smirk.

But Deptford is not the only place on the Thames that can boast of a clever cat. Hampton Court, one of the most popular bathing men on the river, has yet all his troubles attributed to Strawberry Vale, between Twickenham and Teddington, which is a little marvel. In the summer it may frequently happen that on his bow of a boat gazing into the water. All at once it will make a dive into the water, and, swift as lightning, bring to the surface a minnow, which it proceeds to devour with evident satisfaction. Minnow has had little rest from the days of its kitchenhood, and believes it is the cleverest cat on the Thames.

MURDERED A COUNT

An Accused Married Couple Say the Countess Lured Them

The Sanitini Cardinian Countess Zolo Delitala has been arrested at Sassari, Italy, on the charge of having murdered in a lonely spot in the outlying village of Dolcinna. Some months later the police got a clue to married couple, named Normal, and with those up in the country prisons on the charge of having assassinated the Count. They are now said to admit the crime, but allege that their services were lured by the countess. Her pretty 15-year-old daughter, it is said, was used as a lure to attract some military officer. Her father, the Count Delitala, was reluctant to allow her to join the match. The countess, however, persuaded that this marriage would end the girl's unfortunate prospects, determined to arrange for the noble man's death.

RAILWAY RUMOR

C.P.R. May Secure Downtown Entrance to London

C.P.R. engineers are preparing a route which will give that road an entrance into the downtown section of the city of London, Ont. At present the company's station and freight sheds are in the north end. To secure a downtown station the company has plans to build from Pottersburg to the city, and connect with The Pere Marquette, which has running rights into the Grand Trunk station. This move it is said corresponds to the recent purchases from Detroit, to the effect that the Canadian Pacific Railway has obtained control of the Pere Marquette. All the big factories are in the south end of the city in the district in which the Canadian Pacific Railway spur is proposed.

FIFTY AEROPLANES

The French Government Will Train One Hundred Airmen and Establish Flying Schools

With regard to Mr. Holdane's recent statement that the aeroplane for army purposes is settlin in the experimental stage, it is worthy of note that the French government regards the aeroplane in its present form as so efficiently practical to warrant the downright purchase of some fifty machines, by training of about 100 airmen, and the establishment of flying schools at Issyles at Versailles, Rheims, Chalons-sur-Marne, and Pau. On Monday last, the French Army possessed 140 aeroplanes, exclusive of the Farman, Henri Farman, Maurice Farman, Bregouet, Wright, Antoinette and Sommer Wright training machines, purchased from Henri Farman, and one Kocchlin, although no official figures are available of France's naval strength in the air, it is certain that there are not fewer than 100 Army airmen, either accomplished pilots or in training, while there are now half a dozen naval officers learning to fly at the Government's expense. The French Government is resolved to continue its experiments along lines of practical use, and who have not yet awakened to the value of the aeroplane in France, as in modern warfare will doubtless be thoroughly roused if the results of the next French grand army manoeuvres. The French War Office has offered a constructor's prize of $10,000 the year. Every month orders from the various European armies, with the exception of the British, are received by French aeroplane constructors in Paris.

BRAVE OLD MAN OF EIGHTY-TWO

General Booth Has Both Eyes Bandaged and Awaits an Operation

With unshaken courage, such as the leader of an army should display, General Booth has been preparing calmly and manfully for the blindness which it is feared must overtake him unless tabe wonderful operation to be performed in the autumn is successful.

General Booth has lost the sight of one eye owing to cataracts, but he speak of dust blown into it during one of his many motor-car tours. The other is so enfeebled that he can hardly see. He can write, using his fingers as a guide, but he cannot see what he has written. In the autumn surgeons will attempt the delicate task of clearing away the obscuring lenses of the cataracts, after which, if the accomplished General Booth will return home again to the "war," which he is now winning from the rear of the fighting line. But if it be not, General Booth will be blind. So every day this brave old man of eighty-two has had both his eyes bandaged round, and that he has walked about his home, familiarizing himself with the feel of objects which one day he will be unable to see. He still received his despatches from the "front," and discussed the direction of the Salvation Army with commissioners whose words could have fallen from him when he could not see. If darkness falls completely, the brave old leader has determined that it shall find him fighting still. If he cannot see with his eyes, he will see with his fingers.

SERGT. RUSSEL HENLEY'S FIRST LETTER AS MEMBER OF CORONATION CONTINGENT

A letter has been received from Sergt. Russel Henley, of the Post staff who is a member of the Canadian Military contingent for the coronation of King George. The letter says:

Levis P. Q. May 24th.

Arrived at the camp, O. K. and this is the first time I have been down to the city since we got here. The trip down was fine. He stayed about an hour and a half in Peterboro and got to Belleville about 11.15 in the afternoon. Had dinner in Peterboro and supper in Belleville. The 15th Regt. in Belleville, held a reception in their armory that night and met the train, inviting us their to spend the evening. We had games, music and refreshments and had a fine evening, till 12.30 o'clock. Then they drove us all to the station in cabs (about fifteen of us) and a special train came in from Toronto, leaving Belleville 12.30 The special train took on men at Kingston, Belleville, Brockville, Cornwall and Montreal. Mitchell and I were together in one berth and slept until eight o' clock. The train was just pulling into Montreal and we were given an hour there for break fast. I went across the Y. M. C. A. and had breakfast. We left Montreal about nine o'clock and got to Quebec about 2.30. We went through Quebec and to St. Joseph, which is about two miles from Point Levis. You take a ferry at Point Levis to cross the river to Quebec. Our camp is on the top of a big hill, and you can get a fine view of Quebec and the Plains of Abraham, across the river. We are about half a mile from Montmorency Falls, and they are certainly a pretty sight. Our camp is a pretty good one, but the meals are not much as yet. For supper last night we had a slice of dry bread and a cup of tea. For breakfast we had porridge and stew we usually get at Kingston. There are six men to a tent, each man with eight blankets, plate, knife, and fork white enamel cup and a large rubber sheet. There are four companies, each one with about eighty men.

I am in "B" company, Sergt. Legg of Toronto, is our drill instructor and he certainly makes us work. We get up at 5.30 and have physical culture exercises until 6.30, starting at 6. We just go out in our shirt sleeves and come in to breakfast wide awake all right. Then we have parade at 8.30 till 10 and rest till 10.30, then drill again till twelve. We go out at two and drill until four. The evening we have to ourselves. A guard is put on and every man has to be in by ten o'clock, and no passes are issued either.

There is a lot of cows pasturing on the camp grounds, and we milked one this morning in a wash basin and had a pretty full of fresh milk. I am in a tent with Prestige and Mitchell and three regulars from London. They are all a jolly bunch. We were in bed last night at 9.30, but came down to the city to-night. I haven't looked around much, as yet, but am not much struck with what I have seen. Everybody speaks French and the streets are about as wide as an ordinary kitchen and hardly any pavement. The "Royal George", is a big liner; came in to-day, and we could see her coming down the river from the camp. She is a monster, and the old Ottawa boat Lindsay would look like a coo coo beside her. Good Bye for the present,

Yours, etc.

QUACK DOCTOR SKINNED A CAT

Laid Its Body on the Chest of a Patient—Arrest of a Sorceress in France

Many people of the workingclass in town and country still have preferences to quack doctors, and if these persons profess to have some acquaintance with the occult sciences this confidence is strengthened rather than diminished. In connection with the death of a young man who died after a short illness, a woman who went in for bone-setting, and who, moreover, had recourse to empiric devices, has just been arrested in the Lyons district, France. When at the eleventh hour, the doctor was called in, he diagnosed pneumonia, but he saw that his services could be of no avail, as the case was already too far advanced.

The young man had been a patient of the so-called sorceress, who had laid the body of a cat, which she skinned while it was alive, on his chest, with strict injunctions that it should be kept there as a sovereign remedy. Sometimes she used pigeons, rabbits, and even squirrels for the same purpose. She had a special liking for squirrels, but in this particular instance the cat was employed, as it was less expensive.

Although she is in custody it is difficult to get evidence against this woman, as the peasants are reluctant to give anything away on account of the wonderful reputation that she enjoys among them as an expert in the healing art. Her prestige in these parts had been greatly enhanced by the fact that she has never missed an opportunity of proclaiming that some time ago she cured the wife of a physician in practice in one of the chief towns in France, of a dreadful disease, and that the lady's husband, out of gratitude, had initiated her into the secret of dealing effectively with every manner of disease. This story, of course, is pure fabrication, but the ignorant peasants believe it.

INFLUENCE OF JEWS

They Wish to be Admitted to the Official Ranks of the German Army

The question of the admission of Jews to the grade of officer in the German army is becoming a more heated one every year, now that Jews of civil rank and wealth are daily increasing in number and influence. As a rule no Jew can become an officer, and consequently cannot return to civil life with the social privileges which the title of "reserve officer" confers. The Minister of War disclaims all intention of partiensship in favor of any one race or confession, but he says the other officers won't have it, and, according to German army traditions, it is for them to decide. The Minister says that there is an anti-Semitic spirit abroad among the officers and that this is natural as reflecting an anti-Semitic feeling among the population at large. It will, therefore, one may conclude, be a long time yet before the Jewish officer is found in the German army.

A PET MOOSE

Wanders About New Brunswick and Visits Barnyards

A pet moose is said to be wandering in the neighborhood of Plaster Rock, N.B., and making the lives of dogs a misery to them. It has killed one dog. During the close season, three moose, a bull, a cow and a calf, wandered around Plaster Rock for days and were using their salt boxes. When the open season came on the bull and cow left for the wilds, but the calf remained and visited various farmyards. The abundance and variety of food evidently suited the calf, and having a multitude of one of its spikahorns it is easily identified. The farmers have become quite used to it and are taking measures to secure its protection from any hunter who wishes for fresh meat without going to the woods in search of the game.

MATRIMONIAL HOAX

Would-be Husbands and Wives in a Paris Cafe Who All Wore White Roses

A well-planned hoax had an amusing result at a Paris cafe. A few days ago two advertisements appeared in the newspapers. One of them was purported to be from a rich woman who was looking for a young husband who need not necessarily have any money, the other from a rich man who was looking for a young wife. In this case also the sex was not of little moment to have means of her own.

Answers to these advertisements came in by hundreds. Both had been written by the same person. To each one of them a reply was sent, asking the man or woman, as the case might be, to meet the "adventurer" at the cafe. It was also requested of each man and woman that a white rose should be worn for identification purposes.

Having made these plans, the adventurer had gone to the cafe and saying that three was to be a big demonstration of Hooligans at a certain cafe. Thirty detectives were accordingly on the scene.

Soon large numbers of young men and young women began to assemble at the cafe. At first the police saw that each one rose was regarded as a coincidence. It soon became evident that they were the victims of a hoax, and the Hooligans, unfortunately followed by hearty laughter, the crowd dispersed.

MAKING READY THE PROCESSION

A Buckingham Palace Official Tells How the Coronation Is Being Rehearsed

I was recently privileged to have a chat with one of the officials at Buckingham Palace who have charge of the preparations and arrangements for the coming coronation processions, says an Answers man.

I found them all busy, watching the training of horses, directing the movements of drivers and grooms, superintending the cleaning and scrubbing of carriages and harness. And in the great riding-school attached to the Royal stables there were the school eleven rehearsal being put through their paces, and taught how to treat all sorts of noises and sights with the disdain and contempt becoming such superior creatures.

"Yes" said the gallant captain at the head of the department, "we start early, in order to have all ready for the auspicious day. As you see, we have to get the fine and nervous horses accustomed to the shouting of crowds and the roar of cannon.

"And when do you begin to go over the route and to rehearse the actual procession?"

"Not before June itself comes," said the superintendent of these arrangements. "We shall probably go over all the seven miles, especially the longer one to be taken the day after the Coronation, for it is imperatively necessary that both horses and men are especially the latter—shall be acquainted with every detail of it.

"The police help us greatly, and we point out to them the different places likely to need particular care. Needless to say, we are always most cautious to take note of such, and to work in unison with the civil and military authorities in these things. For the safety, comfort, and ease of their Majesties must be the very first and last consideration all the time to us who are responsible for them.

"It must be a dreadfully tiring business, sitting upright, bowing incessantly, and turning one's head perpetually, for one seven or eight miles at a stretch?" ventured the Answers man.

"I can assure you that it is indeed," replied the captain. "No one can guess what it means for creating fatigue and stiffness except those who have been through it. So we try to mitigate it for the King and Queen as much as possible by having special cushions, seating arrangements on special principle, too intricate to explain here."

"And the carriages?"

"Well, some fourteen. I take it, will be required for the procession of the Abbey on state land. Their Majesties will most probably use the grand, old, gilded Cinderella coach on that day, drawn by the creams. Yes, we've eleven creams, but, of course, only eight will pull the coach. Then there are magnificent horses will also go in the procession. On the following day, in the procession through the City, I do not think the gilded coach will be used, but the state landaus, specially upholstered and fitted.

And, all being well, everything will be ready at the appointed time. The great B. P. will have a very performance worth the seeing, worth coming miles to witness, worthy of the Empire."

FENELON FALLS

(Special to The Post)

A juvenile baseball match took place at the agricultural grounds in this place on Saturday, the 27th inst, between the Boy Scouts, of Bobcaygeon and a picked team of local boys.

The game was always interesting, and at times very exciting, the attract boys had the score 5–0 in their favor at one innings, but the plucky boys came to business and at the end of the ninth the score was 8–8.

Another innings was played with the either team breaking the tie, then the locals got two in the eleventh and won out 10–8.

Selby and Hamilton were much in the limelight for the visitors, while Wilson and Kelly did the stellar work for the Fenelon boys.

Mr. Chas. Herriott spent a few days in Toronto last week.

The first At Home of the season given by the Agreenlle Trambs was held on Friday evening, at the Kawartha. It goes without saying the affair was a success, as the Trambs were never known to fail in any of their undertakings, and this one proved no exception to the rule. A large number of visitors were present from Lindsay, Sturgeon Point, Bobcaygeon, Coboconk, and other places, besides a number from town numbering about 120 altogether.

Dancing was enjoyed by many, the music being excellent, and was furnished by Mrs. Jackson, of Lindsay, be an ideal spot for the enjoyment say. The broad verandah proved to of dalliance

Progressive euchre also found favour with many who did not wish to dance.

The patronesses were Mesdames Thos. Sadler, H. M. Mason, F. N. Rutherford, S. J. Sims, J. H. Bradley and W. Bishop.

The members of the society were indefatigable in their efforts to make the occasion an enjoyable one for every one present. Dainty refreshments were served at the conclusion of the first part of the programme, which was about eleven o'clock.

On Victoria Day, Messrs Langfeldde Green in the absence of their lawful owners, decided to liven up the town by having a runaway team coming from the north at 4.30 p.m. on a waggon load of butter tokens for the factory, and also several cases of wet goods for a local brewery, part of the load slipped, and some of the boxes fell, giving the horses a start which broke off at a lively pace across the bridge. When near the east pill, they turned suddenly, throwing the driver, Joe Lamothe, and the two other boys, Arthur Robson and Chas Conley. Fortunately none of the boys were seriously hurt, tho they received quite a shaking up.

Most of the load, which was an unusually large one, butter-tubs numbering about 100, was also thrown off, and several bottles in the case of the wet goods were broken.

A pane of glass in the print mill was also splintered, and altogether it was the most exciting event of the hour in that locality. The horses were stopped at the town leading to the butter factory, and luckily no further damage resulted.

IMPERIAL NAVIGATION LAWS DESIRED BY PREMIER FISHER

London, June 6.—According to the delayed report of the conference of Premiers, proceedings at the Imperial Conference Premier Fisher moved that it was advisable in the interest of the United Kingdom and the dominions that efforts be made to divert manufacturers goods and shipping be supported as far as practicable. He pointed out that other countries assisted their shipping as a competition with other shipping, both by subsidies and protective tariffs, with the national exchequer.

Hon. Sir Joseph Ward, Australian Minister of Defence, and that the principal difficulty was in regard to certain treaties which were in the main with treaties which were made by the small countries. It was contemplated to assist British legislation passed to encourage shipping in the only way open to them, the United Kingdom might very well consider the advisability of discouraging the prevalence with stand in the way of such action.

Rt. Hon. Sidney Buxton, President of the Board of Trade, said that the matter had been considered and the conclusion come to was that in the interest of British shipping all the world over the renunciation of parts of certain treaties might be undertaken if the end justified the means. It was not merely a question of commercial treaties of trade elsewhere, which might be seriously adversely affected.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said treaties had to deal with were more those in existence long before the dominions had reached their present position, and were negotiated from the viewpoint of Great Britain alone. In recent years the Home Government had adopted the principle of not including the self-governing dominions in commercial treaties without first obtaining their consent. With a view to the matter being considered he would at a subsequent meeting move that the Home Government be requested to open negotiations with several foreign Governments having treaties which apply to the Dominions of the dominions so desiring liberty to do for themselves which may desire to withdraw from the treaties which are injuring them in respect to the rest of the Empire. Further consideration of the motion was postponed until the six-teenth meeting.

Premier Fisher moved that it was desirable that the Governments of the Governments of the colonies be called upon to take the necessary steps in the Empire and other countries, with a view to the conclusion of a treaty for the encouragement for British shipping and prevent unfair competition, and that the Dominions desire, to secure for British ships equal trading advantages with those of other countries. Hon. Sidney Buxton said that the Government would accept the resolution, and would do all in its power to make it effective. It was desirable that the attention of the Government of Great Britain and the dominions should be called to the desirability of taking the first steps to secure, etc." As amended the resolution was unanimously carried.

Treaty Against Germany

Washington, June 6—Inquiring whether the proposed British-American treaty would be made effective against Germany, Representative Hughes of New Jersey today introduced a resolution in the House calling on the President for details of the negotiations.

Mr. Hughes bases his demand on the alleged endorsement by United States Ambassador Griffin at the London, of a recent speech by Sir Edward Grey in the British Parliament, in which the latter intimated that Germany would be asked to sign a treaty proposed by President Taft. Mr. Hughes contends that this is an endorsement as "offensive to the majority of the American people."

The foreign affairs committee has taken the resolution under consideration.

Labor Protests.

Montreal, June 6.—"This campaign of the Conservative Government is in a certain section of the press of this continent by the brings of capital." said Mr. J. A. McMaster, who is going to be allowed without a strong protest by the Canadian people." said Mr. Lynch yesterday.

Mr. McMaster, of Building Trades Council will hold a big meeting in the City of Montreal, on the 12th, exposing the disgraceful methods employed by the Conservatives in Nanaro.

The whole subject will be taken up by prominent speakers, who will show how Canadian workmen have been injured contrary, that of a citizen of a supposedly free country was arrested and kidnapped and carried from one state to another like a traveling bag."

TRUST IS BLAMED

The American Publishers Want Cheaper Print Paper.

Washington, June 6—Public hearings on Canadian reciprocity bill were concluded by the Senate finance committee yesterday, representatives of the American Newspaper Publishers Association and of the American Press Association, appear before the committee.

Secretary Hitchcock, at the request of Senator Bailey, had been asked to appear before the committee today whether the Root amendment to the paper section of the bill providing that it shall not be in force until the President is satisfied that Canada has issued a proclamation to the effect that paper and pulp shall be duty admitted free into all the products of Canada, shall be complied with the agreement, as understood by the commissioners from Canada, and the President prepared this day. On Wednesday the committee will take up the tariff on cheese and to discuss committee action.

Senator Bailey, Urbin, until recently president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, and Frank Hale H. Stone, general manager of the Associated Press, testified that in answer to queries from various Senators, that no their opinions the effect had been made by the newspapers of Canada, and that Canada had made use of the reciprocity argument, to color the minds of the Canadian people, to suppress any facts which were of news value to the Canadian publications.

Last night the Executive Committee of the Publishers' Association, and F. H. Ball, president of the Associated Press, also appeared.

The point criticized which the newspapers of the country have had in the matter, Mr. Ridder told the committee, was the effort to keep information from the paper manufacturers' trust, which he said was trying to drive publishers out of business.

Mr. Ridder, who occupied the greater part of the day before the committee, acknowledge that the Publishers' Association had contributed to trips and letters urging the passage of the reciprocity agreement, but "it would not have favored the measure," he said, "if it had thought that it would be of benefit to the country as a whole, and not to be injured in it as a newspaper publisher."

Senator Bailey said that the paper trust, which, he sa. I limited the output, fixed the price and told a monopoly, was the chief foe of the press, both Senators McCumber and Penrose said that they had heard that it press was such a trust they would be glad to have the Tariff Government, Mr. Ridder insisted, in his opinion, the reciprocity bill was any amendment to the bill would, in his opinion, jeopardize the passage of the measure, and that therefore he was in favor of taking the bill as passed exactly as it came from the House.

Mr. Stone testified that he instructed his bureau sent out to Associated Press correspondents as to Canadian reciprocity, except that they had been told to send any important matter connected with it, because of the general interest in the subject. He was questioned in detail as to the Associated Press service to Senators and Senators. All reports, he said, were supposed to be absolutely fair to both sides, to be a recital of facts on their news value only.

bins on an acre lot were pictured and the capidity of possible purchasers was excited by holding out the alluring hope that in the future the western trend would swing the city's centre into the ben runs and pigeries, out of which present purchasers could make money. To such invitations buyers responded so readily as to provide within a few days the original subdivision in sufficient cash to make his second payment.

Between this subdivision and Winnipeg there are scores of others being placed on the market at good prices, but on very early this month the public—that part willing to pinch themselves to scrape together about $10 per month—are content in the money at present being put in to this class of property is very materially giving the bankers and officers of loan companies some anxiety. They foresee times when so many of the citizens will be hard pressed to keep up their monthly on property that will not be any better than farm land for many years, but are hoping that the benefit of the more fortunate brethren during the last few years that little difficulty is anticipated in spreading the wage earner and the small investor to put up a small amount of cash monthly on property that he never sees. Nor does he realize that Winnipeg city limits are already bordered by a subdivided area sufficient to provide accommodation for a number of cities of the same size.

COMMUNICATION

Mr. Editor,—

Dear Sir:

I was pleased, indeed, to read ratepayers' and citizens' letter in the Post, re purchase of water power. It is a very praiseworthy one and the citizens should have all the information possible before voting on the Lake Scugog power proposition, a proposition was submitted by the Electric Power Co., and at the request of the acting comm ttee the information was given, stating the boon the negotiation being carried on with the Light, Heat, and Power Co., with the prospect that they would be given an opportunity of presentics it again. Now, I think in all fairness to those concerned and in justice to the members of that committee, this promise should be fulfilled, and as chairman of the committee, I would ask the citizens to give those people an opportunity of submitting their offer before the public meeting is held, and I, for one, enable them to discuss it with a full knowledge of all the facts before them.

Yours,

R. KYLIE.

WEDDING BELLS

SIDENPOPP—TEATRO.

St. Mary's church was the scene of a very pretty wedding this morning at 7.30, when Mr. Edward Fr Sedentopf, of the Post staff, was married to Miss Ethel Teatro, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Teatro, East Ward.

The ceremony was celebrated by Venerable Archdeacon Casey, in the presence of the friends of the contracting parties. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked exceedingly attired in cream tamoin silk and taupe hat to match. She was assisted by Miss Mary Christmons, who was gowned in alice blue silk mull with black picture hat to match. The groom's gift to the bride was dressed in black silk, with a black hat to match Mr. Christmons assisted the bride, acted as best man. At the conclusion of the ceremony the happy couple went to the residence of the bride's parents where a breakfast was served to congratulations of their many friends and where about 25 guests sat down to a dainty wedding breakfast. The house was nicely decorated with wedding bells and flowers. The happy couple left on a trip to Muskoka lakes. The bride travelled in an alice blue dress, and was attired in a pretty travelling ensemble at the residence of Mr. P. Teatro. Among the out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Crashore, of Acton.

Reckless Driving

Saturday evening, about o'clock, a couple of smart alecks with their horses and buggies, were driving up Queen on William-st, at breakneck speed, and setting at defiance the laws governing immodesty driving. This it a practice, which is being indulged in right along on this thoroughfare, and it would be a good thing for the town if the council if a plain clothes man was put on to arrest the reckless speeders.

BOIL WELL WATER BEFORE USING IT

Sanitary Inspector Douglas has requested the Post to advise our citizens to boil their well water before using it. This action is absolutely necessary, owing to the prevalence of typhoid fever in town. Some of the typhoid fever cases it is understood, have been traced to the drinking of water from a certain well.

REGULAR MEETING OF W. C. T. U.

The regular monthly meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held on June 2 at 3.30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. George Hoe, President Mrs. Patton was in the Mrs. Robinson gave a very beautiful Bible reading on the influence of a mother's prayer taken from the exercisions of the first chapter of 1st Samuel. The President led in prayer and Mrs. Hoe presided at the piano. After Devotional exercises the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed, the treasurers report was also read. Miss Wiggins read a paper on "Women do not want the ballot" and Mrs. Mitchell read an article on the work of the "Travellers Aid" in regard to the travellers aid at the Union Depot, Toronto, the work is doubled between a Deaconess of the Methodist Church and Mrs. Adams, of the W. C. T. U. Travellers Aid.

The deaconess meets the morning trains and Mrs. Adams the afternoon and late trains. The duties are many and varied, Mrs. Adams meets the incoming trains and endeavors to send unprotected girls to their destination safely. Mrs. Adams has also some office with a weary mother who has several little children and who may be ill and in difficulty.

A young girl came to the city and asked Mrs. Robinson for a certain address. Mrs. Adams promised to accompany her strongly suspecting that everything was not right and this girl dress was one of the unfirened matrimonial schemes. She told the girl of her own early life, and how she helped girls to find situations or places to go when in trouble. With that the girl went into tears and said she was one of the unfortunate ones.

Mrs. Adams persuaded her to go to Mrs. Leavitt's Home for Girls which she did and was thus saved from the white slave traffic. This is not the only case helped by Mrs. Adams. 4216 persons were assisted by her in three months. This will help us to understand what her work will mean. The revenue derived from the Surprise Soap coupons sent from the different Societies of the W. C. T. U. is supposed to pay her salary but last year it fell short. Any ladies of the town, who are using Surprise Soap if they will send the coupons to Mrs. Paton or myself, they will be helping a good work and for which we would be greatly obliged.

Mrs. Peter Mitchell
Secretary.

BOY SCOUTS AT EENELON FALLS

On Saturday morning a pleasant surprise was received by many of the citizens of the town, when a small portion of the Boy Scout troop marched down Kent-st (in) uniform, and with Pack flying, en route to the boat for Eenlion Falls the enthusiasm of the boys was exceed to the highest pitch in making the movement go in town, and with scarcely any support from the citizens. Nevertheless, the boys are in earnest, and intend to show the merit of the movement.

The boys were under the command of Arthur Allin, who acted as Scoutmaster in the absence of Scoutmaster Hall, and also L. Doxsal and B. Moore took charge of patrols. There were about twenty scouts in uniform, besides 2 some not in uniform.

On arriving at Eenelon Falls they elon boys, who intend forming a were received by several of the Footlon boys, who intend forming a company, and in the company they marched to Cameron Lake and camped and cooked dinner Returning they marched to the Lindsay fair grounds, where they demonstrated in their tying and first aid. Deafness Cannot be Cured

Local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, it will be deafness forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that we cannot cure by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

REAL ESTATE SHARKS

For some time past gilt tongued "real estate" agents have been going about the country duping hard thinking people with offers of soaps in lots on the outskirts of Winnipeg, Calgary and other centres of the great Canadian West. They unfold maps, specially prepared to deceive, and show a subdivision of the borders of these cities, which can be purchased at a bargain, and on which, purchasers can double their money at short notice.

These land sharks, are as a rule, strangers, and strange as it may seem, people have been known to hand out their hard earned money without ascertaining who these strangers may be, and without seeing the property they have purchased. The late P. T. Barnum, of circus fame, said the people like to be fooled, and it seems strange that in this enlightened age, wild cat schemes continue to hoodwink the people.

Some of those 'land sharks" have visited Lindsay, and by their plausible stories, and alleged gilt-edged offers have succeeded in duping some of our people.

The following from the Financial Post, of Canada, illustrates in a striking way how these operations are carried on at Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, May 9.—At the present time there is an extensive boom in a small boom in subdivisions. Of these one of the most successful from the boomsters' standpoint was practically forced upon them from the centre of the city. The ease involved in this transaction came mostly from the purchasers of the acre lots offered. Buying upon a small cash pay made, the buyer of the large acreage made a small cash. Payment upon the balance of the purchase. Subdivided it at considerable expense, and immediately proceeded to place advertisements in the city newspapers offering acre lots. In these announcements the joys of rural cut him down before the fateful message was delivered?

The Red Year

STORY OF THE INDIAN MUTINY

BY LOUIS TRACY

Not to create too great a stir, Malcolm pulled up both horses at the entrance to the arcade.

He called a chaprassi and bade him hold Chumru's steed. Then, learning from the uproar at the gate that the guards were obeying his instructions literally, he went on at an easier pace.

The palace was humming with excitement. Its numerous buildings housed a multitude of court nobles and other hangers-on to the court, and each of these had his special coterie of attendants who helped to advance their own fortunes by clinging to their master's skirts. The jealousies and intrigues that surround a throne were never more in evidence than at Delhi during the last hours of the Great Mogul. Already men were preparing for the final catastrophe. While the ignorant mob was firm in its belief that the rule of the sahib had passed forever, those few clearer-headed persons who possessed any claim to the title of statesmen were convinced that the Mutiny had failed.

Nearly four months were sped since that fatal Sunday when the rebellion broke out at Meerut. And what had been achieved? Delhi, the pivot of Mohammedan hopes, was crowded with a licentious soldiery, who obeyed only those leaders that pandered to them, who fought only when some perfervid moullah aroused their worst passions by his eloquence, and who were terrible only to peaceful citizens. All public credit was destroyed. The rule of the King, nominal within the walls of his own palace, was laughed at in the city and ignored beyond the walls. The provincial satraps and feudatory princes who should be striving to help their sovereign were wholly devoted to the more congenial task of carving out kingdoms for themselves.

Nana Sahib, rehabilitated in Oudh, was opposing Havelock's advance; Khan Bahadur Khan, an ex-pensioner of the Company, had set up a barbarous despotism at Bareilly; the Moulvie of Fyzabad, intent on the destruction of the Residency, meant to establish himself there as "King of Hindustan" if only that stubborn entrenchment could be carried; Mahudi Husain, Gaffur Beg, Kunwer Singh, the Ranee of Jhansi, and a host of other prominent rebels scattered throughout Oudh, Bengal, the Northwest Provinces and Central India, cared less for Delhi than for their own private affairs, and were consequently permitting the British to gather forces by which they could be destroyed piecemeal.

From Nepaul, the great border state, lying behind the pestilential jungle of the Terai, came an army of nine thousand Ghoorkahs to help the British. At Hyderabad, the most powerful Mohammedan principality in India, the Nizam and his famous minister, Sir Salar Jung, crushed a Jehad with cannon and grapeshot. In a word, the orgy had ended, and the day of reckoning was near.

Malcolm, therefore, was confronted with two separate and hostile sets of conditions. On the one hand, he was threading his way through a maze of conflicting interests, and this was a circumstance most favorable to his chances of escape; on the other, every man regarded his neighbor with distrust and a stranger with positive suspicion, while Malcolm's distinguished appearance could not fail to draw many inquiring eyes.

He crossed the large garden beyond the arcade and was making for an arch that gave access to the long covered passage leading to the Delhi Gate, when he saw Akhab Khan standing there.

The rebel leader was deep in converse with a richly-attired personage whom Frank discovered afterwards to be the Vizier. Akhab Khan an escort of sowars stood by their horses, and Malcolm felt that the instant the former lance-corporal set eyes on either Nejdi or himself recognition would follow as surely as a vulture knows its prey.

He could neither dawdle nor hesitate. Wheeling Nejdi towards the nearest arch on the left, he found himself in an open space between the walls of the fortress and the outer line of buildings. Underneath the broad terrace, from which troops could defend the battlements, stood a row of storerooms and go-downs. At a little distance he could distinguish a line of stables, and the mere sight sent the blood dancing through his veins.

If only he could evade capture until nightfall he would no longer feel that each moment might find him making a last fight against impossible odds. Dismounting, he led Nejdi to an unoccupied stall. As there was nothing to be gained by half measures he removed saddle and bridle, hung them on a peg, put a halter on the Arab, adjusted the heel-ropes, and hunted the adjoining stalls for forage.

He came upon some grain in a sack and a quantity of hay. All provender was alike to Nejdi so long as it was toothsome. He was soon busily engaged, and Malcolm resolved to avoid observation by grooming him when anybody passed whose gaze might be too inquisitive.

He took care that sword and revolvers were handy. It was hard to tell what hue and cry might be raised by the troopers against whom the guards had closed the Lahore Gate. Perhaps they were searching for two men and the finding of one horse in charge of a chaprassi might suggest that the rider of the other and his companion had dodged through the Delhi Gate. Again, his pursuers might have galloped straight to the other exit and thus made certain that he was still in the palace. If that were so, and they ferreted him out, as well die here as elsewhere. Meanwhile, he chewed philosophically at a few grains of the gram, and awaited the outcome of events that were now beyond his control.

A wild swirl of wind and rain seemed to favor him. There was not much traffic past his retreat, and that little ceased when a deluge lashed the dry earth and clouds of vapor rose as though the water were beating on an oven. Now and again a syce hurried past, with head and shoulders enveloped in a sack. Once a party of sepoys trudged through the mud, towards the water bastion of the palace, and the men whom they had relieved came back the same way a few minutes later.

Nejdi had seldom been groomed so vigorously as during the passing of these detachments, but no one gave the slightest heed to the cavalry officer who was engaged on such an unusual task. If they noticed him at all it was to wonder that he could be such a fool as to work when there were hundreds of loafers in the city who could be kicked to the job.

The rain storm changed into a steady drizzle and the increasing gloom promised complete darkness within half an hour. Malcolm was beginning to plan his movements when he became aware of a man wrapped in a heavy cloak who approached from the direction of the arcade and peered into every nook and cranny.

"Now," thought Frank, "comes my first real difficulty. That man is searching for some one. Whether or not he seeks me he is sure to speak, and if my presence has been reported he will recognize both Nejdi and me instantly. If so, I must strangle him with as little ceremony as possible."

The newcomer came on. In the half light it was easy to see that he was not a soldier but a court official. Indeed, before the searcher's glance rested on the gray Arab, munching contentedly in his stall, or the stall sowar who stood in obscurity near his head. Frank felt almost sure that he was face to face with the trusted confidant who had carried out Roshinara Begum's behests in the garden of Bithoor.

That fact saved the native's life. The Englishman would have killed him without compunction were it not for the belief that the man was actually looking for him and for none other, and with friendly intent, too, else he would have brought a bodyguard.

Sure enough, the stranger's first words were of good import. He could not see clearly into the dark stable and it was necessary to measure one's uttertnces in Delhi just then.

"If you are one who rode into Delhi this morning I would have speech with you," he muttered softly.

"Say on," said Malcolm, gripping his sword.

"Nay, one does not give the Princess Roshinara's instructions without knowing that they reach the ears they are meant for."

The Englishman came out from the obscurity. He approached so quickly that the native started back, being far from prepared for Frank's very convincing resemblance to a rissaldar of cavalry.

"I look for one—" he began, but Frank had no mind to lose time.

"For Malcolm-sahib?" he demanded.

"It might be some such name," was the hesitating answer.

"I am he. I saw thee last at Bithoor, when I escaped with Mayne-sahib and the missy-baba."

"By Mohammed! I would not have known you, sahib, though now I remember your face Come with me, and quickly. Each moment here means danger."

"Ay, for thee. I am not one to be tricked so easily."

"Huzoor, have I not sought thee without arms or escort? I and another have searched the palace these two hours. Leave your horse. I will have him tended. Come, sahib, I pray you. The Begum awaits you, but there are so many who know of your presence that I shall not be able to save you if you fall into their hands."

These were fair-seeming words with the ring of truth about them. At any rate Malcolm's whereabouts were no longer a secret, and it would not be war but murder to offer violence to one who came with good intent on his lips if not in his heart.

"Lead on," said Frank, sternly, "and remember that I shall not hesitate to strike at the first sign of treachery."

"I shall not betray you, sahib, but you must converse with me as we walk and not draw too many eyes by holding a naked sword."

This was so manifestly reasonable that Malcolm felt rather ashamed of his doubts. Yet, he thought it best not to appear to relax his precautions.

"I would not pass through the palace with a sword in my hand," he said with a quiet laugh, "but I have a pistol in my belt, and that will suffice for six men."

His guide set off at a rapid pace. When they were near the great arch leading into the garden they halted in front of a small door in a dimly-lighted building, and the native rapped twice with his knuckles on three separate panels. Some bolts were drawn and the two were admitted, the door being instantly barred behind them by an attendant. The darkness in the passage was impenetrable. Frank held himself tensely, but his companion's voice reached him from a little distance in front, while he heard other bolts being drawn.

"You will see your way more clearly now," was the reassuring message, and when the second door was opened the rays of a lamp lit the stone walls and floor. They went on, through lofty corridors, across sequestered gardens and by way of many a stately chamber until another narrow passage terminated in a barred door, guarded by an armed native. The man's shrill voice betokened his calling, and Frank knew that he was standing at the entrance to the zenana.

"There is one other within," said the guard, leering at them.

"Who is it, slave?" asked Frank's guide, scornfully, for he was annoyed by the eunuch's familiar tone.

"Nay, I obey orders," was the tart response. "Enter, then, and may Allah prosper you."

There was a hint of danger in the otherwise excellent wish, but the man unlocked the door, and they passed within.

Frank's wondering eyes rested on a scene of fairy-like beauty, so exquisite in its colorings and so unexpected withal, that not even his desperate predicament could repress for an instant the feeling of astonishment that overwhelmed him. He was standing in a white marble chamber, pillared and roofed in the Byzantine style, while every shaft and arch was chiseled into graceful lines and adorned with traceries or carved festoons of fruit and flowers. The walls were brightened with mosaics wrought in precious stones. Texts from the Koran in the flowing Persi-Arabic script, ran above the arches. In the floor, composed of colored tiles, was set a pachisi board, as the wide entrance hall to a European house might have a chess-board incorporated with the design of the tiled floor.

Not a garish tint or inharmonious line interfered with the chaste elegance of the white marble, and the whole apartment, which seemed to be the ante-room of the ladies' quarters, was lighted with Moorish lamps.

Malcolm took in some of the details in one amazed glance, but his thoughts were recalled sternly to the affairs of the moment by hearing the ring of spurred heels on the sharp-sounding pavement from behind a curtained arch. There was no time to retreat nor cross toward an alcove that promised some slight screen from the soft and penetrating light that filled the room. He saw that his guide was perturbed, but he asked no question. With the quick military tread came the frou-frou of silk and the footfall of slippered feet. Then the curtain was drawn aside and Akhab Khan entered, followed by the Princess Roshinara.

Malcolm had the advantage of a few seconds' warning. Even as Akhab Khan placed his hand on the curtain the Englishman sprang forward, and the astounded sowar, now a brigadier in the rebel forces, found himself looking into the muzzle of a revolver.

"Do not move till I bid you, Akhab Khan," said Malcolm, in his self-contained way. "I am summoned hither, so I come, but it may be necessary to secure a hostage for my safe conduct outside the walls again."

"You! Malcolm-sahib!" was Akhab Khan's involuntary outburst.

"Yes, even I. Have you not heard, then, that I rode into the palace to-day?"

"There was a report that some Feringhis—some sahibs—were in the city as spies—"

"Malcolm-sahib is here because I sent for him," broke in Roshinara.

"You—sent for him!"

Akhab Khan's swarthy features paled, and his eyes sparkled wrathfully. Heedless of Malcolm's implied threat, or perhaps ignoring it, he wheeled round on the Princess, and his right hand crossed to his sword-hilt.

"If you so much as turn your head again or lift a hand without my order, I blow your brains out," said Malcolm in the same unemotional tone.

"Nay, let him attack a woman if it pleaseth him," cried Roshinara, who had not drawn back one inch from the place where she was standing when Malcolm confronted Akhab Khan and herself. "That is what our troops, officers and men alike, are best fitted for. They love to swagger in the bazaar, but their valor flies when they see the Ridge."

Again quite indifferent to the fact that Malcolm's finger was on the trigger, the rebel leader threw out his hands towards the Begum in a gesture of agonized protest.

"Do you not trust me, my heart?" he murmured. "If you knew of this Nazarene's presence why was I not told?"

"Because I wished to save you in spite of yourself. Because I would mourn you if you fell in battle as befits a warrior and the man whom I love, but I would not have you die on the scaffold, as most of the others will die ere another month be sped. What hope have we of success? If forty thousand sepoys cannot overcome the three thousand on the Ridge, how shall they prevail against the force that is now preparing to storm Delhi? I sent for Malcolm-sahib that I might obtain terms for my father and for thee, Akhab Khan. This man is now in our power. Let us bargain with him. If he goes free to-day, let him promise that we shall be spared when the gallows is busy in front of our palace."

Each word of this impassioned speech was a revelation to Malcolm. Here was the fiery beauty of the Mogul court pleading for the lives of her father and lover, pleading to him, a solitary Briton in the midst of thousands of mutineers, a prisoner in the stronghold, a spy, whose life was forfeit by the laws of war. Hardly less bewildering than this turn of fortune's wheel was the whirligig that promoted a poor trooper of the Company to the position of accepted suitor for the hand of a royal maiden. Never could there be a more complete unveiling of the Eastern mind, with all its fatalism, its strange weaknesses, its uncontrollable passions.

Akhab Khan stretched out his arms again.

"Forgive me, my soul, if I did doubt thee," he almost sobbed.

The girl was the first to recover her self-control.

"Put away your pistol," she said, fixing her fine eyes on Malcolm, with a softness in their limpid depths that he had never seen there before. "If we can contrive, my plighted husband and I, you will not need it to-night. I was rejoiced to hear that you were within our gates. We are beaten. I know it. We have lost a kingdom, because wretches like Nana Dundhu Punt of Bithoor, have forgotten their oaths and preferred drunken revels to empire. Were they of my mind, were they as loyal and honorable as the man I hope to marry, we would have driven you and yours into the sea, Malcolm-sahib. But Allah willed otherwise and we can only bow to his decree. It is Kismet. I am content. Say, then, if you are sent in safety to your camp, do you in return guarantee the two lives I ask of you?"

Malcolm could not help looking at Akhab Khan before he answered. The handsome young soldier had folded his arms, and his eyes dwelt on Roshinara's animated face with a sad fixity that bespoke at once his love and his despair.

Then the Englishman placed the revolver in his belt and bowed low before the woman who reposed such confidence in him.

"If the issue rested with me, Princess," he said, "you need have no fear for the future. I am only a poor officer and I have small influence. Yet I promise that such power as I possess shall be exerted in your behalf, and I would remind you that we English neither make war on woman nor treat honorable enemies as felons."

"My father is a feeble old man," she cried vehemently. "It was not by his command that your people were slain. And Akhab Khan has never drawn his sword save in fair fight."

"I can vouch for Akhab Khan's treatment of those who were at his mercy," said Malcolm, generously.

"Nay, sahib, you repaid me that night," said the other, not to be outdone in this exchange of compliments. "But if I have the happiness to find such favor with my lady that she plots to save me against my will I cannot forget that I lead some thousands of sepoys who have faith in me. You have been examining our defenses all day. Sooner would I fall on my sword here and now than that I should connive at the giving of information to an enemy which should lead to the destruction of my men."

Malcolm had foreseen this pitfall in the smooth road that was seemingly opening before him.

"I would prefer to become the bearer of terms than of information," he said.

"Terms? What terms? How many hands in this city are free of innocent blood? Were I or any other to propose a surrender we should be torn limb from limb."

"Then I must tell you that I cannot accept your help at the price of silence. When I undertook this mission I knew its penalties. I am still prepared to abide by them. Let me remind you that it is I, not you, who can impose conditions within these four walls."

Akhab Khan paled again. His was the temperament that shows anger by the token which reveals cowardice in some men; it is well to beware of him who enters a fight with bloodless cheeks and gray lips. But Roshinara sprang between them with an eager cry:

"What folly is this that exhausts itself on a point of honor? Does not every spy who brings us details of each gun and picket on the Ridge tell the sahib-log all they wish to know of our strength and our dissensions? Will not the man who warned us of the presence of an officer-sahib in our midst to-day go back and sell the news of a sepoy regiment's threat to murder the King? Have done with these idle words—let us to acts! Nawab-ji!"

"Heaven-born!" Malcolm's guide advanced with a deep salaam.

"See to it that my orders are carried out. Mayhap thine own head may rest easier on its shoulders if there is no mischance."

The nawab-ji bowed again, and assured the Presence that there would be no lapse on his part. Akhab Khan had turned away. His attitude betokened utter dejection, but the Princess, not the first of her sex to barter ambition for love, was radiant with hope.

"Go, Malcolm-sahib," she whispered, "and may Allah guard you on the way!"

"I have one favor to ask," he said. "My devoted servant, a man named Chumru—"

She smiled with the air of a woman who breathes freely once more after passing through some grave peril.

"How, then, do you think I found out the identity of the English officer who had dared to enter Delhi?" she asked. "Your man came to me, not without difficulty, and told me you were here. It was he who inspired me with the thought that your presence might be turned to good account. But go, and quickly. He is safe."

Frank hardly knew how to bid her farewell until he remembered that, if of royal birth, Princess Roshinara was also a beautiful woman. He took her hand and raised it to his lips, a most unusual proceeding in the East, but the tribute of respect seemed to please her.

Following the nawab he traversed many corridors and chambers and ultimately reached an apartment in which Chumru was seated. That excellent bearer was smoking a hookah, with a couple of palace servants, and doubtless exchanging spicy gossip with the freedom of Eastern manners and conversation.

"Shabash!" he cried, when his crooked gaze fell on Malcolm. "By the tomb of Nizam-ud-din, there are times when women are useful."

They were let down from a window on the river face of the palace, and taken by a boat to the bank of the Jumna above Ludlow Castle, while the nawab undertook to deliver their horses next day at the camp. He carried out his promise to the letter, nor did he forget to put forth a plea in his own behalf against the hour when British bayonets would be probing the recesses of the fort and its occupants.

When Nicholson came out of the mess after supper he found Malcolm waiting for an audience. Chumru, still wearing the servant's livery in which the famous brigadier had last

PRESIDENT TAFT LOOKS NORTHWARD

Under Reciprocity, He Says, Our Timber and Other Resources Would be Available to America

President Taft of the United States spoke to the Associated Press and the American Newspaper Publishers' Association on Reciprocity and why it should be adopted, in New York on Friday, April 28th. His reasons for wanting Reciprocity with Canada are contained in the following:

"Another and a very conclusive reason for closing the contract," said Mr. Taft, "is the opportunity which it gives us to increase the supply of our natural resources, which, with the wastefulness of children we have wantonly exhausted. The timber resources of Canada, which will open themselves to us inevitably under the operation of this agreement, are now apparently inexhaustible. I say 'apparently' inexhaustible, for if the same procedure were to be adopted in respect to them that we have followed in respect to our own forests, I presume that they too might be exhausted. But fortunately for Canada and for us, we and they have learned much more than we realized two decades ago with respect to the necessity for proper methods of forestry and of lumber cutting. And hence we may be safe in saying that under proper modern methods the timber resources open to us in Canada may be made inexhaustible, and we may derive ample supplies of timber from Canadian sources to the profit of Canada and for our own benefit.

"There are other natural resources, which I need not stop to enumerate, which will become available to us as if our own if we adopt and maintain commercial union with Canada; and this is one of the chief reasons that ought to commend the Canadian agreement to the far-seeing statesmanship of leaders of American public opinion.

"But there are other—even broader—grounds than this that should lead to the adoption of this agreement. Canada's superficial area is greater than that of the United States between the oceans. Of course it has a good deal of waste land in the far north, but it has enormous tracts of unoccupied land, or land settled so sparsely as to be substantially unoccupied, which in the next two or three decades will rapidly acquire a substantial and valuable population. The Government is one entirely controlled by the people, and the bond uniting the Dominion with the mother country is light and almost imperceptible. There are no restrictions upon the trade or economic development of Canada which will interfere in the slightest with her carving out her independent future. The attitude of the people is that of affection toward the mother country and of a sentimental loyalty toward her Royal head. But for practical purposes the control exercised from England by legislation or Parliament is imponderable.

"Canada has now between seven and eight millions of people. They are a hearty, temperate, persistent race; brave, intelligent and enterprising, sharing or inheriting the good qualities of all their ancestors, and with a national pride in their Dominion that grows with the wonderful success and prosperity that have attended them in the last three decades. They are good neighbors; we could not have better neighbors. It is more than a hundred years since a hostile shot was fired across the border, and they are like us because our conditions are similar and because our traditions are similar. They are more restricted in their immigration laws than we, and perhaps they grow less rapidly, but they have before them a wonderful expansion in population, in agriculture and in business, and they offer to any nation with whom they have sympathetic relations and with whom it is profitable for them to deal a constantly increasing market and an ever-increasing trade.

"Why should we not have a closer union with Canada? Think of the absurdity of separating Manitoba and Minneapolis by as great a distance as Manitoba and Liverpool, when certainly Providence intended that their separation, socially and commercially, should only be that of their geographical distance. Canadians have furnished us with a large number of our best citizens. We are giving them a large number of the pick of our young farmers. Let us open the gateway between us. Let us give to both countries the profit of the trade that God intended between us. Let the political Governments remain as they are. Let us abolish arbitrary and artificial obstructions to our association with our friends upon the north and derive the mutual benefit that it will certainly bring."

In conclusion the President said: "I have said that this was a critical time in the solution of the question of reciprocity. It is critical because, unless it is now decided favorably to reciprocity, it is exceedingly probable that no such opportunity will ever again come to the United States. The forces which are at work in England and in Canada to separate her by a Chinese wall from the United States and to make her part of an Imperial commercial band reaching from England around the world to England again, by a system of preferential tariffs, will derive an impetus from the rejection of this treaty, and if we would have reciprocity with all the advantages that I have described, and that I earnestly and sincerely believe will follow its adoption, we must take it now or give it up forever."

THE FISHERMAN'S LUCK

It has been said that a fisherman's luck was in his bait. Probably so, but many of the largest fish get away by the attractive bait being attached to a poor line.

Just so in business, attractive prices attached to poor lines won't hold many customers to any store. Attractive prices attached to good lines of dependably reliable merchandise and truthfully advertised is the power of attraction that brings people to this store. Every reader of our advertisements can depend that every word in them is right and proven right every week by hundreds of people. This accounts in no small measure for this store's steady growth and the adding to its number of customers, not only many in the immediate vicinity but many even hundreds of miles away. So when you read it in Sutcliffe's advertisement remember it is so—exactly as represented in every way.

CANADIAN CLERGYMEN KNIGHTED BY QUEEN

It is not often that a Canadian Clergyman or Missionary receives the order of Knighthood, but this honor was a short time ago conferred on the Rev. R. W. Greenshields by the Queen of the Netherlands, or Holland

Mr. Greenshields is the Church of England Missionary to the Esquimos on Blicklead Island away north-east of Hudson Bay and on the Edge of the Arctic Circle. He was returning to his Mission station in September on a Netherland Schooner which was wrecked, being crushed by an iceberg. Mr. Greenshield and the crew managed to land on a rocky and uninhabited Island, from which the Missionary with others, after a long and hazardous row in a boat reached the Mission station. Mr. Greenshield then organized the rescue of the remainder of the crew from the lonely Island and for a whole year provided for them on shore until a relief ship came just when starvation was staring the party in the face.

An over-element of his heroic service towards these Netherland sailors, Her Majesty Queen of Holland by a decree of Feb. 26 last made Mr. Greenshield a Knight of the order of Orange Nassau.

The Rev. E. C. Peck, who preaches in St. Paul's church next Sunday is a fore-runner and co-worker with Mr. Greenshield and did noble unselfish work, for years in that far north frozen parts of this Canada of ours.

GRADUATION OF THREE NURSES AT THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC

The graduation of nurses at the Academy of Music last night was a unique event attended by a very large number of people anxious to see three of Lindsay's finest young ladies be given their diplomas to go out in the world to attend frail humanity.

Among those on the stage were seated the speakers of the evening, Dr. C. Clarke, chairman of the Board, Reeve to General Hospital, Rev. James Wallace, Dr. Vroomen, Ven. Archdeacon Casey, the Board of Governors of the Hospital, Miss Barker, Supt. of Petrolia Hospital Miss Miller Supt. of the Ross Hospital and the three young ladies to be presented with diplomas, Miss Munns, Miss McCrone and Miss Z. Limbert. Representatives of the Women's Auxiliary were also present.

Chairman, J. D. Flavelle introduced the program by requesting an instrumental piano solo by Mr. H. Cook Hufflilton which was excellently accomplished.

Mr. Flavelle then gave a brief and interesting address, thanking the audience for the large attendence which was gratifying to the Board of Governors as it showed the interest in the hospital. The main event of the night was the graduation of the three nurses young ladies of the highest character and greatest ability, who would now go to bring honor to the town in their work.

He drew attention to Miss Barker, Supt. of Petrolia Hospital and formerly Lindsay and was sure she merely connected with the Ross Memeorem more creditable to Lindsay.

Mr. Flavelle asked Rev. W. Wallace to make an address since there were no outside persons more closely associated with the nurses than Mayors and those of town were always supporting the Hospital wherever possible.

Rev. Mr. Wallace said as already stated he had ample opportunity to know the nature of the work, and appreciated that no inexperienced time or money could give better returns than our hospital. The investment was little but may interest taken is being repaid many times. Such an institution is necessary to us. We have a splendid hospital, perfect in every department and should show our appreciation of it when possible. There is a should Board of Governors, composed of shrewd, level headed business men who manage the outside business affairs with great skill. But for the internal economy, the hospital is good, complete with a magnificent lady Superintendent and a band of fine nurses competent to a high degree.

The town shares in the glory of sending out these three angels of mercy.

Ven. Archdeacon Casey spoke next saying that he was very grateful for the opportunity to be present at such an occasion. Personally he was aware of the splendid work of Miss Miller another staff and Lindsay should congratulate themselves on having such competent officials in such a fine hospital.

Mr. Ross being a former citizen of Lindsay did not forget his home town but gave it a perfect hospital of excellent propositions and when the accomodation was not adequate for the nurses he erected a Nurses' Home. Doubtless the three nurses Will feel a little lonesome going out into the world from such a seemingly complete accomodation to some of lesser comfort.

Dr. Vroomen, representing the medical profession, spoke next. He was glad to be associated with the Hospital and was sure that all were not acquainted with the reason it was growing so rapidly in popularity. It was superb management of the Supt. and the work of the nurses for which fact no person can speak with better authority than the medical men. Critical men are particularly satisfactory to the Dr. when in the hospital. He had lived under two dispensations When there were no nurses and South ern used to doctor while now the doctors are ready on every hand.

He drew a picture of a young lady that comes out from the hospital is not the same as the one that went in. She is prepared for all the emergencies of life.

Miss mary Fluvey rendered an excellent solo accompanied by Miss Brady.

Chairman Flavelle said he had come to the most pleasant part of the evening—the graduation of the three nurses upon which he would now call to come forward to receive their diplomas.

Miss Emily Munns was called first and her diploma pinned on by Mrs. Thos. Stewart. Then Miss Margaret Cairns and Miss Z. Limbert were presented with their official documents, and a few pleasant words of congratulation and the assurance of their success in their chosen work were spoken by Mr. Flavelle.

The young nurses looked charming in their white uniforms and large bouquets of flowers in their arms.

Dr. C. K. Clarke then addressed the audience saying what a pleasure it was to be here in the interests of the Ross Memorial Hospital.

The nursing problem is not a new one, but gradually things have been revolutionized. The highest type of nurses are graduates of both an intellectual and a general hospital which gives them a greater insight into the range of work. A nurse in the insane department has to exhibit individuality the personal element being uppermost always. Besides insane are hard to deal with and some strange situations occurr.

From the asylum one does not always find the highest type of nurse as she is almost invariably the one in the general hospital. The work is very exacting. There should be an interchange of nurses, that is, a nurse should commence in the asylum and go to the general hospital and not vice versa. The addition of a ward for mental diseases at Toronto hospital would be of much benefit to everybody.

Toronto Hospitals have nothing to offer Canadian Nurses as they are short of money and equipment, with the result the natural drift is toward the fine edifices of the United States.

Dr. Clarke said the Ross Hospital was the very best small hospital in Ontario for which we should be very proud. He wished to congratulate the class on its success and was sure it would be as brilliant as its predecessors.

Judge Harding, in moving a vote of thanks to Dr. Clarke mentioned the value of the hospital to Lindsay, and congratulated the superintendent and Board of management and the nurses on its exceptionally fine reputation, and success.

Mr. H. B. Black ably seconded the motion with the most complimentary remarks to the Superintendent and graduates.

The National Anthem closed the pleasant event.

COUNTY COUNCIL COMMENCES SESSION

The members of the County Council assembled yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock and held their first session. On account of the closing the opening session very little real business was transacted except the formalities of getting started. After the councillors had filed to their respective places, and the minutes of the preceding meeting read and adopted, the warden's address was read.

The address was referred to the proper standing committee.

The Auditor's report and the correspondence received during the year, was referred to the proper standing committees.

The County Council then adjourned leaving the equalization committee in session with—r. Bing of Lobcaygeon in the chair. A lengthy discussion took place over the non-payment of the income tax by a supposedly large number of tax payers. This represented a large loss to the public Treasury and it was felt that the matter should be represented to the

To the Municipal Council of the County of Victoria.

Gentlemen,—

You have assembled in compliance with the standing rules of the Council to deal with all matters to which you are required to give attention at this session.

The turnkey of the Goal resigned his position and retired at the end of March last. In making an appointment to fill the vacancy subject to the approval of the Lieutenant Governor in Council the Sheriff desired information as to the salary he might name provisionally until the Council could have an opportunity for giving the matter consideration. I took the liberty of stating that the same salary as was paid to the retiring official would be continued subject to your approval.

Under an amendment to the Registry Act the county is required to provide a caretaker of the Registry Office In conference with the chairman of the standing committee on County property it was decided to offer the position to the caretaker of the Court House and retired at the end of March. This action is submitted for your confirmation if it meets with your approval.

My attention has been directed to the need that exists for keeping the approaches to the bridges which have been erected by the County at a fair cost, in a good state of preservation and repairing them at a proper manner at regular intervals, and I submit the subject for your consideration.

In connection with the proposed construction oiha steel and concrete bridge across narrows of Mud Lake in the township of Serden, I take the liberty of suggesting that the two Commissioners appointed to were appointed to act with the committee in

DOUBLE DROWNING JUST AVERTED

Brooksville, June 6.—The old story of a man who had taken a drink, got into a double drowning opposite here. Jackson Parker and James Haley, Mr. Mahon and Bates, under the influence of liquor, indulged in a reckless act of the last mentioned. Haley and Parker had a row on the shore, one hundred yards distant, and jumping an excellent swimmer, had no difficulty in reaching the other companion who was intoxicated to aid themselves further than to cling to the boat. Wm. Foster put out in a skiff to their aid, but Parker was drowned in all of the risk of making a second upset. McMahon and Bates, sobered up, but Foster managed to hold his head above water until Wm. Mahon, Wm. Burns, in another boat, appeared on the scene, and between them McMahon's power, Foster was dragged bodily into the boat by the wrists and Burns carried them ashore.

Smallpox at Summer Resort.

Montreal, June 6—A case of smallpox has appeared at Lake St. Louis, the summer resort on Lake St. Louis, and a quarantine has been instituted in a tent in the rear of the house, where a man is expected to pass a pleasant summer.

The patient is Miss Simpson, sister of Mrs. Sam Sharpe, of the firm of Sharpe, Ltd., of this city, who had only left the house in Lake Saint Louis for the West Indies and last week was taken ill with a rash and pronounced a chickenpox. On Friday, however, a doctor called in to see the lady, was sent that a tent was raised in the rear of the house and the patient placed in a nurse became its occupants. The house is closed up and the family are on guard in front of the house, and a quarantine is being maintained.

LONDON CONFERENCE CONDEMNS THE "NE TEMERE" DECREE

Stratford, June 6—The London Conference rose to a man yesterday afternoon when a resolution, moved by Rev. Dr. Whiting of London and Mr. Hern Hunt, condemning the "ne temere" decree, was put. Then the big gallery broke into "God Save the King" and applauded tumultuously. There was no mistaking the spirit of the conference as being a unit in favor of the strong resolution, it being insisted that "Roman" be placed before "Catholic," an omission in the original resolution.

The resolution was as follows:—"We as loyal citizens of the Church of Rome is a matter of vital interest to the inhabitants of this Dominion. We accede the right of any Church to make what ecclesiastical laws it deems prudent for the members of that church, provided they do not offend belief in the sacredness of marriage and abhor the pernicious precepts for its violation. We agree that mixed marriages between Roman Catholics and Protestants are to be discouraged, as producing neglect of religious and civil duties, and that for this Dominion or any province of this Dominion to enacted by Parliamentary statute the ecclesiastical enactment of the Roman decree is as much as possible to be borne by the citizens of this Dominion as any yoke from which liberty has obtained freedom in the course of human progress. We declare that the alleged right of the Roman Catholic Church above any other Church to determine who shall legally perform the rights of marriage for any person has our utmost abhorrence, and that we record it with unalterable determination until our equal law for all prevails throughout this country. We would further add that the custom of Canada in appointing minister of the Gospel to perform the marriage ceremony has to be commended. This custom gives a religious sanction to marriage and has a wholesome moral effect upon the nation, and we express our grave apprehension that the result of the ne temere decree will be to make marriage a purely civil contract, to reach Roman Catholic and Protestants alike 'would deplore.'"

MAGNIFICENT MONUMENT DEDICATED IN ROME

Rome, June 6—Nearly one million people witnessed the dedication on Sunday of a magnificent monument to King Victor Emmanuel II., grandfather of the present King. Interest was added to the occasion by combining therewith a celebration of the granting of the constitution by King Charles Albert in 1848, the same constitution which still rules United Italy.

The monument is composed of a great portico with white marble, with sixteen immense columns surrounded by a frieze, and at the ends quadrigae in bronze. In front of the colonnade stands the gigantic equestrian statue of the father of the country on a richly decorated pedestal, leading to which are grand staircases decorated with statues, stayues, groups and antenae with gilded figures. The entire length of the monument is 500 feet, depth 450 feet, and its height 250 feet.

AVIATION MEET COST MONEY

Montreal, June 6.—That the Automobile Club would not undertake to finance another aviation meet was the statement made yesterday morning by J. George McNamee, secretary of the club.

The Automobile Club has received a communication from the Curtis Aeroplane Co. of New York, "which contemplates the extension of their aeroplane sales business as well as exhibition rights, to this country."

Mr. McNamee went on to explain that the losses came through the big prizes and the aviators. "They were worth it," he said, "and I do not mean that they were not perfectly satisfied, but $12,000 to one man, $10,000 to another, and $4,000, $2,000, etc. others, represented a lot of money."

Along Imperial Lines.

Montreal, June 6.—Dr. R. D. Roberts, secretary of the Congress of Universities of the Empire, to be held in London, who arrived on the Megantic to attend the preliminary congress of Canadian universities, convened by Dr. Falconer (Toronto) and Dr. Peterson (McGill), stated yesterday morning that the main idea of the London conference was a sort of a university on Imperial lines, of all the universities of the Empire with the intention of formulating some universal educational training scheme than that at present exists.

Fifty-one universities, he said, had been represented at the London congress. Canada heads the list with ten universities, while in the British Isles there are fifteen with eighteen.

Death of Old Resident.

Hespeler, June 6—An old and highly respected citizen, in the person of Mr. Jacob Warren, died yesterday in his 90th year. Warren was born in Bramchet, Hampshire, Eng., Jan. 21, 1832. He came to Canada with his parents in the fall of 1832, and settled in Hespeler, where he was for a time engaged in the trade of paper making. He married Miss Jane Chandler, who survives, ten children and thirty grandchildren, survive him. Mr. Warren has been retired in Hespeler since 1887.

Nationalist Member Hurt.

Dublin, June 6—John Dillon, Nationalist member of Parliament for East Mayo, was dangerously injured about the head and neck in an auto mobile accident Sunday night near Dundalk, 40 miles northwest of Dublin. It was at first thought that Mr. Dillon was dead, but he did not die and was hastily summoned, administered the last sacrament. The injured man rallied, however, and was removed to Dundalk and thence to the local hospital, in a serious condition.

The automobile crashed into a culvert and Mr. Dillon was thrown through the glass.

Fire Chief Hurt.

Montreal, June 6.—While dashing along Craig street in response to a fire alarm, Assistant Chief Grieve was thrown from his buggy when it collided with a horse. Both driver and horse sustained a badly fractured right leg.

Of the various salutations that pass between Sovereign and people, the Japanese "Banzai" is the most, and the most popular is undoubtedly the hand-clap, which is supposed to have fed the grip of a king—an experience to remember and make much of.

A Northcountry author, whom the King had decorated and shaken hands with, gave a piece of heroism, was welcomed on returning home by a crowd of his friends. They were surprised, however, when he peculiarly requested the hands, proffered in congratulation, and kept his own at the disposal of the crowd.

"How's this, mate?" said a friend. "Hast turned proud?"

The author quietly drew his right hand from his pocket, regarded it a moment in contemplation, and then he turned it decidedly to the depths it had occupied.

"No, no, lad!" he exclaimed, with a sly twinkle in his eye. "Ye canna expect it; I've shaken hands with the King."

The value of the "big man's hand-shake" is thoroughly understood in America, and political "captain" will stand for hours shaking hands with the endless file of his supporters. The President himself is not exempt, and in one of the Democratic campaigns, Taft at Washington, Mr. Taft went through the ordeal, and was completely lazed, just 1,200 times.

The record is claimed in Court Etiquette, another form of salutation, that of kissing the Royal hand, sometimes proves a veritable trap. The poet Longfellow, accounting his fortune, "was honored by being asked to kiss the unwittingly grasped the hand which the Queen held out to him. He noticed a look of surprise on her face, but did not realize the afterwards that her Majesty intended her hand to be kissed."

This rather formal mode of salutation, though it enters into many Court functions, is not the only one introducted to such an extreme as at Madrid, where the most conservative Courts in Europe. When the second of the young Spanish princes was born, the little Prince of the Asturias was just twelve months old. That already he seems to have been instructed in Court etiquette, for on his baby brother being shown to him, he immediately turned on his nurse and infant to kiss!

When King meets king, the usual greeting is a kiss on both cheeks, with two monarchs embrace by lightly holding each other's shoulders, and saluting first on one cheek and then the other. Afterwards the man, the raising of the hat and bowing, Queen Victoria never spared herself in this respect. Even in the Diamond Jubilee procession, when seventy-eight years of age, she bowed almost continuously, and so far the greater part of the route.

That the Royal Family members of the Royal Family are brought up in such formalities, and shows by an incident which occurred later in life. At the moment when the crowd round Buckingham Palace was the most dense, the two eldest children of the present King appeared on the palace nursery window. Prince Eddy, the heir, was then a little over three years old, in response to the cheers of the crowd, "Grandmamma" his hand to his forehead and saluted.

This action strongly the enthusiasm of the crowd to a high pitch, and his grandmamma were so long continued shouting more was expected of him. Straightening himself, therefore, he again saluted, but this time with both hands and "Papa."

TROUBLES OF STATE

When Cabinet Ministers Would Like to Change Their Callings—Some Of Them Do.

One is apt to think that a Cabinet Minister's lot is one to be envied, says the Ottawa Citizen.

He has a big salary and immense influence in social influence. But there are other things to be taken into consideration. The strain of public speaking, for instance. Sir Wilfrid Laurier's voice and a bit of "clergy" ways in which a statesman may find his voice in the end.

At one time the Irish Secretary had to be carried out of the Sufferer's office. He was kicked in the shins, and he was knocked off. In trying to get away he was knocked down and he was forced to go to bed for a week. And he thanked his lucky stars.

A statesman may run still more serious risks. In England attempts to assassinate Cabinet Ministers are not very uncommon. But it was only the luck of a bad aim that saved the French Prime Minister recently, when a man with a revolver fired at him from the public gallery in the Chamber of Deputies. M. Briand escaped but a colleague was seriously wounded.

A few years ago an Austrian Cabinet Minister had a narrow escape from death by poison. A man, whose identity has never been found, sent him a letter fashioned with jagged paper, fancyway in such a way that it was almost impossible to open it without getting scratched. It was a private secretary opened it, and the poison in the scratch caused an unmes tant, lasted for weeks.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer some months ago received a letter containing a white powder. But as the writer declared straightforwardly that it was arsenic, and added instructions that half of it was to be given to the Prime Minister, and half of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the recipient took the letter as a practical joke and showed it to his friends. The powder he did not take to any chemist.

The "trade risks" of the Cabinet Minister have considerably increased since the rise of the Suffragette movement. Everyone remembers how the Home Secretary was hunted, surrounded by plain-clothes men, slashed across the face with a whip by a woman on a Bristol railway-station. He was hustled and jostled and pelted with rotten eggs. But he did not take to any of the Suffragettes climbed into a taxicab which carried the arriving at Richmond, and argued with him the Exchequer, and he was shook him. So if the days are over when an Minister could go to carry a loaded revolver when he went to the House, he have arrived.

Another unpleasant penalty of high political "publicity" is that Mr. Asquith is a target for scandal and attempted blackmail. Mr. Lloyd George solid Limehouse, and he was threatened by whipping a libel action against a newspaper. Some years ago, too, a German attempted to blackmail Mr. Balfour to the tune of $40,000 by representing himself to be the President of the Black Hand Society.

Lord Haldane is too big to be shaken by Suffragettes, but he, like Mr. Churchill and Mr. Balfour, has had his health seriously affected by the strain of all-night sittings. And nowadays, to forget the pressure of the cares of state, he has to go to a place of plain John Smith. A Cabinet Minister cannot go for a stroll without having detectives watch his every movement. Mr. Asquith and Mr. Akquith played a game of golf surrounded by no fewer than six plain-clothes men.

After all, the position of plain John Smith has its points.

THE NAVY'S DIRIGIBLE

An Accident Has Occurred to Delay the Launching of the Mysterious Craft

Few undertakings have been responsible for more disappointments than the rigid dirigible balloon that is being built at Barrow for the Navy. Early in the year it figured in the War Secretary's statement in the House of Commons as evidence of the Army Council's attentiveness to the subject of aerial navigation. At frequent intervals it has been described in the newspapers, usually in the abundant terms of appreciation, which, in connection with aeronautical matters, the public appear to love. Thus, the size, speed, cost, armament and general utility of the new vessel, were all tremendous. It was being built under an armed guard, its secrets evidently being of the highest import, and so on, for the past ten months.

It now appears certain that the launching will not take place this month, there has been an accident by which part of the vessel has been destroyed.

COMPLICATED SUIT FOR $2,200,000

Edmonton, Alta., June 6.—Claims for damages aggregating $2,200,000 are being prepared to be filed against the Province of Alberta in connection with the Alberta and Great Waterways case. The whole matter gets more and more complicated. At present the Province is suing the Royal Bank of Canada for the $6,000,000 of Alberta and Great Waterways money deposited with it. It has also taken action to get possession of the remaining $1,600,000 deposited in other banks. So far as can be seen at present the struggle will be a long one, especially with the added complications.

Meanwhile, the province completely being made that Premier Sifton has decided to invest $1,000,000 in Great Morgan in London. Mr. Morgan is known well enough to have left countenance to the Alberta and Great Waterways project.

Moulders' Strike at London.

London, June 6.—As the result of the action of the moulders at the Vulcan foundry, the men have left their tools, all London moulders were called out by resolution last night. The Vulcan granted a nine-hour day. The Walker McClay Company is now working five hours.

Black Maria Bumped by Car.

Toronto, June 6.—The Black Maria load of prisoners who were on their way to the court house from the Don Jail yesterday were jiggled and bumped and thrown unceremoniously by a car striking the Black Maria, is one of the claims made by the Attorney-General of Quebec in an action against the Montreal Street Railway.

The statement of claim asked for in the suit is $2,077,43. This is principally for damage to the Black Maria, but a certain portion of the amount is for damages to the prisoners.

Despite the fact that the Government had a number of people at the time, none of them were called as witnesses, and of them have died in their time and disappeared a long ago.

The collision took place March 2, 1909. The company pleaded that the accident arose from circumstances which they could not control, slippery rails, which would not hold. Mr. Justice Lafontaine took the case on demurrer.

Bible Agent Arrested.

Ottawa, June 6—Mayor Fontaine of Ottawa explains the arrest of Henry Lanette of the Kirkin Bible, of Dutch Baptist Mission, stating that it was necessary that it should have a peddler's license to legally sell Bibles from door to door, and that he carried a circular offering $300 to any one who could prove that the Bible story was immaculate or that the Pope was never married.

The incident is creating a great deal of religious feeling in Hull.

In Gay Paree.

Paris, June 6.—The "Magic City," a vast American amusement park on the Seine, in the suburb of Puteaux, the "Dreamland" of Coney Island, was thrown open to the public the last night. It is situated on the left bank of the Seine, opposite the Alma.

Despite the bad weather a lightning show and the wires and partially cut off the Eiffel Tower, thousands of Parisians who were present at the opening ceremony of the park pronounced it a most artistic open air entertainment.

DOUBLE SYSTEM OF FIRE PROTECTION IS ASSURED FOR KENT STREET

(Council)

Mr. J. D. Flavelle, chairman of the Water commissioners spoke about laying the new fire system on Kent-st. The present pipes were found so far, no doubt be ascertained and the number of hydrants now installed amply sufficient to satisfy the fire underwriters but it would be a far greater protection and prevent a holocaust should the other system burst.

It will cost between $3000 & $4000 to install, and those along Kent-st. should not have to pay all the rate on improvement but the town alliance should assist. There would be three hydrants placed on the system. Mr. Flavelle said that the cons. did not rest on the water commissioners as the old system was alright. It rested with the town whether it wanted to pay $120. a year to double protect the main street.

Mayor Beal insisted that the commissioners were responsible since he believed the present system was erected since it signaled up Kent-st. to escape wells. However, if eight hydrants were sufficient why load the street with more. This additional expenditure rested to the Water Commissioners.

Mr. Flavelle said it was absurd to say that, $4 a year for $4000.

Dep. Reeve Dobson liked the duplicate system but said that there were many citizens who lived a fine protection or water service, who would have to pay.

Mr. Flavelle said that should Kent-street burn it would mean a heavier tax on these very people anyway, besides nearly everybody is more or less interested in the welfare of Kent-st. and should appreciate its enormous value to the town.

Mr. James Bryan said that there was no other part of the water system put down as badly as that on Kent-st. and the matter should be considered before a decision is reached. The Mayor says the system is rotten so something must be done. The town and council should work hand in hand about it.

Dr. Vrooman.—The Mayor wanted the committee appointed to confer with the water commissioners to meet in the council chamber first and have everything agreed upon beforehand. It should not have been done. He thought it would be better to have the double system and be safe.

Dep. Reeve Dobson.—The committee were negligent not to meet the water commissioners as they should have.

The Mayor answered that they should meet first as the property owners should see their heads and not their feet alone.

Why not, if hydrants when 7 are sufficient Dr. Vrooman wanted the old committee disbanded so Ald. Babcock pleased, the Mayor, Messers Nay-lor Lewis and McLory and Dobson to meet to-day at 10 o'clock.

A special meeting of the representatives from the town council and water commissioners met this morning that they might come to some arrangement as to the water main on the south side of Kent-st. There were present from the council, Mayor Beal Ald. Naylor Lewis and Dobson, and from the water commissioners Messrs Flavelle, Brady, and Bozall.

Ald. Naylor was chairman of the meeting.

After discussion it was resolved that an additional watermain on the south side of Kent-st., was desirable that three hydrants of large capacity and of modern construction should be placed on the south side of Kent-st. with the understanding that the town would have the right of removing 3 of the hydrants at present on the north side of Kent-st. to another part of the system where hydrants may be needed.

THE BLAZE WAS BOX CAR

This morning, about four o'clock, the fire team was called to attend a fire near the freight shed. It was found that an empty box car had, in some mysterious manner become ignited, and was well in flame. On such a windy night a fire in so close proximity to the freight shed and freight car full of freight would prove decidedly dangerous, but it was soon gotten under control. Any freight contents thought to be too close, were moved away by the yard engine. The origin of the fire is unknown but as there was nothing in the car, the cause is attributed to tramps.

More Drunks Than Ever

Montreal, June 6.—There was a record number of drunks and disorderly conduct brought before Recorder Weir yesterday. Out of a list of 80 cases sixty-one were for drunkenness.

Chief Campeau stated that since the early closing law had gone into effect there had been a large number of "third-place" opened in the congested district, and that the "third" boarding houses were finding it profitable to lay in a good supply of liquor for consumption at greatly increased rates after the saloons had closed for the night.

Sunday night there was much liquor sold on the streets and in the saloons that were still open. The constables charged with seeing that the closing law is enforced, find it almost impossible to catch the illegal sellers. When the liquor is stored in houses, on which places being raided, the owner declares it was there there yesterday for his own use and he has to be set at liberty.

Constables declare that drunkenness has greatly increased in all parts of the city. Magistrate Weir—We cannot catch the offenders in the act of selling liquor, but it is very easy for us to see by the number of persons who are brought in that they are at work." The police claim also that many dens in the city where liquor is sold, are now more frequented than ever.

French Cruiser Goes Ashore

Kingston, June 8.—In thick weather at 6.30 o'clock yesterday morning, the cruiser Niobe, D'Entre, commanded by Capt. Proulet, struck on George's Island, off the end of the Royal Military College. Six hours later she floated off without assistance, and it is believed no damage whatever, even her paint apparently not being rubbed off. Her bottom was made of help from towing steamers and the Dominion Government dredge Leviathan, but these were declined with thanks. Capt. Proulet ordered the cruiser to have the forward water ballast to be pumped out and the anchors and chain moved.

The warship struck three hours before high water and floated three hours after high tide, the water being at the height of tide when she slipped off as when she touched. Pilot John Hayes was on board, having been taken on outside the harbor.

George's Island is in the centre of the harbor. The only explanation for the accident is that the pilot of fog was unable to see clearly over the harbor that it was impossible to see ahead and the pilot misjudged his position. He thought he was west of the channel, whereas he was east and in feeling his way up going very slowly, he struck a fog bank off St George's Island and it had been heard ringing its bell for some time. The ship was carried to the westward, and in that direction there is another parallel east and became unintelligible. Not a soul on board. There will be an investigation.

WHITBY ACCEPTS SEYMOUR POWER

Whitby, June 5.—Whitby electors gave majorities to two important bylaws upon which they voted today. One was to ratify and agree with the Seymour Electric Power Company to supply power to the town. This was carried almost unanimously. The second bylaw was to establish a free library. In connection with the latter a keen contest was waged, the opposition being led by the Reeve of the town. The majority in favor of the library was 125.

AN AGED LADY INJURED SHOULDER

Mrs. James, an aged lady residing on Regent-st., tripped over a wire on her lawn, Friday evening, and dislocated her right shoulder. A local physician attended her injuries, and she is suffering considerable pain.

The town roller is attacking the William street road south of Kent-st. today. This street has been rather badly cut up, on account of a water main being laid, so that the roller was badly needed. Kent street has been slightly improved between Adelaide and Sussex-sts., and was a long wished for betterment.

NO CLOCK YET FOR POST OFFICE

(Council)

A letter was read from the Post Office Department in regard to the installation of a clock in the Post Office, saying that it was a matter that the Public Works department alone could deal with it. It had been forwarded to them for consideration.

The public works replied that no arrangement had been taken in the estimates for the current year for this purpose, it would be impossible to meet the request in question. Messrs. Senator McHugh and R. J. Mc Laughlin, K.C. are endeavoring to have the matter consummated satisfactorily for the town.

MILK BY-LAW FAILED TO PASS

(Council)

The milk bylaw also did not go through, on account of division of opinion. It included everyone who owned a sangue cow, and schedule so to neighbors, to get rid of their surplus supply as well as the regular milk vendors. The bylaw provided for a $10 and $5 yearly fee not to bind-in people, but to include them under the act and have the stables and milk stands inspected. The matter was held over for the next meeting.

PETERBORO OPINION ON L.C.I. GAME

The Peterboro Collegiate Institute had to come from behind to win the return game with the Lindsay Collegiate ball team at Riverside park, on Saturday afternoon, but when they did get under way they cut loose with a vengeance, drove pitcher "Tubby" Williamson to the woods and the engagement ended 19 to 5 in favor of the local students. Before the aviation event referred to, the Lindsay team was running along smoothly in front with the score of 5-0 in their favor. Stan Cresswell pitched fine ball for the winners striking out ten while Williamson had nine fans to his credit and Brown, who succeeded him, two. The fielding feature was contributed by Roy Dixon, the local third-baseman, who leaped into the air and pulled down a sizzling liner with one hand. There was a good crowd of fans present and they seemed to enjoy the game which was improved most satisfactorily by Mr. J. J. Thompson,—Examiner.

The Lindsay Collegiate team did not show any real reason in their game here with the local Collegians Saturday afternoon, at Riverside when they should have defeated the latter 16-7. In Lindsay, one week previous. Though the visitors got away to a good start in the early part of the play, scoring three runs in the first inning, but they failed to keep up the pace. In fact they seemed to be a very ordinary gang of ball players with the exception of two of the homesters. Of course, the pitching had a great deal to do with the result, for the local lobed dispenser had speed, a variety of shoots and plenty of control, gave passes to only three men in a game, and striking out ten Lindsay men. "Tubby" Williamson didn't have much the locals couldn't solve once they got started, and he was forced to retire in the eighth in favor of Brown, who didn't have very good control.—Review.

BEWARE OF LAND SHARKS

Editor of The Post.—

Sir.—As it has been reported supposedly for a set purpose, that I am one of the many, who have been blindly investing in such wild-cat speculation, kindly permit me to inform your readers, that there is not a grain of truth in the said report.

A year ago, while in Winnipeg, a friend there, (a high official in taking), advised me to be very careful, should I be considering a purchase in that city or its suburbs. To buy while on the ground, to me appears very risky business to the initiated, to buy such lands or lots from agents, who now secur the consent their paper plan representation, surely bring disappointment and regret.

I have so little confidence in business and is the majority of settlers, that they are not allowed the farm, if known as such.

Just one instance will show possible and probable outcome blind buying. An acquaintance secured two lots in Chicago a some two years ago, considered self lucky when the first years were only $12. The second year improvements ran taxes up to such that was paid, for the third years tax bill was largely over he let go and the lots with prepaid taxes, went up in the sold Way! Oh why will people trust ute strangers who give promi wonderful increase of value in months or a year while in the after instance the careful saw lars.—that all-are taken of them by most plausable but ing representations.

Last night, shortly after eleven o'clock, a fire alarm summoned the brigade to a fire in an unoccupied cottage on Durham-st opposite the station. When the brigade arrived on the scene the blaze was making considerable headway in the rear of the house. A stream was brought to bear from the hydrant at the corner of Williams and Durham-sts, and after a stubborn fight, the flames subdued the flames. The kitchen was badly damaged by the fire, which had extended its way between the walls.

The fire was of incendiary origin. Several young men now a suspicious character coming away from the house, and hurry along Durham-st east.

The house has been occupied for some months, and is the property of Mrs. Copeland.

Shocking Death Saturday Lindsay Citizen Electrocuted

Mr. John McGillivray, of the Light Heat & Power Co., Met an Untimely Death—Was Working on the Line When the Unfortunate Accident Occurred—His Death Regretted by Lindsay Citizens

A deplorable accident occurred on Saturday afternoon about 2.30 o'clock when Mr. John McGillivray, foreman of the Lindsay Light Heat and Power Co. met a untimely death by being electrocuted on the top of a pole, near the corner of Kent and Angeline-sts, and opposite the Ross Hospital.

The unfortunate man with his helper, Mr. Ranson, was installing new transformers. He was working on the pole and had the guy wire wound twice around it leaving a long end, which turned over and grounded on a cross arm. McGillivray was killed instantly and it is estimated that about a thousand volts passed through his body.

Ranson, who was working in a tree nearby, thought he heard a slight groan, and is looking towards McGillivray noticed the unfortunate man dangling in death. He immediately threw himself from the tree, hoping to render what assistance he could but McGillivray had slipped down the pole within fifteen feet of the ground Ranson reached the lineman by by loosening the belt and after placing it on the ground summoned several nurses from the hospital as well as Drs. Brown and Blanchard (coroner). There was not the faintest sign of life and a burn, about the size of a fifty cent piece, was found on the left about two inches from the elbow told the story of his tragic death.

The remains were removed to Anderson & Nugent's undertakers, and later on were taken to the family residence, Wilson-st.

The news of the distressing accident spread like wildfire throughout the town and evoked expressions of the sincerest regret and sympathy. Deceased perhaps, was so well known as Mr. McGillivray, and yet was some time before the people realized the truth of the affair.

It was however at the family residence that the news brought the greatest sorrow. "Jack" as he was familiarly known, loved his family and was their intelligence was conveyed to his wife and children and his father that death had claimed him. Words fail to describe the heartrending in the extreme. Kind friends will all in their power to assuage that grief but only those who have suffered as they have done, can realize what it meant to them.

The late Mr. McGillivray was born in Morrison about forty years ago, and was a son of Mr. Neil McGillivray, who resides with him. The family afterwards moved to Fenelon Falls, where the deceased was married as mill-wright. He worked in the Glove Bros. Mills awhile and was looked upon as a most capable workman.

In 1899 he accepted a position with the Light Heat and Power Co. and constructed the line from Fenelon to Lindsay His eleven years' service with the company were marked by a faithfulness of duty combined with a thorough knowledge of the important work assigned to him. The company had in Mr. McGillivray a valuable official, whose place it will be extremely difficult to fill at the present time.

"Jack" was a whole souled good natured citizen and was held in the highest esteem by all who knew him. He was a man of good character, kind to his family and aged father, to whom the sympathy of the entire community goes out in their hour of sorrow.

The late Mr. McGillivray is survived by his wife, (who was Miss Elizabeth Wright of Fenelon Falls) two daughters, Mable and Gertrude, and his aged father, Neil McGillivray. He was a member of Kalhedral Lodge, Lodge A.F. & A.M. Lindsay Lodge I. O.O.F. and the curling club. He was a valuable member of the choir and holding the position of Lieutenant in that organization. In religion he was a Methodist, being a member of the Queen-st. Methodist Church.

On Saturday afternoon a Post representative accompanied the late Mr. McGillivray to the Ross Hospital along Kent-st, as far as Robson's grocery. The deceased talked and joked in his usual jovial manner and referred to the recent fire on Durham-st, and at Sinclair's factory. On parting at the corner he shook hands with the writer and said when there was one fire there was generally three. "I might get a call any time" were the last words he uttered.

The funeral of the deceased took place from the family residence Wilson-st. north at 10.30 o'clock. It was conducted by Faithful Brethren Lodge A.F. & A.M. and was largely attended by the members and the citizens. Funeral services were conducted at the house by Rev. James Wallace W. M. of Faithful Brethren Lodge after which the cortge proceeded to the G. T. R. station when the remains were taken to Fenelon Falls. The members of the Fire Brigade all marched from the family residence to the station. The pall bearers were Bros. H. Williamson, W. Warren, W. Ashley, W. H. Cresswell, F. Webster, Joseph Hill, G. Pratt.

The floral tributes were many and were beautiful in design. The following are an incomplete list. Faithful Brethren Lodge, Masonic emblem, I. O. O. F. lodge, emblem, Light Heat and Power co. employees, bouquet of flowers, Bell Telephone Co., wreath of roses; Sisters of Rebakah, an anchor, Fire Department, a wreath, Mr. and Mrs. H. Stoddard, spray, the bereaved family, a pillow; Miss Edmonds, a spray, Mr. W. E. Rennor, spray, Mr. and Mrs. Crawford, wreath, Corinthian Lodge, I. O. O. F. GOOD ADVICE ON CIVIC BEAUTIFICATION

A western exchange gives good advice to citizens in the following short snappy suggestions. They may well be taken to heart by citizens of Lindsay.

Plant a tree,
Make ours a spotless town.
Help to beautify the backyard.
Join the Horticultural Society.

If each individual householder keeps his own yard clean, plants trees shrubs and flowers and grass seed on his own lot, there will be no cause to complain about the appearance of the city as a whole.

Get the habit of NOT walking across the city boulevards and of NOT throwing waste paper on the streets.

Get the habit of regarding the city parks and boulevards as your own property and do what you can personally—and encourage others to do likewise—to keep them looking their best.

If you have not already made a start, start to-day, to do your share towards having our own town looking its best.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT TO PETERBORO BOY

A very serious accident occurred Tuesday night about half past seven to little John Begley, five years of age, son of Mr. Thomas Begley, Cambridge street, when he fell from the second story of a new house which is being completed on Fredericksst, and although the extent of his injuries is not known fully, the doctors think that his arm is out in the socket in the shoulder and that there is concussion of the brain. He is in St. Joseph's Hospital, where he was conveyed in the Tim Sipson ambulance last night, and at six o'clock this morning he was still unconscious.

The occurrence in the neighborhood of the house of Mr. Begley, who is a new house, and Tuesday night, accompanied by some others, the young boy was in the second story of the house. He climbed out through one of the windows on to the scaffolding, and in the second story, alighting, it is supposed, on his shoulder. Nobody but one had saw the accident. An examination at the hospital revealed the shoulder bone to be broken.

At three-thirty Wednesday afternoon, the patient was still under chloroform. Review.

FORMER LINDSAY CITIZEN TAKES LIFE
PERSONAL FRIEND OF JOE CHAMBERLAIN

The following despatch from Hamilton refers to a man, who was a former resident of Lindsay. He was employed here about two years ago and boarded at the Y.M.C.A. He left Lindsay in the summer of 1909 for Hamilton, where he had secured a position. During his residence here, he became greatly interested in examining the clay thrown up during the excavations made at the Young house for the new Hotel, installed by Mr. J. Howard Bridge. It was similar, he claimed, to that found in the Kalahari diamond mines. South Africa and he believed at the time, that diamonds would be found in this district. He was a man of splendid education, and an interesting conversationalist. The despatch is as follows:

Hamilton, June 1.—W. A. Hicks, a man about 50 years old, and a native of New Zealand, committed suicide in Hickory Beach this afternoon, by taking cyanide. Despondency over ill-health, and loss of his wealth, and position is indicated by notes found on his person, as the cause of the deed. Newspaper clippings, which were found on his person indicate that he at one time was a man of considerable prominence in the old country, leaving Campsigned on several occasions with Joe Chamberlain. He had also apparently been wealthy, but had lost all his money in a patent right swindle, and in speculation. He was an expert chemist, and was supposed to possess the secret of preserving eggs for a year or more. Hicks was a Mason and a Spiritualist. In a letter to Rev. Thomas Spowers, he expressed his intention of holding communion with the latter after death, if possible, promising to transmit an eternal return to earth the name of Imbera Nem de Phirne, under which he had done considerable writing. Ellis was not widely known here, the only information obtainable about him here being gleaned from the clippers found on his person, and from Mr. Spawers. He has a brother living in Birmingham England, who has been notified of the man's death. No inquest will be held.

LINDSAY'S REPRESENTATIVES ON OCEAN
SERGT. RUSSEL HENLEY HEARD FROM

The Post is in receipt of another letter from Mr. Russel Henley, the Post's representative on the carnonal contingent. He writes as follows:—

Quebec, May 28, 911.

As I was in the city to-day I thought it the best time to write each Everything is fine here, and we have a good camp, though awfully hard work There are sixteen lines of tents six tents in each line, and the men are distributed everywhere. Some tents have six men and some three. There are rows of tents to each Company, besides a cook and mess tent. The officers are quartered in tents from the camp down at the store house.

There are about seven buildings here altogether but the grounds are small. Our Company, "D" is down Begley Gate the lot, 82 men. Our Capt. is Major Hendrie, and our Lieutenants are two men from Ottawa. Sergt. Legg, of Toronto barracks, is drill instructor, and he is a "corker" to make you work. We drilled yesterday afternoon from a quarter past two till a quarter past five with two rests of about five minutes. Everybody was supplied with big kit bags, helmets, tunics, two pair of boots, suit of khakhi service clothing, water bottle plate knife, fork, spoon and cup, and haversack. The helmets are Worsley style with the gogeyes, that is thick strips of cloth wound round them about six inches, each round lapping the other by about a half inch.

We go in for a tour with Mitchell and Prestige and three other men from London Two of the fellows came in during the other night and routed up everything in the camp.

We are using Ross rifles and bayonets, and the drill is mostly rifle drill and marching. We are allowed out of the camp every night and we can stay as long as we like. The camp was crowded to St. Matthews Church of England on Sunday morning for church parade, in the afternoon the Regiment crossed on the ferry and got back to camp about 8.15 this afternoon. Quite a crowd of Quebecers followed us to the camp, and we had a good time. We have taken the morning, and in England each man is going to be presented with a medal from the king. The ceremony will take place the day after the review, when the king will personally present the medal and the Princess of Wales, Queen Mary and Queen Alexandra will be in the grandstand. Each man was given an invitation card on a swell Canadian banquet at London under which the presentation of medals was on the back of it.

The first thing they did in camp was the medical examination. The Ex. said we were fine, only some had to be vaccinated.

The men here are a good crowd and the drill is fine. There is a company of Gordon Highlanders from Toronto and they are great on parade. At the chinese dinner this morning they were pretty swell, with white leggings, Scottish kilts, and big fur topped bonnets.

Well I must close for now as it is getting nearly time to start back to camp, I get to bed just as soon as possible then I get up and am mighty glad to get there too.

COULDN'T GET TO CORONATION

Bobcaygeon Independent: Sir James Whitney has gone to England, to attend the coronation. Mr. Adolphus Smiff, the man who writes the leading articles for this great journal, received a very pressing invitation from George to be sure and come over for the fandago, that the stringy of the Pahoe catch was always outside for Smiff, and he guess he would always aired, but the old hag could not go. The fishing season opens on the 15th for one thing, and the potatoes have to be sitting around the bushes and watching for the taters to Big Plant for Hamilton.

Hamilton, June 4—The report of R. J. Allan, president of Westinghouse Company, that it expects to formulate a plan and prepare estimates on Hamilton's proposed municipal light and power system, was given out yesterday.

Mr. Allan's report provides for a complete plant, with power for industrial street, commercial and residence lighting and power supply of 1,000 horsepower at a total cost of $502,000. NEW WESTMINSTER MAN MURDERS WIFE MOTHER WAS FOUND DEAD BY SON

New Westminster, B.C., June 5.—Harry Jobes, machinist's helper, 427 Eleventh street, murdered his wife early yesterday morning. The murder was committed by his son, William Jobes, who, when he went to work in the morning, found his father had bought a revolver the previous day. He immediately hurried home. Entering the house he was horrified to see his mother lying dead on the floor, a bullet embedded being by her head, from which it had passed through the right temple wounds, one under the right ear and one in each temple.

The police who examined the body stated death was instantaneous. The murder took place Friday night.

It has been learned that Jobes attempted to kill his wife on May 25, but was prevented by his son, who took the revolver away from him. This incident was reported to the police. After this attempt, Jobes left the house and lived elsewhere in the city. Jobes has not yet been arrested, but the police expect to find him at Mill Bridge and he found in some barroom. He is about 50 years of age and came here from England March 1.

SECLUDED WOMEN

Curious Experiences in India—How Evidence is Given by Women In Court

Sir Andrew Fraser, ex-Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, tells some curious stories in his book, Among Indian Rajahs and Ryots.

While hearing a civil case in which a lady of considerable property was required to give evidence, "a day was fixed, and she was brought to Court. She came in a palanquin or palanquin, which, despite its name, was nothing else than a very small and uncomfortable hut carried on a bamboo pole. One could hardly understand how it was possible for her to be in it at all, much less comfortable. It had been carried into a room of the Zenana and left on the floor. After all the people were away, she had come, attended by her women, and had taken her place in a big chair in a room that covered one side of the box (till the real being of wood and iron) was opened and securely fastened. Her nearest male relative stood by her chair, and, when removed from her room, and walked with it towards the Court, the chair was brought into the Court, it was opened, and she was handed over to the counsel on both sides whether they were satisfied that the lady in side the box was the witness whom it was desired to examine. After considering with those who had accompanied her, and addressing a question or two to the lady, they replied that they were satisfied. I then put certain questions to her, and she answered them—clear, intelligent, and

DARING BRIDGE BUILDERS

The Construction of the Niagara Bridge Recalled

Notwithstanding the great height at which the men worked in replacing the Niagara Suspension Bridge above a machine-shop, which accounts for have been impossible, most of them were grave, unemployed, and some of them, indeed, vied with one another in fighting drinking.

So—many valuable tools were flung into the bridge that some of the more careless were discharged. Nevertheless, one day, when a man dropped a wrench 200 feet to the waiter's assistance, the wrench was recover it by climbing down hand over hand on a rope, mentioned this ultra cable nearly 500 feet long. He had no sooner begun his descent than some a rival, not to be outdone, started out of sheer bravado to descend an adjacent cable.

After going a few feet they tried to climb back, and it seemed to be a horrified companions on the bridge saw that human nature could not endure the increasing strain of their situation. The foreman tried to make them how to climb more easily and what to do at the bottom, accompanying his orders with violent abuse, wisely hoisted to divert them from the fright that added to their danger. By pitching into the bridge miracle both men held on until they had crossed over the waters. Then, one of them watching his chance, dropped safely into a free loop. The other finally gave out and fell a considerable distance to the ground. But both escaped practically unhurt.

MATILDA'S MORALIZING

Outpourings Which Are Mere Notable For Common Sense Rather Than Wit

Matrimony is cheaper than courtship, and that's why men get married.

A bird in the oven is worth two in the bush.

A well-dressed man seldom means a disappointed woman.

When we find we can't, we say we don't want to.

Time is being allowed to that makes us want to do things.

Nothing ever ruined a robbery but die is a fine ornament.

Only the poor are hen-pecked by their husbands. That's why they're poor.

Relation's are useful people—in the summer, when we want to fan.

Some men work because they haven't inherited enough to live on.

The man who knows how to make money seldom knows how to spend it.

Some people are so believed in sending for samples before she gets married.

The people who feel so sure of a front seat in the next world are the people who send for the tickets.

Conscience is a thing where we can't see it, but we know it is there when we get.

If you're done something wrong, don't waste time repenting; do something useful.—M.A.P.

BIBLICAL IGNORANCE

Members of Parliament Who Have Heard Amusing Answers

Some interesting stories are told of members of the British House of Commons who are lacking in Biblical knowledge. For instance, in a debate a few years ago Mr. George Wyndham referred to David and his fifty fighting men he had in a cave. "Not David—Lazarus," interrupted Sir Edward Grey. "I am much obliged to my right honorable friend," continued Mr. Wyndham, "of course I meant Lazarus," as the House responded with laughter and shouts of "Oindah!"

A member in the House asked Sir Edward again about his Biblical knowledge, by speaking of the feeding of the prophets on bread and water, when Sir Wilfrid Evans (Liberal) revised everybody by suggesting that the prophets meant consisting of locusts and wild honey.

Certainly a few lessons on the Bible would have been useful to a good many statesmen, past and present. A member in the committee on the atrocity of putting Daniel in the lions' lions' den and made the Psalmist responsible for the words, "God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb." John Bright saddled St. Paul with the well-known aphorism, "Cleanliness is next to Godliness", and Lord John Russell made a touching reference to Pharaoh and his host struggling in the engulfing waters of the Jordan.

HYMENEAL

ANDERSON—SHORT.

Oakwood, June 2—On Thursday, June 1st, a quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized, when Miss Mar. Dorothy Jessie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald A. Anderson, was married in a lovely wedlock to Mr. Wilford E. Short, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Short, of Kerr Robert, Bank, formerly of Oakwood, Lindsay. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. N. Konkle, of Scotsy. Shortly after noon a cortège, the bride entered the parlor leaning on the arm of her father, pretty gowned in cream silk, trimmed with lace and insertion, and carried a bouquet of white carnations and sweet pea, and was escorted by her cousin, Miss Ethel Anderson, who was gowned in pale blue silk mull and lace, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The wedding music was rendered by Miss Katie Anderson, sister of the bride. At the conclusion of the ceremony, and congratulations extended, all repaired to the dining-room, where a dainty luncheon was partaken of. The happy couple left on the 4.40 train for Toronto, amid showers of rice and good wishes from their many friends. They were the recipients of many handsome presents, amongst them being a beautiful gold watch, the gift of the bride's parents.

On their return they will reside at Pleasant View farm, the home of the groom.

MARRIAGE MAXIMS

The following marriage maxims are worthy of more than a hasty reading: Husbands need not pass them by, for they are designed for wives, and wives should not despise them, for they are addressed to husbands:—The very nearest approach to domestic happiness on earth is in the cultivation on both sides of absolute unselfishness. Never talk at one another either alone or in company. Never talk to a child at one time, and then, when you are another, unless the house be on fire. Let each one strive to yield the most to the wishes of the other. Let self-denial be the daily aim and practice of each. Never find fault, unless it is perfectly certain that a fault has been committed, and always speak lovingly. Never taunt with a past mistake. Neglect the whole world besides rather than one another. Never allow a request to be repeated, nor even a remark at the expense of each other; it is unkindness. Never part for a day without loving words to think of during absence. Never retire without a loving welcome. Never let the sun go down upon any anger or grievance. Never let any fault you have committed go by until you have frankly confessed it and asked forgiveness. Never forget the happy hours of early love, never sigh over what might have been, but make the best of what is.

PLEURO-PNEUMONIA AND BRONCHITIS

Brought Mrs. Baker to Death's Door. Father Morrisey's No. 10 Saved Her.

Of the many hundreds of cures wrought by Father Morrisey's No. 10 (Lung Tonic) there are more remarkable than the saving of the life of Mrs. Jas. A. Baker, of 104 Rockland Road (North End), St. John, N.B. She wrote on Oct. 16, 1909:—

"I wish to express my gratitude that I am living to-day, and to thank you for the great benefit received from the use of your Lung Tonic. I had pleuro-pneumonia and bronchitis, and had been given up to die, and had my friends home in the City Hospital, and never expected to walk again. I was continually getting worse every day. I came home from the hospital and everything was catching me to die. I tried everything but there seemed to be no cure for me.

"I began taking Father Morrisey's No. 10, and the second day I could eat without pain. I used 22 bottles of No. 10, as I was run down right into consumption, and for six months was just a shadow and I began to use it, and now I am in good health, and surprised most of my neighbors by gaining so quickly. I feel it my duty to publish it everywhere I can, as with all I can say I cannot express it too highly—it was a life saver to me. I am very thankful to recommend it, as it is worth all it is said."

Father Morrisey's No. 10 is very different from the many preparations that simply relieve a cough. No. 10 relieves the cause of the cough, restores the membranes of throat and lungs to a healthy condition, and tones up the whole system, giving strength to resist future attacks.

PICTURE THEATRES ESCAPE HIGH LICENSE

Moving picture theatre proprietors are going to escape with a yearly license fee of fifty dollars instead of one hundred dollars as at first proposed by the by-law to effect has been passed, and alterations must now be made in the printed regulations that have been issued.

The license fee last year was $25, and in drawing up the regulations a year, it was proposed to advance the fee to one hundred dollars for the year, and to make an operators' fee $5. The order in council therefore has met the proprietors down, with an advance of $25. The operators, instead of having to pay $5 now secure a license which on payment of one dollar. The amount is payable, no matter when the license is taken out, but the proprietor pays only for the proportion of the license year remaining, when he starts operating.

The order in Council also provides that the censoring of films will not be commenced until July 1st.

TROOPS INSPECTED

Quebec, June 1.—On the historic Plains of Abraham yesterday afternoon, the entire contingent designated to represent Canada at the coronation of King George, with the exception of the detachment of the Northwest Mounted Police, who have all ready sailed, were inspected. The troops, including both mounted and dismounted divisions, made a fine showing, and large crowds of people assembled to witness the parade thro' the streets.

The troops arrived from the camp at St. Joseph de Levis in the morning and assembled on the terrace whence they marched out to the plains. They were minutely inspected by Adj. General, Lieutenant Colonel H. Mc. Leod, commander of the contingent, and other officers.

After the parade the men marched back to the ferry where they were embarked for the camp. We go on board the steamer, Empress of Ireland on Friday.

LONDON IS PREPARING FOR CORONATION DECORATIONS BEING RUSHED FORWARD

London, June 5—The usual dignity and stateliness of the British capital's public buildings, principal parks and streets, are being sacrificed to the demands of decoration workers and sightseers. The whole neighborhood of Parliament, including the Houses of Westminster Abbey and the Parliament Square, presents a hubbub and a naughty world-on stands, most of the work being rushed to completion. Abbey. The chief Government offices are being dressed in a hair raising attractive fashion. St. James's Park and Whitehall Gardens is similarly covered, as well as the principal streets through which the procession will pass.

Even the church yard presents a bustling appearance, the tombs and clubs on St. James street, Pall Mall, and Trafalgar Square, the Royal Horse Guards Hotel, near the entrance to the Park, is hair raised up by a wooden structure, and Hyde Park is being transformed into a camp for the troops. The southwestern section of the Park, which is usually a sleepy filled with tents and horses, a complete world of activity. Marquee has been built on all streets leading to the Park, to prevent the police may prevent too great crowds from accumulating and encroaching on that territory. Military bands are practicing and bugles are beginning to arrive. The many uniforms and the picturesque costume of Indian princes and chiefs will add to the gorgeous appearance. Thousands of Japanese and Americans will have no lodgers these days, since an immense amount of bedding has been polished, for the coronation. The collection of Japanese and Chinese curiosities in Whitehall are more effective than ever, because of the coronation, and masts with gilt crowns, evergreen garlands and red cups seen in Piccadilly, St. James Street, the Strand and other thoroughfares already offer promise of an artistic spectacle. The masts and columns are linked together by wire cables, and the Lord Mayor, and will supply a basis for the lack scheme of illumination over seen in London.

New Zealand's and other archways, are nearly finished, but the draperies will be kept back until the coronation week. In Westminster the decorations are costing $13,000 a mile, or more than $7 a yard, and will include ten thousand lamps in that distance.

Rehearsals of the coronation music have already begun in the church house. The principal novelties are a coronation anthem, "Behold, O God, the Lord," by Sir Frederick Bridge, with a refrain from the Litany, "Give Peace Days." At the end of the function "Te Deum," composed by Sir Hubert Parry and an offertory by them by Sir Edward Elgar, will be heard. These works have been tried as rehearsal, and Handel's "Zadok, the Priest" has been sung with orchestral accompaniment.

The master of the horse has ordered trials of the royal carriage horses during next week. The first general rehearsal of the principal tableaux in the Abbey will take place before another Saturday, with dummies in place of the King and Queen.

The Abbey is still filled with carpenters and litter, but the work remaining unfinished is chiefly concerned with decoration.

COUNTY POLICE COURT AT BOBCAYGEON

Bobcaygeon Independent: County Magistrate F. H. Morrow, held a court at the town hall last week and John Quigley who had a bit of a difference with John Alcock, was fined $2 and costs. Morrow, and Spier Lambert were all so before the court, being mixed up in an affray with Constable McMillan. The mix up arose out of a joke. Dan Morrow drew some goose grease in relation on the evening in question, and shortly after Mr. N. Tully, who was on the swing bridge at Lock Morrow in a joke, that McMullen had half a notion to put him for drawing boots. Before he could stop him, Morrow flew over the fence half, and Lambert said let what he meant, Words ensued, and a scrap, in which Lambert got involved. Mr. L. V. O'Connor, of Lindsay, appeared for Morrow and Lambert, and advanced to show that the whole affair was a misunderstanding. The magistrate, however, held that it was a serious matter to assault or interfere in any way with a constable in the administration of the law must be upheld. He would have to impose a fine of $2 and costs on Morrow and $10 and costs on Lambert. Much evidence was taken, and the case took a considerable time.

TWO HAMILTON ITALIANS DROWNED

Hamilton, June 5.—Frank Corona and Nicholas Rafaelo, two Italians, aged 19 and 18 years respectively were drowned in the bay at the mouth of the Grand River Canal here about 9.30 yesterday afternoon. The drowning occurred in 400 feet of water where at least six feet deep. In company with Frank Pellegrino, named Fred, Balducci, Gabriel Virgilio and Rafael Sorrento, the lads were swimming in the river, were rowing in the bay, when they attempted to change places, and capsized the boat, throwing all the occupants into the water. Pellegrino and Balducci, the boat owner, could swim, but Virgilio and Sorrento had to be rescued, and for a few minutes until assistance reached them, they had a hard time. Two drowned men were unable to get hold of the boat, and sank, and their bodies have since could not be found. Immediately after the boat was upset, were notified and Patrol Sergt. Crooks, Detectives Ward, Lamont, Clark and Mountain were despatched to the scene, and dragging for the bodies began, and about six o'clock the body of Corona was found to be near the surface and taken to the city morgue in the patrol wagon. Dragging for the other body was continued until dark, without success.

FATHER GAVE HIS LIFE FOR CHILDREN

Windsor, June 5—William Parsons, aged 39, a machinist employed in Detroit and whose home is at Fletcher, Ont., was carried into St. Mary's Hospital Saturday, his spine fractured, both legs broken and his body a mass of bruises, as a result of his heroic attempt to prevent a team of frightened horses from dashing into a crowd of children who were assembling a circus procession. Parsons died shortly after he was placed on the operating table, having literally given up his life to save the children, among the group being two of his own.

The accident occurred in Detroit on Jefferson avenue, near Beaubien street. Both sides of the street were lined with children, when the team of the steam calliope caused a team of horses, startled by a heavy truck, to take fright, and the driver was unable to control them. The animals made a wild dash straight for the crowd. Many of the children, happened to be standing nearby, and without hesitation he ran into the maddened horses, but was forced to leap his hold and fell to the pavement. The forward wheel of the truck passed over his legs and he was thrown across his back, breaking his spine. The team of horses was caught before doing any damage.

Parsons had resided in Detroit for some time, but leaves a wife and two children. The remains were taken to Fletcher Saturday night for interment.

CORONATION FASHIONS

Never has a year been so much open to criticism from the fashion point of view as the present one. The grand mourning occasioned by the death of the notorious harem skirt, which was cast aside as soon as ever the news came in. Later on a broad starting hack and white striped material was put on the market to be worn with a white satin coronation dress, and in the year the battle of the roses and lilies was to be fought, and there was to be a victory for neither and the ultimate effect was to be a compromise to the Queen's selection of that flower royal blue, and in the front an entirely out-trailed by an even narrower garment which will make progress of women almost an impossibility, although we are said to have passed through the stage of hobbles. Rumors that most with ridiculous from the waist are to be worn at the coronation, it is to be feared that we are to be scared by every dress that blows from the fashion centres Paris and London have to say, very vivid or sparkling; it is no uncommon thing to see a lady in hat with its crown covered with flowers of royal blue, and in the front an entirely feather of red, white and blue appears as the indication of what will be worn during June. All these things go to show the great change that has come over the fashion world in England, and if it continues we will have to thank Paris if not coronation for very much in this blending of artistic colors and designs.—Weekly Telegraph.

HON. MR. AYLESWORTH MAKES SPEECH WILL RUN IN CASE OF SUMMER ELECTION

Newmarket, June 5—If there is a dissolution of the fall the Hon Allan Aylesworth will probably be the Liberal candidate for North York. If Parliament runs its course he will carry out his intention to retire. That seems to be the situation in this riding after the nominations on Saturday. Mr. Aylesworth's speech was a vigorous defence of the Government and the Conservative party in the House of Commons. The Government would not dissolve Parliament unless the Opposition forced them to that extremity. Mr. Borden was not so much for a general election as the wild men, some uncontrolled and uncontrollable in the Tory ranks would prefer.

Sir Alan declared himself in favor of applying the gag.

"The Government has no intention of bringing on an election at the present time," he stated. "That is not going to happen, you may take it as coming from me, unless the public business of this country is delayed or by obstructed so that it cannot be carried on by the men you send to Ottawa to do your work.

"If His Majesty's loyal Opposition wants an election, they can have it; they know how to get it.

"Bring on your election if you like, and we shall turn our backs to them. We are perfectly prepared to meet them on this question of reciprocity, and to beat them." (Loud applause.)

The situation does not not worry Mr. Borden. It rest with the will of the people, who sometimes get into trouble men who sit about him, who have by their constantly talking for themselves, who play the act of Samson, and pull the house down about their ears.

When the nomination was called Eugene Lambert, nominated the name of the Minister of Justice with the provision added that in the event of Sir Alan not being able to contest the election, J. C. Robinson, K.C., should be the Liberal standard-bearer without a further convention. John McCabe King, seconded the motion, which was received with cheers and long applause.

SOME USEFUL HINTS

A solution of salts or lemon appuice with a camel-hair brush will remove marking-ink from linen.

Linoleum may be kept bright by using sweet milk and water to wash it, is also a good preservative.

A little cold tea used occasionally to wash plants helps to keep the soil rich and free from worms.

Pelican bills and bed-screws may rub with dry salt on a piece of coarse flannel. This does not injure the ware.

Starch made with weary water prevents the iron from sticking and imparts a glossy surface to shirt-fronts and cuffs, etc.

To keep windows bright in summer time, they should be well cleaned and rubbed with newspapers. Polish lightly with a clean dry cloth.

If tea or coffee stains are spilled over tablecloth, cover at once with common salt, which will absorb it, and washed the stains will be entirely gone.

Turpentine is excellent for getting rid of beetles. Sprinkle about plentifully, they will fly away, but cockroaches and other insects also have a hatred of it.

Curtains that have become yellow may be made white again by boiling for half an hour in strong soap-suds which is half milk and half water, then wash in the usual way.

Deliberately Shot at Greeks.

Woburn, Mass., June 3.—Deliberately shot at Greeks by Patrolman Louis Vincenzo, an Italian, shot and killed Thomas Canlassa, and fatally wounded John Calianass and Wolmar Kalliopolis, Charles Hanson, the farm of Ellis H. Marshall here was driven out of sanitorium by the woods before the astonished laborers and witnesses of the tragedy realized what had taken place. The police are searching for the murder within a short time and last night the woods near Woburn, Winchester and Arlington were scoured by a posse.

Fifteen farm hands were resting in one of the farm buildings during noon hour. Thomas Calianass was talking to a fellow countryman when Vincenzo is said to have drawn a revolver and started firing, no doubt because the Greeks were employed instead of Italians is given as the cause of Vincenzo's attack.

Ignored Protest of Typos.

Toronto, June 2.—The Trades and Labor Council held its regular meeting at the Labor Temple last night and discussed many matters, although little action of any kind was taken. The report of the legislation committee declared that the Government inspectors had disregarded the Typographical Union's latest protest against poor lead gas protectors in some local printing houses. One of the members had heard that one of the Government inspectors had asked: "What fool wrote that letter?"

Sick of the Job.

Ottawa, June 3.—Already one census commissioner has got sick of his job and given it up. He is W. P. Purney, at Sydney, Cape Breton, N.S. Fred Freeman replaces him.

The civil service commission is calling for applications for the office of Dominion agriculturist, to draw an initial salary of $2,100. The office of assistant live stock commissioner is also looking for an occupant.

Seized Two Miles of Nets.

Brockville, June 3.—Fish and Game Overseer George Turner has shipped to the sectional headquarters in Belleville 19 sets of 32-foot gill nets and two set of hog nets, the fruit of the seizures from illegal fishermen on the St. Lawrence for the month of May. These would aggregate in length almost two miles.

ANOTHER LETTER ON POWER QUESTION CITIZEN CALLS FOR INVESTIGATION

To the Editor of The Post

Dear Sir,—

I have read carefully the Report of the Hydro-Electric Company on the local power plant published in your paper of May 26th, and it seems to me that before the town of Lindsay would bind itself for three hundred thousand dollars for the purchase of this property, some considerable further investigation ought to be made.

I find from the report, that the largest amount of power ever used at one time, during last year, was nine hundred and ten H.P., but that the average amount of power used, was only eleven hundred and fifty-five H.P.

It is well known to the people of Lindsay, notwithstanding the fact, that the total average power brought to Lindsay, by the Light, Heat, and Power Co. is less than four hundred H.P., the following the dry seasons, there have been times when the Co. have been scarce of water at Fenelon Falls, and have to supply their entire power. Therefore, before purchasing this power, it seems to me that a careful investigation should be made, to find what the minimum flow of water is, that is, what the flow of water is during the dry season of the year. I believe, that practically no measurements have even been taken of Fenelon Falls, and it is impossible for the engineers of the Hydro-Electric Commission, or anybody else, by merely making an examination in the spring time to tell what the flow is in October and November, or during dry period of winter months. In order to find this out, accurately, measurements would have to be taken at different times over a period of years, but this, of course, is probably impossible at present, but it is not impossible, but only prudent to let the matter stand until the first of January next, and to have measurements made of the flow during the summer and fall months. If, and we know the power company have had a scarcity of water in supplying an average of less than four hundred H.P., it would seem to be reckless for us to expect that we can get an average of one thousand seven hundred H.P., the only proof of which is an inspection of the flow of water in the spring time.

RE STORAGE.

There is a great deal of loose talk about the extensive storage system, and its importance in increasing the minimum flow of the river.

The waters stored in the winter on the Lakes and Gull and Burnt rivers are largely used up in bringing down the lumbermen's drives in the Spring. Whatever additional amount can be stored during the June rains, is required to keep up the height of water for navigation purposes, and is invariably and entirely exhausted by the fifteenth of November. We know that every year there has been a difficulty in keeping up the level of Sturgeon Lake because there was not sufficient storage to do this.

There is absolutely no storage left for use in the Fall and Winter when the water is often scarce.

The powers at Peterboro have then the advantage of the storage at Stuart, Pigeon, Clyde, Chemong, Buckhorn Bear, Loveick, Stony Lakes and Jack's Lake, while only the addition of water that Fenelon Falls can use is what may be run off Balsam Lake.

All I would say on this point is, let there during the present season be a careful estimate made from time to time by competent engineers, of the waters coming down at Fenelon Falls, and if it is found that there is sufficient for the purpose of Lindsay let the town buy the power. If it is found not sufficient, then the town should not make the mistake of paying a larger amount of money on the under estimate, for a greater amount of power costs than there really is.

The report of the engineers of the Commission says, "Up to the present time the plant has never suffered from shortage of water." We in Lindsay know that the engineers have been misinformed. They also state that the Light Heat and Power Company are entitled to three-fourths of the power at Fenelon Falls. We also know that they are misinformed again and the Village of Fenelon Falls is entitled to one-fourth plus one hundred horse power, so that there is a mistake of one hundred horse power in that, and the Village of Fenelon Falls again is placed at twenty-six feet, which, I understand, is about two feet higher than it actually stands. This is a matter that ought to be verified. The Hydro-Electric engineers have taken the word of the vendors for all these matters.

If the additional power does not exist at Fenelon Falls, the doubling of the plant as suggested would be power and money wasted, and the amount of expense is too large to be incurred without a thorough investigation.

The commission estimate that under the present condition, there would be an annual surplus of over ten thousand dollars per year. This will make no provision for about seventeen hundred dollars taxes which will have to be paid to the Village of Fenelon Falls and which will likely increase from time to time.

It makes no provision for anything except the loss of taxes to the town of Lindsay itself, and the depreciation charge of four thousand four hundred and sixty four dollars, is altogether too low for a plant of the age of the Lindsay plant, a large proportion of which will have to be re-built in the next ten or twenty years. It makes no provision for giving the people of Lindsay a fair light rate. If the light rate of the town of Lindsay were reduced twenty-five per cent as it should be and these other matters taken into consideration, the surplus would entirely disappear. The annual total received is put at thirty-seven thousand, five hundred and forty-nine dollars, some of this, no doubt, is ob, tained from the sale of lamps, fixtures and supplies. There is nothing put in the estimate for the cost of these. After the additional seventy thousand dollars is expended, according to the report, the estimated saving would be five Thousand and seventy dollars This would entirely be wiped over and it would be seen that there would be a considerable deficit if the people of Lindsay were given a reasonable light rate, but it appears from the report that the undertaking is not to give the people of Lindsay, a fair light rate, but for the town to pay its taxing them seven or eight thousand dollars a year more than they should pay.

Are the citizens satisfied to do this? They have been paying heavy taxes to the Co. for a number of years. Is it fair for them now to have to pay such a price for the property that will compel them to go on paying the heavy tax for the future? I noticed also in the new estimate that the item of taxes is still put at one thousand dollars. The value of the plant at Fenelon Falls is increased by Seventy Thousand, and the present taxation at Fenelon Falls is something like seventeen hundred, a provision ought to be made for Two-Thousand Five hundred tax instead of One Thousand.

This is a growing town and towns and cities are endeavoring to put themselves in the way of obtaining new industries, and in order that new industries may be obtained, abundance of power is necessary. The matter is worth the trouble and the town council, before committing itself to, say, ought to make themselves absolutely sure that such additional power is made available to the town so as will put it in a fair and competitive position with surrounding towns for the obtaining of any new industry that may be seeking location.

I am not opposed to the purchase by the town of Lindsay, of the property if it can be shown that the price is a fair one, and that a reasonable amount of additional power exists for future development for the town and also that the light rates of the town can be reduced by at least fifty per cent.

This information, however, is not at the present time in the possession of the town.

Yours Truly,
CITIZEN OF LINDSAY.

INFANT TRAGEDY AT WINNIPEG

Winnipeg, June 5.—There was another infant tragedy in Winnipeg on Saturday, the victim being the little three-year-old daughter of John McNab, 206 Aberdeen avenue. Along with her brother, two years her senior, she was playing with matches, and the brother having lit a bonfire, she got too close, and her dress caught fire. Her cries were unheeded, as she was in a great number of children about that neighborhood, the screams sometimes being deafening. A particularly piercing one brought the mother out to the door, and she called to the neighbor, who had made frantic but futile efforts to save the babe's life, thought he could do more good, and sustained serious burns about the hands and arms. Medical aid was summoned and the little one taken to the general hospital, where she died in agony about three hours later.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

To Steam Potatoes

Scrub, peel, and wash potatoes, put them in a steamer, sprinkle salt over them, place the saucepan on the fire, and let the water boil quickly under the steamer. When they are tender, cover with a cloth and dry before serving. Potatoes are considered lighter if steamed, and it is an economical way of cooking them, as meat can be cooked in the saucepan and potatoes steamed over.

Mock Pate de Fele Gras

Take half a pound of young calves' liver, or five or six chickens' livers, simmer gently with enough water to cover, add a little pepper and salt; then drain and pound in a mortar with enough fresh butter to form a nice paste. Add little cream if preferred to butter, cayenne, or nutmeg, or mace, as liked. Press into small glass jars for use and pour melted butter over. This is an excellent breakfast or supper dish, spread on buttered toast and garnished with slices of tomatoes.

Marrow and Apple Jam

Six pounds of apples, 6 pounds of marrow, 3 pints of water, and 3 pound of sugar to each pound of fruit. Pare and scrape all ends out of marrow, cut up fine. Peel and core apples, also cut up fine. Put sugar into the water and make the syrup, and then put in the marrow and apples (all cut up), and soak all night. Next morning put on to boil for two and a half to three hours. When it is nicely boiled it cooked it will look brown, and be very stiff. This quantity will make 18 pounds.

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Canifton, Ont.—"I had been a great sufferer for five years. One doctor said I was cancerous of the uterus, and another told me it was a fibroid tumor. No one knows what I suffered. I would always be worse at certain periods, and never was regular, and the bearing-down pains were terrible. I was very ill indeed and the doctor told me I would have to have an operation, and I might die during the operation. I wrote to my sister about it and she advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Through personal experience I have found it the best medicine in the world for female troubles, for it has cured me, and I did not have to have the operation after all. The Compound also helped me while passing through Change of Life."—Mrs. LETITIA BLAIR, Canifton, Ontario.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ills, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a little to try it, and the result has been worth millions to suffering women.

FOLDING BRASS BED

Spring Pivoted to Headboard and Lifts Up Against It

A folding brass bed has now been put on the market. The bed is on the list of folding beds. The headboard has double feet, so that it stands more firmly than the ordinary folding bed. Likewise, the spring is hinged to the headboard, so that it does not press the footboard, to which it is also connected by a chain, when it is folded in the course. When the bed is to be folded, all that is necessary is to raise the footboard. This pushes the spring up against the headboard and the spring turns over and hangs down from the top, leaving the whole piece of furniture flat against the wall and extending out only a few inches. This bed, of course, cannot be used for a present a bookcase or a piano, as wooden folding beds are designed, but if desired a curtain can be attached to the footboard and draped over it to conceal its presence.

RISES TO FAME IN HIS EIGHTIES

The Wonderful Pictures of Walter Greaves Who Was a Pupil of Whistler

To the list of the great English painters of the nineteenth century has to be added a name which will sound unfamiliar to the earn even of those who are supposed to be well informed. Walter Greaves has opened his exhibition of "Old Chelsea, Cremorne, The Thames, Battersea, Carlyle, etc." to the public at the Goupil Gallery, and before these pictures will have made room for their successors Mr. Greaves will have risen to well-deserved fame. Not too early, for the artist whose unexpected gifts are now so suddenly revealed is in the eighth decade of a life of struggle and hardship. The title of his exhibition proclaims Mr. Greaves a pupil of Whistler and the first century glance around the gallery would leave no room for doubt, even if "pupil of Whistler" were not expressly stated on the title page of the catalogue. "The master" would not allow his two pupils, Mr. Greaves and his brother, to exhibit without his permission and without express recognition of their pupilage. To this latter condition Mr. Greaves modestly adheres even now, so many years after Whistler's death. The interest of his display at the Goupil Gallery, apart from the admirable painterlike qualities of Mr. Greaves' work, lies in the problem: How much of the astounding talent shown in these paintings was due to Whistler's teaching and—the treatise to alter the blasphemy—how much did Whistler learn from his pupil? Mr. Greaves himself, whose worship of the master, according to all accounts, amounted almost to self-effacement, it would be vain to expect explicit answers to this question, evidences of his work, "Palazzo Dudoe Old Battersea Bridge, Cremorne, Old Chelsea," "Battersea" perhaps of all his works, so like in manner to Whistler's, or of his Carlyle in arrangement and in treatment of the Whistler pastel and especially of indicating the figures, leaves the reader in doubt and leaves Whistler's picture by over ten years. Mr. Greaves's own "Greaves' own statement, made in all modesty, put up beside his brother's pictures of Thames and Cremorne Gardens, both day and night, and his pictures of old London, which would be in the exact critics, "Dead Wall, Old Battersea Bridge," the "Proverb of the Artist" and other pictures, which would be the question of "the master" one is forced to admit that the pupil of Whistler may have benefitted to no small extent by the teaching of the master. With all his veneration for his master, Mr. Greaves has a strong individuality. There are in his pictures, in addition to that of Whistler, other qualities, which are quite personal, and others which one sees in the work of Whistler's Dutch school, especially the clearness and precision of his statement, with yet undue insistence on outline. His manner of painting architecture is something between the crispness of Van der Heyden and the carelessness of Matthew Maris in the moon in which he depicts the "Old canal of Amsterdam." In everything shown at his separate exhibition—even in the "Hammersmith Bridge on Boat Race Day," which he painted at the age of sixteen—Mr. W. Greaves proves himself a great artist and an admirable craftsman.

WORK TOGETHER

The best way to build up a city is for each and every man in it not to strive to rend and tear down. Whenever a man in the town stand well, do not try to cut him down. All the residents of the town are partners, not opponents. In all likelihood the more business does he your rival the more you will do. Every gentleman who treats his customer honestly, courteously and fairly will get his share, the more business that can be secured by united effort, the better it will be for all. When a town ceases growing it commences to die, and the more the people try to kill off each other in their business and good name, the more rapidly will utter ruin come to all. Stand together for the advancement of every citizen. If a man shows ability to prosper do not pull him back with jealousy or wish him down with cold indifference.

EDISON'S NEW BATTERY

At the meeting of the National Electric Light Association last week, in the city of New York, Mr. Edison made a speech in which he asserted that he had invented a new storage battery, which is light portable, quickly charged, and has no waste or leakage. The new battery is so small that one large enough enough to run a delivery waggon can be carried in a suitcase, and it can be charged in four or five minutes. Mr. Edison claimed that he had used the new battery on an old delivery waggon with best results. A ten-minute charge would carry the vehicles over fifty miles, and he thought that the whole cost of electricity for a day's delivery with an average merchant would not be more than twenty-five cents. This seems almost too good to be true, but Mr. Edison does not usually talk nonsense, and if any man could invent a battery of the kind it is probable that he could. The advantages of such a battery are so numerous and so obvious that we can only hope that Mr. Edison's claims will be fully substantiated in the near future.

TRENTON BOOMING

The Editor of the Belleville Ontario says:—

Trenton is not letting up for a single minute on its policy of advancement. Only a few days ago they paid big taxes granting concessions to 3 important companies. That would be regarded in some quarters as a good summer's work. Not so, however, among our hustling neighbors. On Friday, June 14th, they will vote on three more by-laws, giving free sites and fixed low assessments to three other companies that will guarantee to employ in the aggregate, one hundred and sixty men.

To the Metal Button Factory, they propose to give a site and an assessment fixed at $1000 for ten years. They expect to have their plant ready for operation before the middle of July and will employ from thirty-five to fifty hands.

The Trenton Shirt and Collar Firm is a concern larger firm and will employ at the beginning seventy-five hands. They all get a free site and an assessment fixed at $500.

Lloyd and sons Limited, will manufacture collapsible baby carriages and express waggons. They will erect a factory building to cost $7000, and give employment to forty men at the start. This concern is to get the same terms as the Metal Button Co.

We should say that Trenton is getting such important industrial organizations as these upon such unimportant concessions has made three grand bargains which will no doubt, meet the almost unanimous endorsement of the citizens when the vote comes to be taken.

These good things that are coming to Trenton have not fallen in that direction by accident. Only one short year ago and Trenton was as somnolent an old burg as was to be found along the southern frontier of Ontario. To-day it is the initial stage of becoming a notable industrial centre.

Various minor causes have contributed to produce the effect, but the contributing cause has been a live Board of Trade and council backed up by enthusiastic citizenship. They have gotten over the idiocy of electing nonesuits to municipal office because they happen to be grits or tories, but they appoint the best man available.

About four or five months ago they inaugurated their publicity campaign and since they had men to carry it out the campaign has been a whirlwind success.

Now then, men of Belleville, can't you see the obvious moral to be drawn from the last year's history of Trenton? Our neighbors have't carried all the good things going. There are others up to the industrial tree that may get plucked off by those, who have energy enough to go after them, but dreaming with folded arms is not what is wanted where competition is so keen.

Let us make our publicity campaign sufficiently compre hensive to attract notice, and let us enter upon it at once.

If there not a lesson in the above observations of our newspaper confrere for the citizens of Lindsay.

CROP HAS GOOD START

"Well begun is half done," runs the old saw, and those who have witnessed the growth of crops in the Canadian West for the past 20 years know how true the old saw is when applied to wheat production.

Give a wheat crop a good start, and it is simply amazing what latter vicissitudes it will withstand.

The crop of 1911 has had a good start. Indeed, it is questionable if in twenty years the start has been so uniformly good, especially viewed in the light of the enormously increased area. Certainly, in the six years, during which the Free Press has been collating regular telegraph reports of crop conditions, the first of June report has never been so satisfactory as it is this year. Of the 200 points heard from, the dam age reported, from any cause, is less than one-half of one per cent.

Many people and people of wide experience, dreaded a dry year, but greatly sufficient moisture has been received to carry the crop until the end of June, if necessary, and the indications are not for an old time June of alternate sun and shower.

The seed germinated slowly, always a good thing, and the late frosts tended to make it root deeply and stood well, with the result that the plant is strong and vigorous, and is a condition to make very rapid advancement, now that warm weather has set in.

The success of the wheat crop is not assured. There are a number of things that may happen to it, and much evil as well as much virtue lies in it, but it has reached a point when anything like a total failure is almost impossible, while with the continuance of ordinary favourable weather conditions a crop of 200,000,000 bushels of wheat is quite probable.

It is sufficiently probable to make it wise for the railway companies, and the banks to begin, even now, to consider how they will move, and finance a crop of that magnitude.—Manitoba Free Press.

ONE WAY IT WORKED

(Brantford Expositor)

The St. John Telegraph expposes the methods of the "Anti-Reciprocity League of Canada," which is now operating through the country. Its confidential literature, sent out in advance, asks the local organizer to "call a meeting of prominent people whom you know to be strongly opposed to reciprocity, comprising as many Liberals as possible." It adds these pearls of wisdom:

"Be careful to explain that the meeting is to be entirely free from party politics."

"This meeting should be held behind closed doors, no press reports to be made, and no one favouring reciprocity, admitted."

"A chairman if possible a prominent Liberal, should be chosen beforehand."

In addition to these somewhat significant directions concerning the need for secrecy and the necessity for making Liberals prominent in the movement, the Montreal organization sends copies of out-and-dried resolutions to be passed at the "ready-made" meeting. There are two resolutions, one coupling reciprocity and annexation, and the other pledging members of the association to vote against the reciprocity agreement now under discussion in the House of Commons, and, if the same should become law, "to work for its abrogation at a later date." With such forewarning of the tactics being pursued by the Anti-Reciprocity League, Liberals will have themselves to blame if they fall into the trap so crafty set for them.

SACRIFICED LIFE FOR CHILDREN

A shocking fatality is reported from The Ridge, Wellington township, in which two children belonging to Mr. Wm. Bird were burned to death, and their uncle, a Mr. Patterson, also lost his life in a heroic attempt to rescue them.

It appears that the children were left alone in the house while their mother and her brother were milking the cows, their father being away from home, and in some unknown manner they succeeded in setting fire to the building. The blaze had gained considerable headway before it was discovered, and when Patterson rushed in through the front door to rescue the children he found that he could not reach them. Placing a ladder against the side of the house he climbed and entered through an upstairs window, and was just about to lower the children when the floor, when the floor gave way, and all three perished.

STORY OF THE INDIAN MUTINY

BY LOUIS TRACY

seen him, was squatting on the ground near his master. The general was not apt to waste time in talk, and he had a singular knack of reading men's thoughts by a look.

"Glad to see you back again, Major Malcolm," he cried. "I hope you were successful?"

"It is for you to decide, sir, when you have heard my story," and without further preamble Frank gave a brief narrative of his adventures since dawn. Not a word did he say about the very things he had been sent to report on, and Nicholson understood that a direct order from would unlock his lips. When Frank ended the general frowned and was silent. In three minutes more he did hold honor lightly, and Nicholson was a free type of chivalrous gentleman.

"Dismissed!" he growled, "this is awkward, very awkward; and Majesdyke tells me that the extremely flighty earn taken by events in the palace was in a fair way towards depriving his answers of the facts they were so anxious to learn. Suddenly the big man's deep eyes fell on Chumru.

"Here, you," he growled, "was aught said to thee whereby thou hast a scruple to tell me how many guns defend the Cashmere Gate?"

"Huzoor," said Chumru, "there are but two things that concern me, my master's safety and the size of that jagir your honor promised me."

Nicholson laughed with an almost boyish mirth.

"By God," he cried, "you are fortunate in your friends, Malcolm. Then he turned to Chumru and added, "The jagir is of no mean size," he said, "but I shall see to it that a field is added for every useful fact you make known."

Frank listened to his servant's enumeration of the guns and troops in the Lahore, Mori, and Cashmere Gates, and he was astonished at the accuracy of Chumru's mental note-taking.

"I need not have gone at all, sir," he could not help commenting when the bearer had answered Nicholson's keen questions. "I seem to have a Napoleon for a valet."

The brigadier laid a kindly hand on Frank's shoulder.

"You forget that you have brought me the most important news of all," he said. "The enemy is detected before the first ladder is planted against their walls. They know it, and, thanks to you, now we know it. My only remaining difficulty is not to take Delhi, but to screw up our Chief to make the effort."

Then his voice sank to a deep growl.

"But I'll bring him to reason, I will, by Heaven, even if I risk being cashiered for insubordination!"

CHAPTER XVII.

The Expiation

Two hours after midnight—that is a time of rest and peace in most lands. Man have either ceased or not yet begun their toil. Even warfare, the deadliest task of all, requires its slack energy, and the ghostly reaper leans on his scythe while wearied soldiers sleep. Wellington knew this when he said that the bravest man was he who possessed "two o'clock-in-the-morning" courage, for shadows then become real, and dangers anticipated but unseen are magnified tenfold.

Yet, soon after two o'clock in the morning of September 14, 1857, two thousand five hundred soldiers assembled behind the Ridge for the greatest achievement that the Mutiny had demanded during the four months of its wonderful history. They were divided into five columns, one held in reserve, and the task before them was to carry by assault a mighty fortified city surrounded by seven miles of wall and ditch, held by forty thousand armed soldiers and equipped with ample store of guns and ammunition. Success meant the certain loss of one man among four—failure would carry with it a great and immeasurable calamity to modern war.

Men had fallen in greater numbers in the Crimea, it is true—a British army had been annihilated alive in the wild Khyber Pass—but these were only incidents in prolonged campaigns, whereas the collapse of the assailants of Delhi would set free a torrent of murder, rapine and pillage, such as the utmost triumph of the rebels had not yet produced.

The Punjab, the whole of the North-West, Central India, and Rajputana, all northern Bengal and Bombay, would be drawn into the fight if the assault on the gates of Delhi were unsuccessful. It is to be marvelled at, therefore, that General Wilson, the Commander-in-Chief, "looked nervous and anxious" as he rode slowly along the front of the gathering columns, and that the men of the British officers and men regarded the Holy Communion, given by the hands of their chaplains, ere they mustered for what might prove to be their last parade.

In some tents, of their own accord, the soldiers read the Old Testament lesson of the day. With that extraordinary fatalism which the chronicles of the prophets often display in their relation to current events, the soldiers foretold the doom of Nineveh—"Woe to the bloody city! It is full of lies and robbery; the prey departeth not;" at the siege, fortify the stronghold—make fast thy strongholds; thither the sword shall cut thee off; it shall eat thee up like the canker-worm."

How thrilling, how intensely personal these words must have sounded in their ears, for it was they who had by force of arms taken the strongholds of Nineveh in India in '57, were now determined to assault the battlements of Nineveh in Asia, and the men and children, were inspired by a religious enthusiasm that showed itself in almost every diary kept and letter sent home during the war.

And now, while the brilliant stars were dimmed by bursting shells and rockets blazing in glowing curves across the sky, the Christian host was ready.

English, Scotch, Irish and Welsh—swarthy Pathans, bearded Sikhs, dapper little Ghoorkahs—marched side by side, from the first column on the left, commanded by Nicholson, to the fourth, on the extreme right, led by Reid.

The plan of attack was daring and soldier-like. John Nicholson, ever claiming the post of utmost danger, elected to hurl his men across the breach made by the big guns in the Cashmere Bastion, the strongest of the four gates of the enemy, held by the enemy. The second column, under Brigadier Jones, was to storm the second breach in the walls at the Water Bastion. The third, headed by Colonel Campbell, was to pass through the Cashmere Gate, where the sappers who had promised to blow open the gate had actually accomplished their task while the fourth column, under Major Reid, undertook to clear the suburbs of Kishengunge and Fahandunpore and force its way into the city by way of the Lahore Gate.

Brigadier Longfield, commanding the reserve, had to defend and support Nicholson. Generally speaking, it was an operation which made good its objective, the different columns were to line up along the walls, form posts and combine for the bombardment and escalade of the fortress-palace. Nicholson, who directed the assault, had had forgotten the half-jingled bargain made between Malcolm and the Princess Roshinara. Strict orders were given that the King and members of the royal family were to be taken prisoners if possible. As for Akbah Khan and other leaders of rebel brigades, it was impossible to distinguish them among so many. Not even Nicholson could ask his men to be generous in giving quarter, when nine-out of every ten mutineers they encountered were fellow soldiers than slayers of women and children.

At last, in the darkness, the columns reached their allotted stations and halted. The engineers, carrying ladders, led the way in front.

Nicholson placed a hand on Jones's shoulder.

"Are you ready?" he asked, with the quiet confidence in the success of his plans which seldom failed to succeed all men to trust him implicitly.

"Ready, sir," was the reply.

Nicholson turned to Malcolm and Reid and shook hands.

"Tell the gunners to cease fire," he said.

Left and right they hurried, stumbling over the broken masonry made by the batteries, which were thundering at short range against the walls of the Cashmere Bastion. In No. 2, which Malcolm entered, he found a young Bengal, artillery, Frederick Hugh Roberts, working a heavy gun almost alongside a young Irish lad in the 52nd regiment suffered in the contest waged with the rebels during the past two or seven days and nights.

Roberts was commanding the three batteries became silent. With a nearer approach to caution than before they moved and fired a volley to cover the advance of the engineers, who at first step was taken by the actual capture of the bastion.

The loud yell of the Rifles served as a signal to the other columns. The second, gallantly led by Jones, raced up to the Water Bastion and entered it, but not until twenty-nine out of thirty-nine men carrying ladders were killed or wounded. Jones's right, Nicholson, ever in the van, seemed to lift his column by sheer strength of will through an avalanche of musketry, heavy stones, scorpe-shot and bajonet thrusts, while the rebels, swarming the wanna to the breach, inspired each other by hurling threats and curses at the Nazarenes. But to stop Nicholson and his host they must kill every man, and he killed them themselves in the killing, and, not having the stomach for that sort of fight, they ran.

Thus far a magnificent success had been achieved. It was carried further, almost perfected, by the splendid self-sacrifice displayed by the six who had volunteered to blow open the Cashmere Gate. To this day their names are enshrined on a tablet between its two arches—"Lieutenants Home and Salmond of the Engineers, Sergeant Hawthorne of the 52nd and Sergeants Carmichael, Smith and Burgess of the Bengal Sappers." Smith, and Hawthorne lived to wear the Victoria Cross awarded for their feat. The others, while death gleaned their eyes and dimmed their ears, may have known by the rush of men past where lay the spot that sacrificed had not been in vain. The stout timbers and iron bands were rent by the powder bags, and the third column fought a passage through the double gateway into the city square in front of St. James's Church.

Then, as if the story of Delhi were to serve as a microcosm of human smiles and frowns in human affairs, the glorious career of the British columns received a serious, almost mortal check. The mutineers were in full retreat, terror-stricken, the dismayed. Thousands were already crossing the bridge of boats which spanned Bengal and Bombay, and the road was open to the Peringhia Gate, by which the Grand Trunk Road leaves Delhi.

They were not, but the over-caution against which Nicholson had railed for months again betrayed itself in the failure of the second column to rapture the Lahore Gate when that vital position lay at its mercy. Auckland, ever excellent in war, is sound as a proposition to decide in operations against Asiatics.

Whatever and man had done what they were asked to do—they ought to have done more. Having penetrated beyond the Moti Bastion they fell back and fortified themselves against counter assault, thus displaying unimaginable tactics, but had generally left in view of the enemy unmolestated. Instantly Akbah Khan, who commanded in that quarter of the city, turned a victory. The mutineers flocked back to their deserted posts. While one section pressed Jones hard, another threw up like the canker-worm, the stubbly brigade. They actually pushed the counter attack as far as the Water Rao's house on the Ridge, until Hope Grant's cavalry and Gordon's horse sent horse artillery tackled them. A terrible melee ensued, in which the out of fifty gunners were killed or wounded, the 5th Lancers suffered with equal severity, but the rebels were held, pushed, and defeated, after two hours of desperate conflict.

The mischance at the Lahore Gate cost England a life that she could ill spare. When he heard what had happened, Nicholson ran to the Lahore Gate, gathered men from both columns and tried to drive the rebels from Fasiion at all hazards. It was asking too much, but these gallant troops did not falter. They followed their beloved leader into a narrow lane, the only way from the one point to the other. They fell in scores, but Nicholson's giant figure still towered in front. With sword raised he shouted to the survivors to come on. Then a bullet struck him in the chest and he fell.

With him, for a time, drooped the fate of Britain. The utter confusion which followed is shown by Lord Roberts's statement in his Memoirs that he found Nicholson lying in a closely near the Cashmere Gate, the native carriers weeping fled. Although Baird Smith, a skilled engineer and artillerist, had secured against a coup de main that small portion of the city occupied by the Europeans, General Wilson was minded to withdraw the troops. Even now he considered the task of storming Delhi to be beyond their powers, Baird Smith insisted that he should hold on. Nicholson sent a typical message from his deathbed on the Ridge that he still had strength enough left to struggle to his feet and pistol the first man who counseled retreat, and the harassed commander-in-chief consented to the continuance of the fighting.

Although his judgment was mistaken he had good reasons for it. Akbah Khan, on whom the real leadership devolved when it became known that the King and his sons had left the palace, tried a ruse that might have served power twice in his adversaries. Counting on the exhaustion of the British and the privations they had endured during the long months on the Ridge, he caused the deserted streets, between the Cashmere and Mori Gates, to be strewn with bottles of wine, beer and spirits. To men enfeebled by fatigue and good fortune, this was more deadly than lead or steel. Were it not that Akbah Khan himself was shot through the forehead while trying to repel the advance of Hope's engineers along the main road to the palace from the Cashmere Gate, he would well within the bounds of possibility that the afternoon of the 14th might have witnessed a British debacle.

In one respect the sepoy commander's death was an accident, which saved us the loss of Nicholson to the Empire. Akbah Khan, Nicholson, was enough in small detachments, but no power controlled by a single man could now to use their vastly superior numbers, allowed themselves to be cut down with in detail. Soon the British attack was vigorously continued on six days' orgy of destruction began.

Although no Briton was seen to injure a woman or child in the sack of Delhi, the avenging army passed no mercy on the mutineers. Not a few, less citizens were slaughtered side by side with the mutineers. The rebels had received a great provocation and they paid for it terrible penalty. On the 20th the gates of the palace were surrounded and the Princes of Delhi was hoisted from its topmost turret, and not till then, did Delhi fall. The fate of the Moguls was sealed, the India which had witnessed the grandeur and pomp of Akbar and Aurungzebe, and the great city had passed into the hands of the new race that had come to leave the decaying East. It was a dearly-bought triumph. On September 14 the conquering army lost sixty officers and eleven hundred and four men. Between May 30 and September 20 the total British casualties were nearly four thousand.

Malcolm soon learned that the Princess Roshinara had fled with her lover and protector, Ommaby the death of Akbah Khan had unnerved her, and she dared not trust to the mercy of the victors. Frank was among the first to enter the palace. After the fanatical glamour was made an end of, he hurried towards the zenana. It was empty. He searched its glittering apartments with feverish anxiety, but he met no human being until some days later the 7th entered and began to prise open boxes and cupboards in the hope of loot.

After that his duties took him to the Ridge, and it was not until all was over that he learned how Roshinara had captured the King and shot the royal princes with his own hand. This tragedy took place on the road from Humayoon's Tomb, whither the wretched monarch retreated when it was seen that Delhi must yield. Roshinara claimed to be an executioner, not a murderer. He held that he acted under the pressure of a mob, intent on rescuing Mirza Mogul, the King's apparent, and his brother and son. That all three were cowardly ruffians and merciless in their treatment of the English captives in Delhi on May 11, cannot be denied, but Hodson's action was condemned by many, and it was perhaps as well that he should be a dead girl's grave during Colin Campbell's visit to Delhi.

It was there that the fortune of rival and lovers befell Malcolm. Frank escaped quelled down after the storm of the 14th, but he was there when Havelock, reinforced by the Peshawar column, drove the relief force through the insurgent ring around the Residency and Lucknow, and slowly fought his way to port through a raging sea.

No sooner had Havelock entered the Residency on the 25th of Sept. that the rebel waves surged together again and on the 27th the Residency was again invested almost as completely as ever. But the new column, infinitely wiser and bent on the heavier task, drove the rebels from the Residency, and, by the end of the month, Lucknow was free.

CURED OF CONSTIPATON

Mr. Andrews praises Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Mr. George Andrews of Halifax, N.S., writes:

"For many years I have been troubled with chronic Constipation. This all great severe cases single-handed, and I have been a victim to the many diseases that constipation brings in its train. Medicine after medicine I have taken in order to find relief, but one and all left me in the same hopeless condition. It seemed that nothing would expel from me the one ailment that caused so much trouble, yet at last I found about Indian Root Pills.

"That was indeed a lucky day for me, for I was so impressed with the statements made that I determined to give them a fair trial.

"They have regulated my stomach and bowels. I am cured of constipation, and I claim they have no equal as a medicine."

For over half a century Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been curing constipation and clogged, inactive kidneys, with all the ailments which result from them. They cleanse the whole system and purify the blood. Sold everywhere at 25c. a box.

WOMEN DO NOT WANT THE BALLOT

PAPER READ BY MISS WIGGINS AT W. C. T. U.

In the Evening Post, of May 31st under the heading of Votes for the Women, Hon. I. B. Lucas, minister without portfolio in the Ontario Cabinet says:

Though I am not in sympathy with the militant tactics of the suffragettes on the other side of the ocean, I am not in favor of granting the franchise to women, and when a reasonable number of women show that they want to vote, no government can afford to refuse it to them.

And it is often said that when the majority of women want the ballot, they will get it. Perhaps, every improvement in the condition of women thus far has been secured, not by a general demand from the majority of women, but by the arguments, entreaties, and continual coaxing of a faithful girl slaved few.

And in each case, the advocates of progress, have had to contend, not only with the ridicule of men, but with the indifference of women, and often with active opposition from some of them.

There was a time when a married woman could not make a will and her wages belonged to her husband, and a married woman had no right to her own property.

When such women as Miss Mattews and Lucy Stone began to try to secure for married women these rights, they were met with these statements, that they had all the rights they wanted, and "Do you think I would give myself, where I would not give my property."? So indifferent were the over age men and women to this injustice that it was years before married women obtained property rights.

When the agitation for the higher education of women began the majority of citizens treated it with indifference and ridicule. They seriously believed that a college education for women would take away her desire to be a good wife and mother. Who at last, when the examinations were thrown open to women, the dean of Chichester, went so far as to preached a sermon against it. He said, "By the set at large, certainly, the new curriculum, is not naked for, but way go further: In citing these cases? They all merely show that human nature is fully as conservative in women, as in men. The persons who take a very strong interest in any reform are generally few, among men or women, and they are habitually regarded with disfavor by most of those whom the proposed reform is to benefit. It is said women do not desire what is called their emancipation. Mrs. Taylor says: "Conformity to custom, disposes to any kind of degradation, and submission is inculcated on women from childhood, as the peculiar attractive and grace of their character. "It is a simple historical fact, that the majority of women have never expressed, no matter how unfair the conditions in which they have been placed.

Many changes for the better have been made during the last half century in the laws written and unwritten affecting to women. Everybody approves of these changes now because they have become accomplished facts. But not one of them would have been made to this day if it had been necessary to wait until the majority of women asked for it. The change now under discussion—votes for women—is to be judged on its merits. Women have a vote in every other corporation, in which they are shareholders. G. W. Curtis said: A woman may own a stockholder upon a railroad from one end of the country to the other, but if she sells her stock, and buys a house with the money, she has no voice in the laying out of the road before her door, which her house is taxed to keep and pay for" And to ask that the franchise be given to women on the same terms and conditions as it is given to men, is not asking too much, as it is in harmony with every instinct of true liberty and every principle of our country. In the light of history the indifference of most women and the opposition of a few must be taken as a matter of course.

It has no more rational significance now, than it has had in the good to each previous step of women's progress.

WAKELYS

BEAVERTON AS A DRY TOWN

Woodville Advocate—The first month of Beaverton's experience of local option has passed and the Express man is taking a third among the village business men, incidentally took occasion to ask the result of the by-law upon their respective businesses for the month.

May is seldom a good business month in this section, spring work is in full swing, everyone is busy and business is usually dull. This year the season has been unusually rapid, necessitating a still closer application to work than usual, and the merchants report generally a better May than for several previous years with little or no complaint.

To the public, however, the result has been markedly an improvement—down in Beaverton, which was common at nights from the same drunkenness source. This is gone, and while we do not desire to be understood to say that drunkenness is unknown, it is apparent, great care is now taken that it does not flaunt itself in the public streets as heretofore. All are quite satisfactory, and in every sense worth the effort that has been made to obtain it.

One feature of the month which has not been so flattering to at least some of our citizens, is the special effort to impress the public with a belief that public convenience is absolutely wanting in Beaverton, and indeed in some cases, travellers have been advised by citizens of this town against coming here. That they could expect little or no accommodation. We see. The by-law is in force, and will remain so for at least three years, and the Scott promises to say, "Wait, donc burd that fosia sta ain nest."

FIFTEEN MILLION ROSES

The rose gardens at the White City, Shepherd's Bush, this year, will, it is thought, be much turned into the world. Messrs. Paul are laying them out on an elaborate plan. One design represents a cornet with a white crown, salmon pink and scarlet base, and centres of a brilliant orange scarlet. Large plots will be made of the scarlet American rose "Richmond," and some trees of "Juliet" roses, fiery scarlet and yellow, gloriously scented, have been planted. It is estimated that the rose gardens will show at least fifteen million blooms.

Starved Nerves

The Cause of Neuralgia—It Must be Treated Through the Blood

Neuralgia is a cry of the nerves for more and better blood. It literally means that the nerves are being starved. Like every part of the body the nerves must have their nourishment through the blood. There is therefore no doubt that Dr. Williams' Pink pills are the best cure for nerve troubles. They actually make new, rich, blood carrying to the starved nerves the nourishment they need, thus driving away the sharp torturing pains which nearly drives the sufferer wild. Nobody knows what neuralgia has yielded to treatment through Dr. Williams Pink Pills that every sufferer from this dreaded trouble should have no hesitation in using the pills a fair trial. Mrs. Sophia H. Johnson, Moran, Sask. says.

For upwards of ten years I was a periodical sufferer from neuralgia. It located in the side of my face and in the eye, which would actually pain every time I opened or closed my mouth. At times the pains would be so unbearable, and so long they would on, my whole nerve system seemed to be affected. I was constantly in agony but the doctor did not not seem to be able to give me permanent relief, and at last I decided to try a proprietary pink pills. I got a short course and before they were half gone I felt much better, and by the time I had used them all every symptom of the trouble had gone and I was enjoying a comfort I had not known for years. I have since recommended the pills to others and can only say I owe the joy of living without pain to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50c. a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co. Brockville, Ont.

TORONTO LACROSSE PLANS

Eddie Powers, defence tender for the Toronto's last season, is now in for to go West to play lacrosse this summer. Powers may be capture of the Toronto this year.

Very few changes will be made in the Toronto line up, the management evidently figuring they have the material, if the boys will only get out and work.

Holmes, the goalkeeper for Parkdale Hockey Club, is the most likely lacrosse to get the nets in place of Atton.

MEANT DEATH FOR THE TRESPASSERS

General Superintendent Clorne, of the C.P.R. divisions from Smith's Falls to London, Toronto and Hamilton, and northern Divisions, sent out today a circular to all officials, crain, man and track men. The circular contains the following special clause: "Government statistics having shown that 75 per cent of the people killed in Canada during the past year were trespassers, you are hereby instructed that trespassing on the company's right-of-way must not be allowed, even though it may be necessary to evoke the aid of the law in suppressing it."

WHAT THE MINISTER SAID

Did Not Improve Matters for Calhoun Clay

A story has been told of a colored minister who, while preaching a meeting in a church, became wrought up to such a high pitch of excitement that he cried out, "I see bebo' me ten chicken-thieves, including Calhoun Clay!"

Instantly Calhoun Clay rose and left the church. He was very angry.

The next day he brought powerful influence to bear upon the minister, who promised to apologize.

So, at the meeting in the chapel the next evening the old minister said, "I desire to retract my last Sabbath's remark when I said I see bebo' me ten chicken-thieves, including Calhoun Clay. What I should have said, dear brethren and sisters, was—I see bebo' me nine chicken-thieves, not including Calhoun Clay!"

Congregational Union.

Kingston, June 13—The Congregational Union closed its sessions last night. An invitation received from Zion Church, Montreal, for the next meeting place was accepted.

Rev. H. I. Horsey of Ottawa, who spoke on the ministry and social and moral reform, expressed great regret that Parliament had yielded to the professional gambling on racetracks, and that the law did not prohibit betting and supporting of racing information.

Popular Elections of U. S. Senators.

Washington, June 13—The Senate, by 64 to 24, passed the resolution recommending the constitution be provided for the election of Senators by popular vote. The House of Representatives is expected to pass the resolution, supposed to adopt it, 40 to 44, the vote. The casting the deciding ballot. The House has already passed the resolution.

STORM VISITED MANY CENTRES

(Special to the Post.)

Philadelphia, Pa., June 13.—Three persons were killed, several seriously injured, wires were prostrated, trees uprooted and buildings damaged by an electrical storm which visited this city and vicinity last night. The wind attained a velocity of 70 miles an hour.

At Allentown, Pa., the cyclonic wind prostrated live wires which fell on a house on Union street. The building was a frame one with corrugated iron lining. As David S. H. Gackenbach, aged 30 years, and Hannibal J. Dotterer, aged 24 years, were leaving the building they came in contact with the metal and were instantly killed. John Wagner, aged 40 years, was killed in going to the rescue of the men. Miss Carrie Allender was badly shocked.

Killed by Thunderbolt.

Cortland, N.Y., June 13—James M. Davis, a stock dealer of North Lycdor, was killed by a thunderbolt while driving from Homer to Cortland in a carriage near Cincinnatus.

Lightning Played Pranks.

Kingston, June 13—A severe electrical storm passed over Kingston yesterday afternoon. The rainfall was very heavy, many cellars on down-town streets being flooded. Lightning put the street railway system out of business for two hours. At the movie picture shows lightning played great havoc with the operating machines. Luckily no buildings were struck.

Lightning Burned Barn.

Baltimore, Md., June 13.—A terrific storm, with high winds, rain and high wind, broke over Baltimore at six o'clock in the afternoon. Telegraph and long distance telephones to the north are disorganized, causing thousands of dollars' worth of damage to property in the suburbs. The storm was of short duration, but after a brief interval another heavy rainstorm set in, which lasted for several hours.

So far no loss of life has been reported.

Barn Burned by Lightning.

Inglewood, June 13.—A violent thunderstorm passed through this city and vicinity about four p.m. Sunday, doing considerable damage. Archibald Metzinger's fine barn, half a mile out, was struck by lightning and entirely consumed with contents, including a colt. Loss about $3,000, some insurance.

WAS SHE FORTY-FOUR?

A young man had just chaffingly declared that a woman could not keep a secret.

"Oh, I don't know!" said the lady. "I've kept my age secret ever since I was twenty-four."

"Yes," he replied; "but one of these days you will give it away. I am as sure of it as that I am standing here."

"Well," she said, with confidence, "I think that when a woman has kept a secret for twenty years, she comes pretty near knowing how to keep it."

Expect Government to Help.

Kingston, June 13.—In an interview yesterday Prof. John Watson, vice-principal of Queen's University, just returned from Ottawa, ridiculed the suggestion that the Ontario Government restrictions on the university would in any way discourage higher education. Dr. Watson said that the Ontario Government, he thinks, would have continued to press for the nationalization of Queen's, which is strongly advocated in 1900. Dr. Watson believes the Ontario Government soon believes the Ontario Government will be forced to the university.

You frequently hear of how well our garments hold their shape, no matter how hard usage they are given. The secret of their shape-retaining qualities is no secret at all; it is simply a matter of hand tailoring, good canvas, the best of hair cloth, fine linings, and careful inspection, a complete mastery of the details of fine tailoring, and a determination to see that they are incorporated in every garment that bears the "Progress" or "20th Century" Brand label.

CONSTABLE SHORT'S BARN DESTROYED

(Special to The Post)

Manilla, June 13.—The severe thunder storm that passed over this district Saturday night did little damage in the immediate vicinity, but was followed Sunday afternoon by a terrific thunderstorm accompanied by strong gales, which blew down the large barn on the farm occupied by Mr. J. F. Brown, and owned by Mr. John Short, the Chief of Police, at Lindsay. The barn of Dan McLeod about one mile directly west of this village was struck by lightning and burned to the grounds. Mr. Geo. Gilson on the 11th con. of Mariposa was also a sufferer. One barn was damaged by lightning, and three cattle killed by Saturday night's storm, while Sunday's storm uprooted about fifty feet of another of his barns.

Mr. A. Edwards had about twenty feet of his stripped off his barn. Wind mills are wrecked everywhere, and today will be spent by all the farmers in rebuilding fences. This is the worst storm that has visited this district for years.

FARMER'S LOSS NEAR PETERBORO

Peterboro, June 12—The barns of Hugh Life, at Jermyn, were destroyed during an electric storm on Saturday with 24 pigs, farm implements, and one horse, which Pike's daughter had just put into the stable. A. C. Loosdrville, a painter working at a nearby house had a close escape, the lightning burning the hair from the brush he held in his hand.

HYDRO ELECTRIC ENGINEER'S REPORT ON THE ORILLIA POWER QUESTION

The power question is the most vital question before the people of Lindsay at present. The following summary of a report presented by a Hydro Electric Engineer, on the Orillia plant will be read with interest by our citizens:

The reports themselves are elaborate documents occupying about thirty pages of typewriting, and represent a prodigious amount of research. We cannot do more than give some of the outstanding features. Mr. Greenwood reports that from records instituted last September the power load alone runs up as high as 1,900 h.p., while lighting load frequently amounts to 800 h.p., making a total peak load of 1400 h.p., during the months Nov. to Feb. inclusive. This was just fair before the smaller same on, adding 300 h.p. to the load. He estimates the requirements for next winter at 2300 to 2400 h.p. This is 50 per cent more than the rated capacity of the plant (1,600 h.p.) while the actual full load capacity is only 1,288 h.p. There is therefore an actual shortage of 812 h.p., or allowing for 25 per cent, overload at less than 380 h.p. This takes no account of the increase during the year, estimated at 200 to 300 h.p.

Mr. Greenwood suggests a method by which the "power factor," a very illusory, but important consideration in a power plant, might be improved by the use of a synchronous motor for pumping, thus recovering 100 k.p. at a cost of about $9,750. He also expresses the opinion that 400 h.p. of lighting load, and 200 h.p. in power might be saved by the introduction of meters and by selling power at a reduced rate to those who would undertake not to use their current during the peak hours. Between these two savings, the present plant might be made to most requirements for a year or two. Meters for lighting would cost $10,900 and for power $3,000. Mr. Greenwood does not agree with the opinion that the introduction of meters would result in a reduction of revenue. At the same time, he admits that such people in Orillia seems to be opposed to the introduction of the meter system.

Mr. Greenwood then considers the various methods of enlargement, so as to make the most of the water power at the Rugged Rapids. The minimum daily flow at the Rugged Rapids has been fixed by the Hydro Electric Commission at 832 cubic feet per second, which, with a 35-foot head, will develop 2,620 h.p. The average flow water season flow will however, provide 1,040 cubic feet, which, will produce 3300 h.p., with 35 feet head. Mr. Greenwood thinks it safe to count on this as considerable water can be stored for use during the peak load hours. The natural and simplest method would be to increase the size of the units in the present plant. But unfortunately the present tail race will not carry away any more water than is used at present, and would not be enlarged without shutting down the whole plant completely for several months. The depth of the tail race would have to be increase ed from 4 to 26 feet, and 750 cubic yards of rock blasted out under the present power house. This is out of the question, owing to loss and inconvenience involved.

Mr. Greenwood then outlines a plan for an entirely new power house, situated at the foot of the rapids. This would have many advantages, and would cost approximately different. The present power house and machinery would be retained as an auxiliary. The tail race would be deep enough and the foot of the rapids would be rendered useful. This would increase the power available at low water to 3,200 hp. All the structural defects of the present plant could be overcome, and a first class plant put in. There would always be good auxiliary available at short notice. The plant would have a capacity of 4,900 k.w., and at low water would furnish 4,200 h.p. It would be a standard 60 cycle p.p.m. instead of a 66 cycle as at present. Mr. Greenwood proposes that there should be a duplicate transmission line, erected on the same poles as at present, but on separate cross arms. The present line is not heavy enough to carry more current economically. He also recommends the enlargement and remodelling of the sub-station, and improving of the switching and controlling apparatus. He estimates the cost of the new plant at $125,000. It would require not less than nine months from the signing of contracts to carry out this work.

This is the subject matter of Mr. Greenwood's main report. In addition he submitted a supplementary report as to minor improvements required to bring the plant into a satisfactory condition. The carrying out of the recommendations made in this report, one of which are small but important would involve a further expenditure of $17,000. The largest items are repairs to the damaged walls of the power house and the overhauling and reconstruction of the distributing system in Orillia, each of which is estimated to cost, $3,000. Mr. Greenwood says the writing of the town is in very bad condition. To this he ascribes the unsatisfactory light, particularly in the outskirts of the town. Lights have been added till the wires are quite too light to carry the necessary current. Reconstruction he considers "absolutely necessary". He suggests a plan for wiring the town according to modern ideas, by running main feeders along West-street, and up Mississaga-street. From West-street single phase branches would run down each street to the lake. This by the way, would result in the removal of the famous Peter-street line. There would be no wires on this street or in Matchedash or Front streets, except secondary wires for half each block. It would not be necessary to buy much new wire, but merely to utilize to better advantage what is now in use. He also recommends the placing of all transformers on the streets, and the discarding of some old transformers which he considers dangerous.

Among other recommendations are a motor driven shaft and gearing for opening the sluices in the dam. This now takes four men two hours hard work each week and extra help has to be hired for this purpose in the spring and fall. The cost of the equipment would be $200.

2. Two arc lamps on the dam. It is at present in darkness. Cost, $50.

3. New cement floor for power house where the wooden one is rotten. Cost, about $1,000.

4. Better lighting for power house it is at present so dark in places as to be unsafe for the men. Cost, about $100.

5. Rewiring of the power house. At present some of the wires are under water and in the winter freezing up, it is most surprising that there has not been trouble with short circuits. Wires should be placed in lead conduits run through the cement floor. Cost $500.

6. Improvements to switch board, which has become somewhat "obsolete". including instruments for recording amount of power generated without power factor equipment, it is impossible to know what amount of power is being generated, and unless this is done it is impossible to tell what the power is costing per kilowatt hour, or per h. p. per year. This is not sound business policy to tell any commodity by guesswork. Cost, about $1,100.

7. A spare transformer for use in case of accident. Cost, $1,000.

8. Alterations to substation building, which is now a poor fire risk. All wooden construction would be removed, and a new store-room and work shop built at the rear. Cost, $5,000.

9. Three electolyte lightning arresters, to reduce trouble and danger from lightning, $600.

10. Standpipe on penstock to replace pipe, which is inadequate to relieve heavy strains such as that which caused the accident last January. Cost, $200. D. M.

11. New switches ammeters, circuit breakers &c. for substation, $1,370.

In concluding his report, Mr. Green wood says: "The foregoing improvements are, in my opinion, necessary There are several items in the summary which it is possible to get along without, but they are essential, to a complete plant. Practically all of them should have been provided at the time the plant was built.

BARN BURNED IN EMILY TOWNSHIP

(Special to The Post)

Omemee, June 13.—On Saturday night during the heavy electrical storm, the barn belonging to Mr. Sam Carewe, a few miles southeast of the village was burned to the ground. Mr. Carewe was in the village at the time, The barn which was a comparatively new one, having been built only two years ago, was full of stock grain, meat etc., and the contents were all destroyed. The insurance only partially covered the cost of the barn.

The small cyclone that struck our village on Sunday afternoon did a lot of damage to trees on many private properties. The east windows of a residence on Sturgeon street, were all broken as well as one of the upper lights of a window in the Methodist church.

STORM'S RAVAGES AT BOBCAYGEON

(Special to The Post)

Bobcaygeon, June 13.—Two fierce storms passed over this district one on Saturday and one on Sunday both of which did a great deal of damage. The one on Saturday was an electrical storm, and killed eight cows, which had gone for shelter under a maple tree, belonging to Mr. Wm. Thurston, who lives about two miles south of here. Mr. Thurston did not know anything about them being killed until he saw Christie went out to bring them in that evening. He found the whole eight lying close together, where they had been piled by the bolt. Mr. Jas. Thurston, who lives a mile and a half south of this place, had valuable horses killed by lightning during the same storm, and the telephone and telegraph lines were put out of commission as on the Peterboro Road there was about a dozen poles shattered by a bolt.

The storm on Sunday was not electrical to any extent, but it was a regular tornado, which uprooted and demolished trees, and blew down fences and barns that happened to be in its centre. Scores of beautiful trees in the village were either uprooted or snapped off, and the weather vane was blown out of the town hall here. Mr. Wm. Kelso, north of here, had a large frame barn, blown down, which was completely wrecked. Other buildings in its track have been moved or unroofed, as yet the amount of damage cannot be estimated yet.

NOVEL ORCHARD EXPERIMENT

Mr. W. H. Underwood, a great Fruit Grower of Hutchinson, Kansas, is preparing a novel experiment to protect his orchard from frost. Mr. Underwood has purchased 20,000 tenkallon oil-stoves, which he proposes to set up in his apple orchard of 640 acres, and when the frosts come and the trees are blossoming he will keep these stoves alight day and night until the crisis is over.

PLEASANT POINT.

The farmers of this vicinity have been wishing for rain this last week or so. On Sunday they had their wish and fulfilled but in a way quite out of the usual. Levelled fences, uprooted trees, riddled barns was the sight which met several farmers when the storm abated and they ventured from their coverts. So fierce a storm has not been witnessed here for a long time and the farmers, after have repaired all the damages, will hope just as long an interval before another of the same class.

Along with the damaged fences many of which were lifted bodily for several rods, and trees damaged in the woods, Mr. Thos. Flynn's barn was unroofed and as a consequence much of the hay damaged. Also Mr. John Ayers large hip-roofed barn had one end blown completely in also other parts of it broken.

Mr. Jos. Hutton of Lindsay, called on friends here on Sunday.

Mr. Samuel Carew and his mother, Mrs. Jane Carew, of South Emily called on friends here recently.

Mr. Thos. Flynn, who was appointed as assessor for this vicinity has completed his work.

IS $230,000 TOO MUCH MONEY? DR. SIMMS SAYS $175,000 IS NEARER

The Finance Committee of the County Council took up some work this morning that was of vital interest to the township. It was in connection with the bonding of the town for the raising of $230,000 toward the purchase of the power plant. Dr. Simms, of Fenelon Falls, who was in an excellent position to see the workings of the company sketched the history of the power company, as it concerned the committee at the present time He did not wish to oppose the issuing of the bonds, nor was he necessarily strongly in favor of it. He thought there was a medium. When Lindsay Heat and Power Company bought the power plant from Smith, the contract, the Minister of Works, Fenelon Falls was not going to allow the Company to run their poles outside of Fenelon Falls. An agreement was arrived at however, by which the company would pay certain rents to the village, besides the handing over of certain lands. The taxes alone meant a sum to the village of Fenelon Falls, of nearly to thirteen hundred dollars per year. If the town were to buy the plant, a lawsuit would be liable to occur over this agreement unless the town would be willing to come to an agreement in connection with the taxes and lands. The town was asking for the guarantee of bonds, to the extent of $230,000. He could not see that the plant was worth anything like this. $175,000 he considered to be a good round price. If an agreement were entered into between the town of Lindsay, and Fenelon Falls, by which Lindsay would pay a certain amount of power and Fenelon Falls would also have a certain fraction of the power, and this those two places would be tying themselves down. Should an industry wish to enter either one of these places, and wanted power above this agreement it would usually mean that the industry would have to be turned down. On the other hand, the Seymour Power Company had offered to put power into Lindsay even in opposition to the present company if necessary at the rate of seventeen for lighting and a decrease of 25 per cent from the present price. At the same the county would be relieved of all liability. Should this company if they were to bring power into the town, in opposition to the Light, Heat and Power Company, absorb the latter company, an agreement could be entered into with them by Fenelon Falls to allow the Railway Commission to settle the rates at which power could be secured in that village. In the event of the Seymour Company could supply any amount of power, and the town would not be held down to any set price.

He had no doubts but what the plant would pay, but a case it did not, the town of Lindsay, would be in the perfect of the County Council so that he thought the council would not be making too great a mistake in issuing the bond, and helping the town out of their difficulty, for it meant cutts a saving to them. He did not wish to go against this proposal but he thought there was another side to the question, which they were not aware of. The matter will be discussed again this afternoon.

COUNTY COUNCIL INSPECTS SCHOOLS

The County Council and Board of Education met this morning at the North Ward school in order that the councillors might look through the new schools, and see what improvements had been accomplished along educational lines. The dismissal of the students was watched with interest. It threw great credit on the teaching staff of the school in the orderly way in which the young students filed out to the accompaniment of the piano. The different rooms were then examined.

The new Central school also came in for inspection. They were delighted with the completeness, and the modernness of the building.

At the Collegiate Institute fire drill was gone through, that they might see how quickly the school could be emptied in case of a real fire. Every student was out of the school in one minute. The councillors were then given time to look through the school. They were not allowed to get away without making speeches before the students however. The students were all ordered to go up to the assembly hall, where the councillors and the members of the Board of Education were already seated. Mr. T. A. Kirkconnell in his opening remarks was glad that these gentlemen were here to come in contact with the actual workings of the school. He was only sorry that he could not bring them in direct touch with the students by having them enter into the class rooms.

THE REQUEST OF THE TOWN TURNED DOWN BY COUNTY COUNCIL

The business re. the bonding of the town of Lindsay for $230,000, for the purchase of the power plant came up again for discussion yesterday afternoon. Dr. Vrooman spoke strongly in favor of guaranteeing the bonds, but the other members of the council did not look upon the matter in the same light and when it came to a vote of the request of the town was turned clean down.

A communication was read from the inspector of asylums enclosing the sum of $35.00 as reimbursement to the municipality for the keep of an insane young man, who had to be retained in the county jail between times, in question, had tried cause the asylums were full. The to commit suicide and it was necessary to employ a night watchman, entailing a cost of $75.15 As the man could not be removed, part of the burden was therefore, borne by the government.

The present salary of J. A. Ash-$600, the increase to date from the time of his appointment. The caretaker of the court house will also be entitled of the registry office at an increase in salary of $150.

A corner of Bexley has somehow shoved over into Dunsilly. Now Bexley wants this corner shifted back into their own name. The matter will be allowed to stand until next session.

A number of reports concerning the House of Refuge were read and the general management of the house discussed. From what they had seen at the building on their inspection and heard from the inspector everything seemed to be in the very best of shape. The opportunity was therefore taken to thank Mr. J. R. McNeillie for taking so much earnest in his position of inspector in seeing that the institution was carried on to a proper manner. Mr. Hewerton, caretaker, asked for an increase of $100. It was not granted

WILLIAM STREET ROAD IMPROVEMENTS

Street Commissioner O'Neil is doing very well with the repairs to Williams-st south, but there is considerable to be done, before the road is what it should be. The main holes of the street are too high, and at the street intersections on either side of the crossings are humps which are very disagreeable to carriages and automobiles, and could be remedied at very little expense.

REV. MR. CHAFEE WILL SUPERANNUATE

The many friends of the Rev. Mr. Chafee, of Coboconk, will regret to hear of this decision to retire from the active work of the church and superannuate. He will take up his residence in Kingston, and remove to that city during the latter end of the month. Mr. Chaffee has had a long and successful pastorate at Coboconk and his departure will be deeply regretted.

Work Progressing Favourably

The work on the new railroad east of the river is progressing rapidly. The contractors have a steam shovel at work. Several houses in the neighborhood of Baker's mill have been moved. A temporary track has been laid and dump cars are employed in carrying earth from a bank to fill in the low places.

HOW THE NAILS GOT THERE

The history of the depositing of nails on William-st. pavement opposite the Presbyterian Church, was disclosed by Joe Joy, who confessed from about the country. He had been taking iron from a blacksmith shop and had picked up a quantity of rods of horse shoe nails and tacks and small bolts, and after delivering his load, deliberately dumped his wagon out on William-st. and was seen by several citizens, who spoke to him about it. It is a question whether the town is not liable for any damage that may result there from.

NO DEAD FISH IN UPPER LAKES

A report has been spread about town, to the effect that there was a large quantity of dead fish floating in the upper waters of the Scugog from which Lindsay gets its water supply. The report was referred to Fishery Inspector Brady, who, accompanied by Ops Township Clerk Agnew, made a thorough investigation yesterday, and found the report without foundation. The river was clear and clean, and our citizens have no reason for alarm.

Extending Walk On Wm. Street

Williams Bros., contractors, are putting down a concrete walk, opposite Williams-st. They have a power concrete mixer, and the rapid manner in which they lay the concrete, puts hand mixing of cement in the background. The extension of the present sidewalk will do away with the presently unsightly and dusty sod at the side of the pave ment.

A BIG DAY AT CAMBRAY

The Womens' Institute held a picnic on Wednesday afternoon in a field adjoining Mr. Richards. A baseball game was played between Woodville and Glenarm, score 6-7 in favor of the latter. The game was clean throughout and at times exciting. Tea was served in the basement of the Methodist Church and a good sum was realized to help swell the Institute's funds.

"ALEXANDRA" IS NORTH WARD SCHOOL

The new north ward school is to be called in future, the "Alexandra School." The name the decision of the school board at yesterday's meeting when Mr. Stewart notified the members that a delegation from town had spoken to him offering to denote a fine new flag for the school on condition that the building be called "Alexandra School". Needless to say the offer was at once accepted.

CHIEF OF POLICE NOT APPOINTED

(Council)

The bylaw for appointing a new chief of police, fell through, owing to no person, being decided upon. The following men were proposed:

Thos. Ringland by Lewis and Naylon.

Brennon, by McClory, lost.

Jos. Plant by McCrea and Alex Horn.

John Shortt by Dobson and McClory.

NAILS SCATTERED ALONG WILLIAM ST.

The new pavement on William-st., has been sprinkled with tacks, nails, and bits of iron that will ruin hundreds of tires and cost the automobile and bicycle tires if not removed at once. The refuse has been littered along the pavement by some malicious or careless person, who should be looked after by the Police.

"CORONATION"

[Mrs. A. O'Loughlin, of this town, received this week from Buckingham Palace, a letter from the Keeper of the Privy Secretary, Sir Arthur Bigge, acknowledging with compliments the following poem, in honor of his Majesty's Coronation]

Thou chosen King of a kingly line,
Upon thy brow may the diadem shine
As the ruby red the sapphire blue,
The emerald green and the pearl white true;
Like the diamond's splendor, may thy light cheer
The hearts of thy people, far and near.

May she, thy Queen, wear well her crown
With truth and peace through the years adown;
Like Mary, star of earth and sea
May she, thy Mary rule with thee,
To guide the people in thy care,
And shield them safe from every snare.

God send his grace to thee and thine
Through all the great illustrious line;
To her, who bore thee as her son
May right and good be ever done.
God bless King George, Queen Mary too;
Our hearts to both will ever be true

RECEPTION OF REV. H. BRYANT

The members of the congregation, of the Baptist church, gave a reception to the new pastor, the Rev. H. Bryant and his wife, on Monday evening.

The gathering was held in the school room and was well attended. The proceedings were of an easy informal character and were intended to bring the pastor and his wife in contact with the congregation.

Devotional exercises were engaged in by the pastor after which Mr. T. A. Fisher, one of the deacons, took the chair and addressed upon Mr. Kirkconnell who, on behalf of the church, spoke a few words of warm welcome.

Mr. Millar representing the Sunday school, also delivered a short address of welcome.

After a short address from the chairman, the pastor responded in a hearty manner.

The meeting was thrown open for social intercourse, refreshments were served and an enjoyable time was spent.

COMMENDABLE WORK OF STREET COMMISSIONER

The street Commissioner has done a very commendable act when he has removed from the different streets of the town, the many boxes alone which have been a considerable source of trouble. The use of a split log drive dragdover on macadam after such rain for a few times would soon get them into a more level condition and would be more comfortable for those who drive over them. The expense would not be very much and the result from its intelligent use, would be great.

CHANGES MADE BY COUNCIL

Finance Committee;—The auditor's report was read and stated that the finances and accounts were in excellent shape. The cash surplus for the year was about $900. It was felt that in order to raise money for bridge-building purposes, the assessment rate should be raised, instead of increasing debentures. Two and one half mills were levied for this purpose

Roads and Bridge Committee, Quite a discussion arose over the liability assumed by the council over the Little Bob bridge at Bobcaygeon. The upshot of the matter, was that a committee, composed of the warden, Dr. Sims and Mr. Devitt was formed to look into the matter.

The road leading to Ops swing bridge is in a dangerous condition because it is so narrow. If a rig and an automobile were to meet at this nar-

Yesterday afternoon's session of the County Council was taken up with committee work.

The committee, on education, decided that nothing should be done about making the Lindsay Collegiate Institute a county institution until the November session of the council. In Laxton County and in school section No. 3, where a new school had been built, a grant of fifty dollars was row approach, an accident would be very liable as there in not room for both to pass. The drop on each side is about four feet. The matter will be looked into and remedied.

Power was given to the warden of Ops to make any necessary repairs to Brown's Bridge.

On lot $ in rear of con. 9, the bridge has sunken considerably on account of spring floods. The bridge is not a county bridge, but it is a main road that should be fixed. The representative from this district would be satisfied if a grant of $300 would be given towards it while the township would raise the remainder. Instead of the grant, however, a committee of the warden, Mr. Varcoe and Mr. Steele was formed to look into the matter, and act as they thought best. They are authorized to pay 2-3 of the cost.

In concession, 1, Dalton, A great washout occurs every year, which makes it particularly impossible for travel. The road is covered thus, for nearly half a mile. A grant of fifty dollars was voted towards the building of a culvert.

The piers of Rosedale Bridge had shifted considerably. The Government engineer had been there and had repaired that although the bridge seemed safe enough at present it should be attended to before long. Accordingly, Mr. Talmie was given power to go ahead and see that the bridge was put in a satisfactory condition.

The approaches and piers of the Coboconk bridge were also in bad condition. Mr. Callan, the warden, will look after this matter.

Forrest House bridge will be re-floored by means of laying cedar plank lengthwise on the cedar floor.

Mr. R. J. Mitchell lost his cant hook at Emily Creek Bridge not long ago. He is now looking for settlement A new book will be bought for him.

The approaches to Gold Creek Bridge near Victoria Road will be attended to.

On lots 20 and 21 con. 4, Mariposa, there is a bridge over 300 ft. long and because of its length the county should therefore share a part of the burden for maintance. The bridge is travelled a great deal by townspeople. The warden, Mr. Hocken, and Mr. Steele, were appointed to look into the matter.

Big Fruit Year.

St. Catharines, June 12.—It was the tenth of June last year when the first home-grown strawberries made their appearance on the market. This year they are earlier by ten days and today the St. Catharines Cold Storage & Forwarding Co. will make the first carload shipment of the year to Winnipeg and the west.

The fruit season this year will be longer than any for several years past because it has begun so early. Cherries will be on the market during the week and from now on there will be little let-up for the growers.

Robert Thompson, who enjoys the distinction of being the best informed man in the district, is authority for the statement that the crop his year is the largest the Niagara District has had in a decade. Everything, he says, is very plentiful; peaches are too plentiful and will have to be thinned out to make the crop what it should be; otherwise the fruit will be small and the growers will get less benefit. The only shortage that is so far apparent is in the Marlborough raspberries, which will be much lighter than usual, though the shortage is not general to all localities.

Berlin, June 12.—Emil Bernhardt, aged 17, a Berlin boy, was killed on the Preston and Galt line Saturday night in attempting to drive across the tracks in front of a fast moving car, and his parents had no word of the fatality until notified by Chief O'Neil, about 10 o'clock yesterday morning.

Leighton Huehnargard, aged 22, was found dead in his room at the American House on Saturday morning, having been accidentally asphyxiated. HYMENEAL

PICKERING—ANDERSON

The home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Anderson, 672 Concession street was the scene of a very pretty wedding this morning, when their second daughter, Miss Margaret Elizabeth and Mr. Carman L. Pickering, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Pickering, Lindsay were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. Rev. G. W. Henderson performed the ceremony at 31 o'clock before the relatives and friends of the contracting parties after which a dainty wedding dinner was partaken of.

The groom is train despatcher for the Grand Trunk at Lindsay and was formerly identified with the local depot offices.

Among the many costly presents was a silver tea cabinet from the groom's parents, a dinner and tea set from the bride's parents, also a beautiful hand painting from fellow-employees of the groom.

The happy couple left for Montreal and points east, via. the G. T. R. 1-40 train. They will reside in Lindsay on their return. Peterboro Review.

WM. J. LINDSAY GAVE HIMSELF UP

(Special to the Post.)

Toronto, June 12.—The much heralded return of William J. Lindsay, who acted as stock selling agent for the defunct Farmers' Bank, has at last come to pass. Saturday morning, while police court was still in progress, he walked into Inspector of Detectives Duncan's office and gave himself up to face the charges which have been laid against him in connection with the bank.

He is charged with conspiring with the provisional directors, J. R. Stratton, M.P., C. H. Smith and Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, to secure the certificate of the Treasury Board of Canada enabling the bank to commence business. On Saturday no one seemed to know exactly his position in this matter. No available record showed whether he had been indicted with the others by the grand jury of the assizes in May. The cases of the others are traversed to the next sittings of that court.

Mr. Corley, however, made an order for bail in the sum of $4,000 and Lindsay's own bond in that amount. Bondsmen were secured late in the afternoon.

He appears in the Police Court today, when it is understood that the Attorney-General's Department will be present to speak to the laying of information for alleged securing of stock subscriptions from Halton County farmers by fraud and securing commissions from the bank for such subscriptions, which were later repudiated.

Lindsay's fingerprints, photograph and Bertillion measurements were taken on Saturday.

PRINCE OF WALES NOW GARTER KNIGHT

London, June 12.—The first of the great state functions associated with the coronation of King George V. was witnessed Saturday at Windsor Castle, where the Prince of Wales was invested with the insignia of the Order of the Garter.

This elaborate ceremonial, dating from the institution of the order 560 years ago, was conducted in the throne room. King George and Queen Mary, with the knights of the order, attended in gorgeous robes, and full insignia of the order. The King himself buckled the blue velvet garter on the left leg of the youthful knight.

Following the investiture a brief religious service was held at St. George's Chapel, and the King and Queen and knights then returned in procession to the castle. The ceremony was private, but the boys from Eton, the civic authorities of Windsor and a few privileged ones were permitted to view the procession.

The investiture was a very brilliant function, the ceremony including a grand procession of knights in their robes. The knights wore full regalia, including the large plumed hats, more than a foot in height, which have been worn only on rare occasions.

The King himself buckled the garter on the prince's left leg, affixed the riband and the George on the left shoulder, fastened the star of the order to the left breast and handed his royal highness the collar.

During the investiture the prelate of the order, the Bishop of Winchester, pronounced the following quaint admonition:

"To honor God omnipotent and in memorial of the blessed Martyr St. George, tie about thy leg for thy renown this noble garter. Wear it as a symbol of the most illustrious order, never to be forgotten or laid aside, that thereby thou mayst be admonished to be courageous, and, having undertaken any just war in which thou shalt be engaged, that thou mayst stand firm, valiantly, fight successfully and conquer."

Must Pay Duty on Pets

Just to show how much they want reciprocity with Canada, the American customs authorities have made a ruling that all animals, pets or otherwise, brought from the States into Canada by American visitors, even though their stay on this alien soil be but for an hour or so, will be subject to full duty payment on their return across the border. What splendid encouragement to the spirit of fraternalism.

PRESENTATION TO MR. R. A. MILLER

On Friday evening the employees of The Canadian Cereal and Milling Co. assembled in the Company's office to bid good-bye to Mr. R. A. Miller. Mr. J. J. McDonald read the address and R. H. Graham made the presentation of a handsome cabinet and fruit set. The address was as follows;—

Dear Mr. Miller,—

We your co-workers, of the Canadian Cereal and Milling Co. have come together this evening to express to you the very deep regret we feel at your departure from us.

For many years we have worked together where your cheerful manner, kind disposition, and readiness at all times to assist your fellow workmen has endeared you to all with whom you came in contact.

Our earnest wish is that success may be yours in your new field of labor, and should ask you to accept this cabinet and fruit set as a slight token of the good wishes we extend to you and your family.

We know that in the West, where we believe, you intend making your future home, success awaits all who labor with the untiring efforts and zeal which you have always exhibited and there we have every reason to believe, your highest ambitions will be reached, which is the earnest wish of your fellow employees.

Lindsay, June, 9, 1911.

Mr. Miller was completely taken by surprise and in a few words thanked the employees for their kind remembrance.

Dead Number 350

Mexico City, June 12.—Because of the lack of telegraph facilities and slowness with which the officials of villages in outlying districts make reports to the Government it is not improbable that months may pass before an accurate statement of the number of earthquake victims is known.

The list of known dead so far totals a few more than 150. It is possible this number may be augmented somewhat, but neither Government officers nor local newspapers believe it will exceed 350, notwithstanding some rumors placed the number at more than 1,000.

ZAM-BUK SAVED THIS BABY
Mrs. M. Hassett, Gravel Road, Montreal, says:
"A friend with cures all over one my baby's face and spread until it had nearly covered his cheeks. It was irritating and scaly, and I used to pick the little one hours of suffering. We tried doctors and powders and salves, but he got no better. He refused his food, got quite thin and weak, and was reduced to a very serious condition. I was advised to try Zam-Buk, and did so. It was wonderful how it seemed to cool and ease the child's burning painful skin. Zam-Buk from the very commencement seemed to go right to the spot, and the improvement followed the irritation grew less and less. Within a few weeks my baby's skin was healed completely. He has now not a trace of eczema, or eruption, or eczema, or burning sore. Not only too, but cured of the long-standing skin trouble, he has improved in general health."
Zam-Buk is sold at all stores and medicine venders, 50c. a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Cheap Imitations are dangerous. Insist on having the genuine Zam-Buk, and refuse substitutes.

COMMUNICATION

Editor of the Post,
Dear Sir,—

Is it not about time that we stopped to consider where we are at, and compare our situation with other towns in the Midland District?

When the proposition from the Seymour Power Company was first drawn last fall, it was stated that Lindsay would be put on the same basis as to rates and facilities as practically the same basis as Toronto in regard to lights at least.

Before we rush into the agreement, let us look at the matter squarely and fairly from the town standpoint. We are asked to pay $230,000 for an old plant which cost about $130,000. It is estimated that it will cost $70,000 additional for betterments, making in all $300,000. The interest on this annually at 4 per cent will amount to $12,000. The sinking fund for supporting it with other municipalities should be $3 1-2 per cent on what we are getting now. From the report of the Hydro Electric Commission, we find that the lighting bills amount to about $27,000. Thirty three and one-third per cent (33 1-3 per cent) on this would be about $9,000. In addition to this, the town of Fenelon Falls must be treated with, and we no doubt, to settle with them, will have to pay them at least one-half of the tax rate now collected, or say $850, per annum. To sum up, we stand to lose as follows, annually, if we fail to make as good an arrangement as other municipalities have made.

Interest on debentures, $13,500.00; saving in light rates, about $8,000; annual payment to Fenelon Falls, $850; or total annual loss $22,350.

In addition to this, we are assuming an old plant which will in a few years be absolute and no doubt will have to be replaced. We are incurring a debt of $300,000.00, which will stand against the town. We will have no surplus power to offer any industry that may desire to locate here.

These facts, the electors should, consider very carefully before voting and it does look to me as if we should follow the course of other municipalities, and procure the very best rates from every source, before closing any deal.

Yours very truly,
RATEPAYER.

SUNDAY'S STORM CAUSED GREAT LOSS MANY KILLED THROUGHOUT PROVINCE

Owen Sound, June 12.—John Murphy was killed and Robert Hutton and Arthur Varman were seriously injured in a fire lighting storm with peculiar features, which occurred here late yesterday afternoon.

Murphy was standing on the street close to the adjoining brick and the other two men were about 60 feet away from him when the shock descended. After killing Murphy, the electrical fluid ran along the rails to where the other two men were standing. Both were stunned and thrown to the ground. All three are well known residents of the town. Murphy was a married man and leaves a family.

Owen Sound was the centre of a curious phenomenon. Two cyclones, one traveling from the east and one from the west, appearing to meet. A dense rain fell and a few minutes turned to hail, which beating down with great violence, wrecked thousands of windows in town, and killed roods on a number of farms in the vicinity. In the county jail 150 windows were broken, and in the chief industry, there are than 600. Crops in the neighborhood were badly damaged.

Boy and Team Killed.

Woodstock, June 12—In a terrific electric storm which passed over here Friday night, Maxwell Redmond of Blandford, was struck and killed, together with two horses he was driving. The boy, having unhitched the team past one to the field driving three horses drawing a manure spreader when the storm broke and people noticed the boy's body.

On going to investigate, the boy's father, Robert Redmond found the lad and two of the horses dead, and the other one in a dying condition.

Thomas Bell, a farmer of Eastwood, was also struck and severely injured while waiting in the field. He was unconscious for some hours, but is now recovering.

Damage In London.

London, Ont. June 12—Lightning struck in several places during a storm which continued on this city for about six o'clock yesterday morning. But no damage was done, save in the case of the business house was shattered and the roof of Bishop Crospy Memorial Church damaged.

Storm Havoc at New York.

New York, June 12—An electrical storm of unusual intensity swept upon this metropolis of the country Saturday night and for hours played havoc with wire communication in all directions.

For a time during the height of the storm one of the big telegraph companies had no wires working either north or south.

A survey of the battlefield over which the elements raged from ten o'clock Saturday night until four o'clock yesterday afternoon showed that it was more than a minute war waged. The have of lightning and wind and fire and water was widespread in this metropolis. New York including the loss of at least three lives and damage amounting to the loss of thousands of dollars.

Lives aggregating more than $100,000 were caused by fires set by lightning. It is estimated that $50,000 damage was done in a fire which engulfed the Hudson, L.I., where twenty-five thousand men and women were witnessing a society circus. Twelve hundred were blown down and in the stampede which followed, six women were trampled upon and taken to the hospital for treatment of injuries.

Storm Wrecks Grandstand.

Chambersburg, Pa., June 12—A severe windstorm swept over Franklin county, telling trees, unroofing a dozen buildings and prostrating wires of telephone, electric light and trolley companies. One hundred feet of the grandstand at the T. M. Smith Seed Co. was blown in. No one was hurt.

Ross Wingell, a resident of this place, came in contact with a live wire and died. The damage is estimated at $50,000. The storm was general in the Cumberland Valley.

Storm Spoils Aero Race.

Rome, June 12—Stormy weather Saturday caused three of the foreign motors who have reached Rome in the Paris-Rome-Turin race, to abandon the contemplated start on the final leg of the aerial journey.

The schedule called for a concluding flight of 291 miles, taking the contestants first from Rome to Florence and then on the final leg from Florence to Bologna, another official stop, and then on to Turin.

The crossing of the mountain peaks called for the most daring exploit of the whole 1,300 miles of the course, and great interest in this test had been aroused.

AN ARTILLERY TEAM

The officers commanding field batteries have received instructions to give effect that one man from each of the 15 highest field batteries in last year's efficiency list will be taken in the composite team which goes to England in August for the artillery competitions. There will also be eight men from the heavy artillery and seven men from the coast defence, making a team 40 strong.

STORM WAS VERY SEVERE IN THIS SECTION

Sunday evening, between five and six o'clock a terrific storm swept this district, and for a time the town was enveloped in Egyptian darkness. Thunder, lightning and the wind vied with each other, and all was chaos for some minutes. The wind blew at a mile a minute gait, and in different parts of the town trees were blown off the pipe stems, while the branches were carried through the air like paper. Fences went in the streets and other refuse, as well as loose signs, boxes, etc. were taken up by the wind and those who were caught in the storm and ran for shelter, could only see a few feet ahead of them. Bricks and boards were also blown from the roofs of buildings and hurled through the air endangering the lives of citizens.

From all over the district comes reports of damage as a result of the storm. Barns and other buildings were blown down, and wrecked and trees and limbs were scattered about in all directions. In some localities cattle were killed.

The storm did not last very long but it was very effective, nevertheless, and the nervously inclined portion of the population breathed easier when it had spent itself.

The storm caused considerable inconvenience in Lindsay. Heat and Power Co., and the telephone and telegraph lines. The Bell Telephone Co. between Lindsay and Orillia, and the Lindsay-Bobcaygeon line were also put out of business.

The local power company was also hard hit, more especially on the line between Lindsay and Fenelon Falls. Branches of trees had been blown from the large oak trees which had climbed one of the posts had its head turned completely off. The damage fortunately was only slight and as a result, the residents in town, were in darkness for quite a while, while the church services were cut short owing to the power being off.

AT BOBCAYGEON

Chas. Thomson of South Ventnor lost eight head of fine cattle by the storm, Saturday morning.

The storm Sunday did considerable damage in the village. Trees were uprooted, and the gable of the town hall was blown in and the stones fell to the floor beneath during considerable damage.

The plate glass in Mrs. D. Baker's millinery store was broken by the storm, the transom in Mrs. Baker's store was broken, and considerable damage was done to the goods in the window. Several part lies were on the lower lakes picnicing, and were caught by the storm, but fortunately no accidents occurred.

At Sturgeon Point yesterday, the storm was terrific and a great deal of damage was done in the vicinity of the village. When the wind began to rise about five o'clock, quite a number of launches were out on the lake heading for the shore, expecting the tempest that was close upon them.

Two young men from town, Clarence Holdcoft and Earl Quibell, were out in a very small steel gasoline launch when the rain and wind swept the waters and completely obliterated them from the sight. Several launches went out to see what had become of them, but could not locate them.

The boys, however, with continual bailing, keeping their craft afloat and under way until near the Pleasant Point shore when the motor stopped and they were tossed about dangerously. On the shore which they were approaching, quite a couple of launches washed up on the rocks, but before long another launch picked them up and towed them to Lindsay. A false report spread about town, that the two boys had perished, caused intense anxiety at the home of Mrs. Quibell, Mrs. Holt, and a search party was being organized when they arrived.

The waves lifted Mr. Lloyd Wood's launch upon the pier where it was tied and stove in the side with the result that it sank immediately. Later the hull was temporarily patched up and floating again.

All over Sturgeon Point trees are down, fences and sheds were uprooted around Dr. Vrooman's cottage.

The roof was blown off a barn at the Bay.

A party of twenty-two from Lindsay, returning from Bobcaygeon, met the storm just below McConnell's Island and had the most thrilling experience of their lives. The boat was turned and headed in the direction the wind was blowing, fortunately reaching shelter in a bay. On several occasions the launch nearly turned turtle, but was quickly righted by the pilot to whose presence of mind the ladies and gentlemen in double, owe their lives. One gentleman remarked "My wife never came so near collecting my insurance, as she did this afternoon.

D. B. Thomas Under Arrest

Lindsay citizens will be pleased to learn that D. B. Thomas has been arrested in Breckenbridge, Minn., for swindling Barrows & Shepherd, of that place, out of $11,000 and for forging warrants deed.

David B. Myers (as he called himself) representing himself to be from Freeport, Ill., arrived in Breckenbridge, Minn., and proceeded to make arrangements with Plaisted Bros., land agents, for the purchase of some land.

He then agreed to sell to Barrows & Shepherd for $20,000.

Francis Gray, Dayesville, was the owner of the land and Myers went to Fargo to meet him. He returned with the warrantee deed and presented it to Barrows & Shepherd, who began to get suspicious, and on making enquiries it was found that he was not known in Freeport, and also that Mr. Gray had not heard of him. Myers had forged Gray's name to the deed. The penalty for the offence is not more than twenty years in the state prison.

The pris-er confessed to a string of operations covering two years time in which from the state penitentiary, of Indiana, where he served two years for forgery.

His right name is David B. McCain and he is 28 years old. His home is in Marion, Ind. where he has a wife and three children. He has left his family and admits that he spends his money on fast women.

Just what will be done with him has not been decided.

The following has been received by the town fro e. E. H. Gibb, County Attorney, Breckenbridge, Minn.

"We have out, David B. McCain, in jail here for forgery. He tells us that he has operated in your town as a shoe manufacturer, and that the people put up a bonus for him in starting his project, that he operated there under the name of D. Thomas, and that he forged some notes at the neighborhood. By this means you are placed on an equal footing with every other contestant.

A BABY'S CRY

Sort of Esperanto That Should be Adopted by Mothers

The cry of a young baby is really one of the most marvellous things in creation, says a leading English doctor. For coercive and defensive powers it is equal, and in fact, it has proved to make arrangements with Pharaoh Jones, land agents, for the purchase of some land.

"Yet, what is this cry? The mother even after a few days can tell at once if it is only the healthy scream of a child disturbed in its sleep—or whether it of anything is wrong. The baby has no language but a cry." It is a sort of universal Esperanto that should be understood at any rate by those who have charge of them. It is worth noting that a baby cries without tears. This is because the tear glands are not working at birth, and the tears do not flow until about three months of age.

While speaking of a child's cry it is well to remember that while crying may mean nothing but a sense of mild discomfort, its total absence always means something wrong and generally something serious.

I HEREBY CERTIFY that I have drawn by my own hand ten samples of the St. Lawrence Sugar Refining Co's EXTRA STANDARD GRANULATED SUGAR, indiscriminately taken from four bags of about 150 barrels each and six bags of about 450 bags each. BANQUET AFTER CADET INSPECTION

The inspection of the L. C. I. battalion at the Fair grounds yesterday afternoon attracted a large crowd of spectators and citizens. The boys wore the L. C. I. sweater and dark trousers with red braid down the sides.

The shield donated by Major Miller has been won by Company A. The boys went through the various manoeuvres with alacrity and precision and in every way acquitted themselves very creditably.

The following is a list of the officers and non-commissioned officers, the battalion:

Major—E. A. Miller.
Adjutant—Mr. H. G. Manning.
Sergt. Major—Mr. Hissonnette.
Sergt. Drummer—Mr. A. Aylin.

A. COMPANY.

Capt. J. O'Neill; Lieut. W. Anderson, W. Anderson; Sergts. Harry Balfour, H. Brown, W. Kirkconnell, Of Varcoe; Corporals, C. Spence, S. Hopkins, S. Flavelle, D. Low; Lance Corporals, H. Burn, W. Kirkconnell, V. Gillogly, C. Holdcroft.

B. COMPANY.

Capt. G. A. Dunn; Lieut. E. McBalfour, H. Brown, W. Kirkconnell, B. Donald, G. Ryley, R. Martin; Corporals, R. Staples, L. Nesbitt, H. Beal, J. White; Lance Corporals L. McFadden, N. Stoddart, R. Stewart, H. Weldon.

C. COMPANY.

Capt. M. Brokenshire; Lieuts., H. Jackson, B. Martin; Sergts., L. Kennan, G. Knowlson, D. Fleetham, C. Shields; Corporals, C. McCrea, J. Williams, W. Herlihey, A. Oliver, Lance Corporals, L. Donald, C. Mulvihill, G. Tilly, H. Campbell.

A very enjoyable affair took place last night in the L.C.I. gymnasium when the Board of Education, the teachers of the school, and Col. Gillvie, the inspecting officer, were the guests of the battalion at a banquet. Mr. H. E. Mann, of the Academy cafe, provided the banquet. There were four tables set—one for each of the three companies, and one for the guests. The officers of the different companies waited on the tables.

Mr. Thos. Stewart made a very capable toastmaster.

The first number on the program was a piano solo by Private Mason which was encored.

Mr. Stewart addressed the battalion and said it was an inspiration to see such a type of Canadian manhood and citizen boyhood as they were. In a few well chosen words he reviewed the progress of the development of the West and the glorious opportunity that was to be had for advancement in that country. "We have a heritage than which there is none better."

One of the greatest things is to learn to like work. Cultivate the habit of work, and be a credit to Canada. The greatest benefit to be derived from the battalion is in learning how to improve the physique, and most important of all learning to obey. I am glad that we are prepared for war, but I earnestly hope our militia and navy may never be needed. It should be the ambition of every one of us to promote peace. Our late, King Edward VII, left a unique name, Edward the Peacemaker.

The next number on the program was a toast to The King, which was proposed by Private Stewart, and responded to by everyone, heartily standing, "God Save the King."

The toast to Our Country was proposed by Lance Corporal Kirkconnell, who in a few words pictured the destiny of the Dominion of Canada, as being no mean one, notwithstanding as she does such vast material resources.

Dr. Blanchard responded to the toast. As he watched the drill in the afternoon, he felt that his country was safe anyway. A politician in Ottawa, spoke of Canada, as extending from the Atlantic to Halifax the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the east to the west, and clear across the continent. Any country with such dimensions was good enough for anybody.

Sergt. Drummer Aylin then favored the gathering with a humorous reading, which was heartily applauded.

The toast to our Guests was proposed by Private Fisher.

Col. Gillvie in his response said that the composition for the shield was very close—in fact the result had to be worked out in decimals. He congratulated Company A. on their success. The battalion as a whole was excellent—as good or better than any he had yet inspected.

Dr. Wood also responded to the toast Our Guests. He assured the battalion that the School Board would do all in their power to help them. He hoped the time would come, soon, when there would be no more war. "We are never better prepared for peace, than when prepared for war." The speaker noted with pleasure the success of the L.C.I. boys in the battle of life. "It is for you to maintain this prestige," said the speaker. "You must prepare to fill the places of those on the scene now." The speaker felt sure that the money spent on the schools had been used to the best advantage.

A selection on the drum was rendered by Private Oliver, accompanied by Private Mason, which was heartily encored.

The toast Our School was proposed by Lieut. K. Anderson, who showed the influence of the Collegiate Institute on Canadian boyhood and manhood.

Mr. T. A. Kirkconnel responded and showed in a few well chosen words why there should be such an institution as the Collegiate. The first reason was to increase the brain power, develop the ability in students to think things out for themselves. Students also learn self-control. Strong sense of honor and are taught to obey. The great set lacking in Canadian manhood is obedience to authority. These others were given for the popular principal.

The next number was a solo by Mr. Ford Moyse, which was heartily applauded.

The toast, Our Corps was proposed by Mr. Jennings, who referred to several new features, among them being more men, new uniform and rifles, and that the corps had developed into a battalion. A new spirit had been developed, and that helped a lot. The ugly features of war was shooting—yet, from theiar practice, the boys turned precisions.

Major Miller responded to this toast. He thanked Col. Gillvie for his kind and thorough inspection. He congratulated Company A. on winning the shield. "Much of the success of today, said the speaker is due to the loyal support of the officers and men."

Capt. O-Neill (A), Capt. Dunn (B) and Capt. Brokenshire (C) also spoke in high terms of the uniting energy of Mr. Miller.

Private Stewart then rendered a piano solo, which was loudly applauded.

The gathering dispersed with the singing of God Save the King.

County Council Make Improvements

A deputation representing the town council and the Board of Trade waited on the County Council yesterday afternoon for the purpose of asking them to issue debentures for the purchase of the electric plant in the town of Lindsay.

Mr. R. M. Beal, Mayor, was the first speaker. Mr. Beck, of the Hydro Electric Commission, had spoken very well of the proposed new development at Peneion Falls. It was the best business proposition which any municipality could asking for. The Mayor was as cheap or even cheaper, than any other power west of Toronto. The Mayor said the Commission reported that the Falls would develop a total of 3000 horse power. Mr. F. W. Sutcliffe, Mayor of Ft. Cimmcoe, also spoke strongly in favor of the purchase.

A motion was then made by which the standing Committee was instructed to take the necessary steps for issuing of debentures to the amount of $250,000 to be applied to the purchase of the power plant in the town of Lindsay.

The council then adjourned and took up committee work. The equalization of the assessment roll showed the income assessment to $325000. The business assessment will remain the same $37325. The dominion assessment will remain the same as is recorded in roll.

The Finance Committee,—Dr. Vrooman in the chair, recommended that ex-warden Tiers will be hung in the Court room. A pump to carry away the surplus water from the basement will be installed after due forethought on the part of certain representatives. CHINESE BOY HANGED HIMSELF

Toronto, June 12—Disconsolate because his was told by his uncle to cut a week's come money to buy clothes, John Dai Tak, a 15-year-old Chinese lad hanged himself in his bedroom over his uncle's laundry, at 657 West Queen street.

When his uncle went upstairs at 7 o'clock on Saturday morning, he found the boy hanging by a rope taken from a tea chest, which he had passed through a stovepipe hole over the doorway. The uncle cut the dead body down and went to the east end to the city and notified a relation of the deceased. When they arrived at their home they tried to revive the boy, but, seeing their efforts were of no avail, they summoned Dr. Killgrass, who, on seeing the body, pronounced life extinct.

The lad was taken to the morgue. The chief coroner is investigating, but it is unlikely that an inquest will be held. The father lives in Vancouver.

LOST HIS LIFE IN SAVING OTHERS

Toronto, June 12—Attempting to swim to shore when the sailboat in which he and his companions were sailing capsized, Arthur Hewitt, 18-year-old son of Arthur Hewitt, general manager of the Consumers' Gas Co., met with a drowning accident this afternoon just a few hundred yards off the Island cottage at Lotter Park. Young Hewitt was the eldest of the party of three lads, including his three year-old brother Gordon, and Edward, son of Mr. Booth of the T. Eaton Co., both of whom clung to the boat until rescued.

The three had been out some time, and although Hewitt was a good sailor, the squall came up so suddenly, and the boat had not time to right the sail. One lad, however, he seemed to retain confidence, and placing the younger members of the party in safe positions, he started to swim for the shore. He had not gone far when he was seen by onlookers to turn back, and the young man disappeared. The boat reached the other two, but the lad was not seen to rise to the surface of sight. Mark Fahlgren was notified and is now assisting in the dragging.

WERE ARRESTED AT BOBCAYGEON

Examiner—Two young men named Osbourne Montgomery and Louis Thibadeau, river drivers, from Nogies creek near Bobcaygeon, were arrested on Saturday night at Bobcaygeon, by High County Constable Cottrane, on the very serious charge of attempted murder. They were arraigned before Magistrate Edmison in the County Court this morning and were represented by their counsel, Mr. G. N. Gordon. They would neither plead nor elect. They were remanded until next Friday at 10 o'clock, when the witnesses on both sides will be present. The Examiner is informed that the circumstances of the case are as follows:—

It appears that a week or so ago these young men were coming down the creek on a drive, and the wind turned against them, so they stopped at Nogies Creek bridge and got into a little shed there. While they were in there, it is said, a young boy named Campbell came along and picked the door. Then the men inside had to break the door to get out, and when they did so the boy had a gun. The next evening they were in the same place, and the boy appeared on the other side. He was in bad shape, using some insolent language, and the men caught him and ducked him in the creek with the result of this charge being laid.

Crown evidence, it is stated, will be to the effect that they took the boy down to the middle of the creek, amongst a lot of floating logs, and left him to sink or swim; but to meet this the defence states that the water was only waist deep. The evidence was taken in the case as the witnesses could not be present but it will be dealt with on Friday.

On motion of Messrs Swain and Ferguson, the council then resolved to a court of revision for the revision of the assessment rolls for the present year, with Mr. michael in the chair.

The court adjourned until Monday, July 10, to consider the appeals of Mr. John Hancock against the C.P.R. and also the appeals of the G.N.W. Telegraph Co.

The Council then adjourned until Monday, the 10 of July.

THE OPPONENTS OF RECIPROCITY MAKE ANOTHER STAND IN AMERICAN SENATE

Washington, June 20.—Republican opposition to the Canadian reciprocity pact in the Senate entered on the stage of open revolt yesterday. Led by Senator Dixon of Montana, who again failed in his demand for an explanation of the Canadian tariff in the bill, from some of the Republican leaders, the champions of the Republican opposition, clearly showed that if the bill passed, many Republicans would join the Democrats in an attempt to lower the duties on all manufactured products.

When the conversation is pulled out of the system of protection, said Senator Dixon, "when the farmers' products are thrown into a free market while his purchases continue to be protected, they are taxed for protectionists in the Republican party who will vote to lower the duties pulled down on iron and steel, chemicals, cotton, and many other things."

Other northwestern Republicans stood by their approval of the Montana Senator's words that the passing of the reciprocity bill which it is admitted will have a majority of the votes in the Senate, will be attended with a fight that threatens to split wide open the whole tariff subject.

"We want to make one killing," declared Senator Crawford of South Dakota. "We find the Senators from Connecticut, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Maine States that have always repeatedly reaped the greatest harvest of protection, adopting this measure that proposes to put on the free list every single article raised by the northwest. I want to deal with this matter in its entirety. If Pennsylvania, Mississippi, and Massachusetts have joined hands in a new political propaganda, it is time for the rest of the country to strike out on a new tack."

"If you can't get enough Senators on that side with you," returned Senator Daly of Texas, "we will take some of those bills now coming over from the House and make a whole new tariff law of it."

Senator Bailey declared there would be no adjournment until the Senate had acted upon the free hat bill and the woollen bill.

Reciprocity came before the Senate yesterday, with the Root amendment, affecting the importation of pulp wood and paper from Canada, on the notice for immediate consideration. This amendment was laid aside at the request of Senator Root's absence. Latest reports from Senator Root's home and he would not be ready to discuss the amendment until Wednesday.

Opponents of the bill then demanded an explanation of speech from Senator Lodge in the Senate yesterday. Senator Cummings said he wanted to speak against the Root amendment, and he made a plea that the amendment was not officially before the House. Meanwhile, the committee, Senator Dixon, Senator Bailey, Senator Smith of Michigan and others declared they would make no speeches against the bill if they could have some word in its support.

In a direct attack upon the Root amendment, Senator Williams contended that it is "outrageous" that Canadian paper or pulp would come in free of duty while duties of duty until all Canadian provinces had removed their prohibitive duties, and that the influence of the paper trust would result in preventing its over coming in free.

"You can take your choice," he said. "You can vote for the amendment and indefinitely postpone the removal of Canadian restrictions, or you can vote against it and insure Canadian advantage. I propose to continue the present grip of the International Paper Co. with this amendment," he said with much impatience. "While those who wish to remove that strangling hold will vote against it."

COLBORNE PRINTER WAS ACQUITTED

Cobourg, June 20.—Nine weeks ago Leslie Burke, a young printer, was arrested in Cobourg, charged with arson in connection with a serious fire that originated in The Express printing office, where Burke had been for some weeks employed, and he maintained an entire business block. Last night in the Colborne Court, he came, accompanied by his father, a half hours after a jury had returned a verdict of not guilty.

The June sessions here before Judge Benson, the case lasted four days, many witnesses being examined. After the week-end adjournment, court resumed at one o'clock yesterday, when Judge Benson delivered his charge to the jury. They were out an hour and a quarter, when they returned with a verdict of not guilty. The fire was thought at the time to have been incendiary, and the mystery of its origin is as deep as ever.

SYLVESTER APPEAL WAS DISMISSED

Toronto, June 20.—The Divisional Court has dismissed the appeal of R. Sylvester from the decision of Mr. Justice Clute awarding G. L. Sharpe damages $2,000 and costs damages for the loss of an arm. Sharpe is a mechanic and was employed by Sylvester to go up to the northwest with a patent and the Sylvester Protection engine was started while Sharpe had his arm thrusted in the spokes of the wheel, and it was crushed to the shoulder. The accident took place seven miles from Regina.

LONDON CITY ABLAZE WITH GLORY

London, June 19.—On the eve of coronation week London is ablaze with glory. Two days ago the streets were the streets congested a city in pilate, and was almost in a state of panic. All this has been transformed with the change. Thousands of Canadian people now appears in her gayest gala attire. From early morning until late at night the streets are crowded with a cosmopolitan throng. Motor buses are now a job lot compared to sight-seeers to the coronation route. Musical rehearsals are proceeding in full choir and orchestra for the great ceremony in Westminster abbey. Nearly than 450 voices compose the choir, drawn from every cathedral in England. The interior transformation of the abbey is practically finished, and the final rehearsal to-day, at which the King and Queen Mary will be present, everything will be in readiness for Thursday's coronation.

Early in the week the last of the royal delegates will arrive with the exception of the distinguished Canadian, who is expected to arrive on the 24th. Orderly Yard also will be used to treat such approaches as portable stands, designed carrying or wearing them within 100 yards of the route of the procession will be unceremoniously conducted into the nearest side street.

MR. R. KYLIE GIVES HIS VIEWS ON LOCAL POWER PROPOSITION

To the Editor.—

Sir,—In the our article in Saturday's Post, we at first class advice. I understand we have an option good until December 1st on the Pension plant. They may wish hurry in such an important matter as this, but I understand that at most two years before we could get a civil answer from the Power Company, and we want to be sure of our position, and still, only that opposition and competition developed from a source from which it was thought impossible.

Now, we are asked to look with suspicion on the gentlemen and the Company that brought the power to Toronto, in price of $70,000. Surely, ratepayers are entitled to benefit of all the information they can get. Power costs a sum of $300,000 and it is not a question of price I believe it would be better for the people of Lindsay to give $50,000 too much, and get a good supply of power, than to be handicapped for lack of power, and they have got the plant as a gift. Abundance of electrical power is going to be the winning card in the industrial propositions in the future. No question about it. The purchase of the Pension power, and the development of the power further north, was, and is still, a favorite scheme of mine, and I do not like to oppose it. But I have considered it only half hatched, and I will give it all the opposition I can. Postpone the vote, and the engineers back to Minden. An option can be taken to get a full report of the value of the energy, and the cost of development of all those powers up north, and in the meantime let the citizens look into the Seymour Power Company's proposition. We have ample time before our option expires. Then, I am sure, the ratepayers will be in a position to give a decided vote on the most important proposition that ever came before the community. A vector in Saturday's Post talks about getting power from the Seymour Co., or the back country into us. If we find ourselves short. It is nonsense, to my mind. In the first place, we would not look for it unless we wanted it, and industry.

Editor, the counsel of Lindsay looking to the Seymour Co., or the Minden Falls, while the customer is waiting. It is the wrong time at present I ever heard. What we now or we get now, will be Lindsay's opinion for years to come. I firmly believe that there is plenty of it in the north country, but surely now is the time to know it. Let the friends of the Seymour Power Co., has changed the complexion of things in the Midland district, and we must not fail to power ourselves accordingly. I am not advocating the Seymour Power Company's offer, because I know enough about it, but it should, and must be considered before voting. Don't let anyone make us believe that the Seymour Co., is a dangerous institution. They are a Company operated under a Dominion lease, controlled by the Dominion Government, and are willing to turn over all differences to the Board of Railway Commissioners body of men just as able, and as independent as the Hydro Electric Commission, so that we are just as safe under them, as the towns in the west under the Hydro Commission. Talk to the ratepayers of Campbellford, Deloro, Belleville, Trenton, Bowmanville, Port Hope, and Oshawa, and other towns and villages, along the front and find out what they have done for those places and what, and how they are regarded in that section, and you will find that they look just as high a place in the estimation of the ratepayers of those different places, as do the Hydro people in Toronto, and when they come to us, and offer the goods we want, we cannot afford to turn a deaf the people of Toronto are deaf, ear to the offer. Just see what When they could not get the Company to come to Toronto, though it was worth, they brought in opposition, and cut the prices in two. Now, is that not a disadvantage for the ratepayers of Toronto.

The people of Lindsay have not any great fault to find with the Lindsay Power Co. They gave as good service as you could expect from a private corporation. They thought their own interests pretty well, and for years we have felt that we have been paying too much for our light and waring. This plant looked like a deserted village, after night, compared with other towns and cities in the Midland and Eastrict. Now, when the ratepayers get an offer that may change all this, we have not the slightest fear, that we should not investigate it. Those of our citizens, who in the past, have been deprived of the comfort of light, on account of the price, will not improve their position much, by voting for the Seymour Power Co., to be forced to remain the same, but they will have to pay their share of the cost of the plant, and the expense of power, about which there is a wide difference of opinion, the chances of industries coming here will not be very good. Their will have the doubtful satisfaction of seeing their sons and daughters going to other towns, where industries are attracted by a plentiful supply of electric power, and they can go and spend a few days in the winter for employment.

Postpone the vote until September, and take time to investigate the whole matter.

Yours, etc.
R. KYLIE.

HALIFAX HAD A SERIOUS BLAZE

Halifax, June 19—Spontaneous combustion in a junk warehouse started a fire in the north end of the city early yesterday morning, which destroyed four warehouses and a large quantity of junk and caused a great panic amongst the people. The fire was discovered at 2 a.m. by a watchman, who was passing the place, and he immediately rang in the alarm. Three alarms were sent in and the fire brigade was soon on the spot and at the scene. The proximity of the conflagration to the Ordnance Yards alarmed the military, and the soldiers were ordered to stand by.

Adjoining the junk warehouse was a two-storey building belonging to the Keels Construction Co. The fire spread there and after a long and hard fight, the building establishment to the east, was saved, but the junk and the warehouse blew off portions of the roof, and caused the building to have a heavy cold submersion special with other materials.

STRONG PLEA FOR THE EAST INDIAN

London, June 20.—At the opening of the Imperial Conference, Now Zealand Premier Ward, K.C., M.P., was called to be entrusted with wide legislative powers regarding the Indian immigration question.

Mr. Crewe said that before the resolution was moved he desired to make a few remarks on the question. He had had the advantage of discussions with the Indian deputation first as Colonial Secretary, and subsequently as Secretary for India. In both offices he had come to the conclusion that immigration to be disturbed, and the Indian Government, Lord Ripon, Lord Kimberley, Lord Morley, and Lord Hardinge, had all been of the same opinion, that the treatment of members of the native race in Natal was the most alarming condition.

He regretted that it was possible for the Indian Government to work with the Indian Government to work down for the admission of immigrants from the natives of Indian race as easy and pleasant than in the past. If it became known that the Indian limits Indian subjects would receive a genuine welcome and would not be looked upon with suspicion, a great deal might be done to bring about better relations between India and the dominions. Untiring pleasant relations, which would be to the dominions and India we are in a fair position to make.

Sir Joseph Ward, in moving the resolution, said he was convinced that, as far as New Zealand was concerned, they had nothing but the most loyal and friendly feelings towards India. India was the most valuable jewel in the crown, and they would be proud to see the day of self-government. The resolution was directed. It was simply that of expired, the Indian members, Lascirs included, who were put in the Natal Bill, should be treated by British-owned ships manned by British seamen, and not by New Zealand.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said the Canadian Government was prepared to support the resolution although perhaps they would not have drafted it in the same terms.

Mr. Chas. Lee Batchelor said the Australian view was very similar to that of the New Zealand Premier. It had been caused in the past by misunderstanding the position of the self-governing dominions.

WATCHMAN SLEPT MILL DESTROYED

Chatham, June 20.—A serious fire broke out in William Bradasie, saw mill, on the Grand River, about half-way between Chatham at half-past one o'clock, yesterday morning. The fire started from a brick flue in the centre of the building, and it quickly spread to the roof and all the watchman, who was supposed to be on duty, was found in bed. Meanwhile factory was a mass of flames and the fire was beyond control. Very little of building was saved, and the loss is the about $12,000, with no insurance. Bradasie's box factory, and the lumber yard adjoining the saw mill were practically close to the fire, but they escaped both saved. This is the seventh time that the Mr. Bradasie has suffered since he started business in Chatham, and the fifth time that his factory has been completely burned out.

STORY OF THE INDIAN MUTINY

BY LOUIS TRACY

alibi: evidence against the prisoner, who was set at liberty forthwith. But for the remainder of his life he had ample leisure to reflect on the road fortune that led him to help the people who sought his assistance on that June night. Were it not for Malcolm's interference he would have been hanged without mercy, and possibly not with out good cause.

On the afternoon of November 11, Sir Colin Campbell reviewed his little army. It was drawn up in parade order, on a plain a few miles south of the Dilkusha. Three thousand four hundred men faced him, and the epaulettes of the number le eloquent of the magnitude of their task. Indeed, that is one of the salient features of each main episode of the Mutiny. Nicholson at Delhi, Havelock at Cawnpore and, on the way to Lucknow, Colin Campbell in the pending action, and Sir Hugh Rose in many a hard-fought battle in Central India, one and all were called on to attack and defeat tenfold times the number of sepoys.

But what fine troops they were who met the commander-in-chief's gaze as they stood marshalled there, on that dusty Indian maidan. Peel's sailors, with eight heavy guns, artillerymen standing by the cannon that had sounded the knell of Delhi from below the Ridge, the 9th Lancers, who held the right flank when the capture of Hodson Bar's house would have meant the collapse of the assault, the 5th and 7th Foot, the 2nd and 4th Punjabis—all these had followed the Lion of the Punjab when he stormed the Cashmere Bastion. Sikh Cavalry, too, and Hodson's wild horsemen, and many another gallant soldier, fresh from the immortal siege, formed the centre of a quiet scrutiny, as he rode past, and doubtless wondered how he would compare as a leader with the man whom they had left in the little cemetery at the foot of the Ridge.

It is on record that from the end of the line came a yell of welcome and recognition. The 93rd Highlanders remembered what Campbell had done in the Crimea, and their joyful slogan brought a flush to the bronzed face of the old war dog when he learned the significance of their greeting.

Next morning began a three days' battle. Perhaps there was never an action so spectacular, so thrilling, so amazing! In extent, as the contiguous fight which brought about the Second Relief of Lucknow. At the Alumbagh, at the Dilkusha and at Martiniere school, at the Secundra Bagh and the Shah Nujeef, were fought fiercely-contested combats that in other campaigns would have figured as of a caliber that had caused even to despair. Apathy, a quiet waiting for death, was the prevalent attitude in Lucknow until the Highland bonnets were seen topping above the low line of mutineers that tried to bar their passage through the streets. At once the besieged took up the offensive. The lines were greatly extended, the enemy's advanced posts were carried with the bayonet, troublesome guns were seized and spiked, and the blood mining operations summarily stopped.

Two days before Havelock's little army cut its way into Lucknow, Lugard the besieger, crept in to the entrenchment and announced the coming relief. He was not believed. Twice already had he brought that fleering message, and twice had the fiend fled his news.

Wizened, a worn and pallid Windfred by this time, sought him and asked for tidings of Malcolm. He had none. There was a rumor that Louis had fallen, and an officer had told him that there was a Major Malcolm on Nicholson's staff. That was all. Nell's letter, not a scrap, came so far beneath the heart-broken girl, so far off Havelock's arrival was fixed for her by the uncertainty that obtained in regard to her lover's fate.

Then the dreadful waiting began again. After having endured a plague of hear in the hot weather, the refugees in the original garrison gas subjected to the fumes of cold in the months that followed. In Upper India the change of temperature is so remarkably sudden that it is incomprehensible to those who live in more favored climes. Early in October the thermometer falls by many degrees each day. The reason is, of course, that the diminishing power of the sun permits the earth to throw off by night the heat, always intense, stored during the day. Something in the nature of an atmospheric vacuum is thus created, and the resultant cold continues until the opposite effect brings about the lasting heat of the summer months, which begin about March 15 in that part of India.

But scientific explanations of unpleasant phenomena are poor substitutes for comfort clothing. In some respects the last position of the besieged garrison was worse than the first, and the days were on in seasonably endless misery, until absolutely authentic intelligence arrived on November 9, that Sir Colin Campbell was at Buxar and would march forthwith to relieve the Residency.

Three days, however, had succeeded to the chief command as soon as Havelock joined hands with Inglis, called for a volunteer who would act as Sir Colin's guide through the network of canals, roads, and scattered suburbs that added to the dangers of Lucknow's narrow streets, and a man named Kavanagh, an uncovenanted civilian, offered his services.

It is not hard to picture Kavanagh's fate if he were captured by the mutineers. His own views were definite on the point. Beneath his assumed disguise he carried a pistol, not for use against an enemy, but to take his own life if he failed to carry through the investing lines. But he succeeded, and lived to be the only civilian here ever awarded the Victoria Cross.

Another incident of the march should be noted. Malcolm saw preparations being made to hang a Mohammedan who was suspected of having ill-treated Europeans. The man protested his innocence, but he was not listened to. Then Malcolm, who had seen something in his face, questioned him and found he was the reminder who helped Wise fred, her uncle and himself during the flight from Cawnpore.

Such testimony from an officer more than sufficed to outweigh the independent hatchet, which highly important to the history of the time.

The taking of the Shah Nujeef alone was worthy of Homeric praise. It was a mosque that stood in a garden, bounded by a high and stout wall and protected by a ditch, and it was part of its peculiar position, joined to the Residency of guns mounted on its walls and the thousands of sepoys who held it, made it impossible for a devoted artillery to create an effective breach. Yet Lugard's storming force lost here, they failed altogether. So Sir Colin asked the men for a supreme effort. Rifling forward himself, followed by his staff and Sir Adrian Hope, Colonel of the 93rd, he cheered on his loved Highlanders. Cannon one hear the skirl of the pipes and shall die of cannon and musketry? Cannot one see the shouting, the waving of kilts, the flashing of the pallid Highlands? Cannot one see the Highlanders, the 93rd, vanishing in the smoke and dust? Middleton's battery of the Royal Artillery came dashing up, "the drivers waving their whips, the gunners their caps, unlimbered within forty yards of the wall, and opened fire with grape. Men and horses fell in scores, but some how, anyhow, an entrance was gained and the Shah Nujeef was taken. Perhaps the most be the pulse that does not beat faster, dim the eye that does not kindle, as one hears how those Highlanders fought and died, but did not die in vain.

Next day Captain Garnet Wolseley led a storming party against the Motee Mahal, and the outstanding heroism of the Shah Nujeef was displayed again from one point of view.

And so the wild fight went on, till Outram and Havelock, Napier, Rose, Havelock's son and four other officers ran from the Residency through a tempest of shot and showered on them from the Kaiser Bagh, and Hope Grant, who had been sent round by Sir Colin Campbell's force, stuck hands with the men who had been besieged.

Half an hour later Malcolm entered the Residency, and found Louis lying on abode of sorrow. Death and ruin were there, and the pestilence, the wreak itself quite on mankind and his surroundings. Of the women and children, some, whom he had were tender, yet, and he knew, he heard their laugh voices and he knew, he saw, he felt, yes, because of the overwhelming joy of his heart.

He turned on, nonchalant such excited and joyous, and he said, "Louis, I have come to take you home!" He would accomplish more if pity were shown, and he would be a better soldier if he forgotten Sunday night in Mary, and if he had not wondered as he passed it to allow for the sorrow of Winfred of the ordeal she had undergone.

Perhaps his teen eyes were covered in his heart forbade his tongue to ask a question, but Louis understood, and answer. Perhaps sheer relaxation may have effected the change, and distinguishing one among so many. How sooner than Louis, who had seen no one, until a man, slightly young woman, a woman clothed in tattered rags, down whose pallid cheeks streamed the divine tears of happiness, touched his arm and sobbed:

"Are you looking for me—dear?"

The Mutiny was by no means ended with the fall of Delhi and the Second Relief of Lucknow. Nearly and south and east and west one rebels were hunted with untiring zeal. Sometimes in scattered bands, less often in formidable armies, they were pursued, encountered and annihilated, slowly degenerating into mere robber hordes, they became a pest to the unhappy villagers in the remoter parts of the different provinces, and it was long ere the last embers of the fire that had raged so fiercely were stamped out. Nana Sahib perished miserably under the claws of a tiger in the Nepal jungle, the Begum of Fyzabad and the Ranee of Jhansi fell in action, and Tantia Topi was hanged. But the end came, and on November 1, 1858, Queen Victoria proclaimed "the amnesty of mercy" and "the accompaniment of festivities" in every "Queen's Victoria proclaimed" and "the end of the East India Company, and assumed the sovereignty of the country. Her Majesty took no territory, confirmed all treaties, promised religious toleration, and conferred equality to all her Indian subjects, and gave full and complete pardon to every rebel who was not a murderer.

The Queen's proclamation and peace bringing words supplied a fitting close to India's Red Year. Europeans and natives alike tried to forget both the heat, always intense, stored during the day. Something in the nature of an atmospheric vacuum is thus created, and the resultant cold continues until the opposite effect brings about the lasting heat of the summer months, which begin about March 15 in that part of India.

But scientific explanations of unpleasant phenomena are poor substitutes for comfort clothing. In some respects the last position of the besieged garrison was worse than the first, and the days were on in seasonably endless misery, until absolutely authentic intelligence arrived on November 9, that Sir Colin Campbell was at Buxar and would march forthwith to relieve the Residency.

Three days, however, had succeeded to the chief command as soon as Havelock joined hands with Inglis, called for a volunteer who would act as Sir Colin's guide through the network of canals, roads, and scattered suburbs that added to the dangers of Lucknow's narrow streets, and a man named Kavanagh, an uncovenanted civilian, offered his services.

It is not hard to picture Kavanagh's fate if he were captured by the mutineers. His own views were definite on the point. Beneath his assumed disguise he carried a pistol, not for use against an enemy, but to take his own life if he failed to carry through the investing lines. But he succeeded, and lived to be the only civilian here ever awarded the Victoria Cross.

Another incident of the march should be noted. Malcolm saw preparations being made to hang a Mohammedan who was suspected of having ill-treated Europeans. The man protested his innocence, but he was not listened to. Then Malcolm, who had seen something in his face, questioned him and found he was the reminder who helped Wise fred, her uncle and himself during the flight from Cawnpore.

Such testimony from an officer more than sufficed to outweigh the independent hatchet, which highly important to the history of the time.

The taking of the Shah Nujeef alone was worthy of Homeric praise. It was a mosque that stood in a garden, bounded by a high and stout wall and protected by a ditch, and it was part of its peculiar position, joined to the Residency of guns mounted on its walls and the thousands of sepoys who held it, made it impossible for a devoted artillery to create an effective breach. Yet lawful interesting parts, lost here, they failed altogether. So Sir Colin asked the men for a supreme effort. Rifling forward himself, followed by his staff and Sir Adrian Hope, Colonel of the 93rd, he cheered on his loved Highlanders. Cannon one hear the skirl of the pipes and shall die of cannon and musketry? Cannot one see the shouting, the waving of kilts, the flashing of the pallid Highlands? Cannot one see the Highlanders, the 93rd, vanishing in the smoke and dust? Middleton's battery of the Royal Artillery came dashing up, "the drivers waving their whips, the gunners their caps, unlimbered within forty yards of the wall, and opened fire with grape. Men and horses fell in scores, but some how, anyhow, an entrance was gained and the Shah Nujeef was taken. Perhaps the most be the pulse that does not beat faster, dim the eye that does not kindle, as one hears how those Highlanders fought and died, but did not die in vain.

Next day Captain Garnet Wolseley led a storming party against the Motee Mahal, and the outstanding heroism of the Shah Nujeef was displayed again from one point of view.

And so the wild fight went on, till Outram and Havelock, Napier, Rose, Havelock's son and four other officers ran from the Residency through a tempest of shot showered on them from the Kaiser Bagh, and Hope Grant, who had been sent round by Sir Colin Campbell's force, stuck hands with the men who had been besieged.

Half an hour later Malcolm entered the Residency, and found Louis lying on abode of sorrow. Death and ruin were there, and the pestilence, the wreak itself quite on mankind and his surroundings. Of the women and children, some, whom he had were tender, yet, and he knew, he heard their laugh voices and he knew, he saw, he felt, yes, because of the overwhelming joy of his heart.

He turned on, nonchalant such excited and joyous, and he said, "Louis, I have come to take you home!" He would accomplish more if pity were shown, and he would be a better soldier if he forgotten Sunday night in Mary, and if he had not wondered as he passed it to allow for the sorrow of Winfred of the ordeal she had undergone.

Perhaps his teen eyes were covered in his heart forbade his tongue to ask a question, but Louis understood, and answer. Perhaps sheer relaxation may have effected the change, and distinguishing one among so many. How sooner than Louis, who had seen no one, until a man, slightly young woman, a woman clothed in tattered rags, down whose pallid cheeks streamed the divine tears of happiness, touched his arm and sobbed:

"Are you looking for me—dear?"

The Mutiny was by no means ended with the fall of Delhi and the Second Relief of Lucknow. Nearly and south

ONLY WOMAN FREEMASON

Authentic Facts as Given in Masonic Historical Directory

There have been many reports current of the initiation of the only woman Freemason, and the authentic facts appeared in an account given by Brother Condlelock, editor of the Masonic Mandic Historical Directory, who made a most careful investigation. The only woman admitted into the Masonic fraternity was Mrs. Elizabeth St. Lezer, daughter of Lore Demeralle, and afterward the wife of white Tapia Topi was hanged. She was under Warrant 44 of the Lodge Doner pile, (veiled inner dormant), in 1735. Mrs. Elizabeth St. Lezer, Lore had been reading in the library of their house near Doneralle and fell asleep. When the sexton began his conversation in the next room, and as the house was undergoing repairs she found that by removing a brick from the wall she could see the work being penting in the room. It was a meeting of the Masonic lodge. Prompted by curiosity, she removed several bricks. The members of the lodge, enabled to witness the whole proceeding without hindrance, the meeting was over the attempted to escape, but the sexton, an giant arrested her. Her father, Lord Doner pile, was called and the lodge was immediately summoned by the tyler. On hearing the circumstances of the lodge, the members decided, only young lady's life. Others were more merciful. The members of the lodge resassembled and the option was given of submitting to the Masonic ordeal or death. Being asked to decide, acting on the advice of her father, she gaily and unhesitatingly accepted the offer, and was duly and formally initiated into Freemason.

The story of a woman hidden in a clock and all its romantic details that vanishes and the true history is told

New York Evening Post Comments on Sugar Prices

The following interesting comment on United States commodity markets is from the New York Evening Post:—

Sugar prices have fallen in the sea son's very remarkable movement of stable prices, one thing is certain—a supply and demand situation because of consumptive requirements certainly considerably in excess of last year. How long it will last, and how much lower prices will go, is the problem everyone is the trying to figure out.

Conditions are now pretty clearly the reverse of those prevailing in last years. Having completed its cycle of high prices, sugar has now entered upon a repeating itself and values seem to conform to the political situation level. How low they will go before the bottom is reached is anything but a list of money to determine. Some specialists believe that much more buying will feelings, under the belief that the bottom has reached the limit, as they made on the upside.

There is a surplus of grain and provisions. Wheat is cheaper than it should. Should there be no material damage to the crop of this year, which is the expectation, a surplus is anticipated, notwithstanding the fact that there has been a drop of 20 cents in wheat from the high levels of last year, while corn is off 20 cents and oats 12½ cents. Pork has dropped from a lowering price of 20 cents a pound and short ribs 2 cents, and pors over 54 per barrel, against the high point of last year. Hay has declined over $5 a ton, butter nearly 10 cents a pound, and eggs over 10 cents a dozen. A fine tradition is out of the prices of farm products, and if there are to be further declines that is expected by the best judges of market conditions that they will be gradual.

The bride and groom spent their honeymoon visiting a number of places in Western Ontario. Their many friends join in wishing them every success and a long and happy life together.

HANNA—DONALDSON

A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday afternoon, May 31 at the home of Mr. Wm. T. The bride looked handsome in a gown of cream satin directoire cloth, trimmed with Irish point lace and carried a beautiful shower of roses and lily of the valley. Miss Marion Donaldson, niece of the bride, performed the duties of flower girl. The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. A. McKenzie, B.A., Centreville. The groom's gift to the bride was an amethyst brooch set in pearls, to the groomsmen an amethyst brooch and to the flower girl a locket and chain.

Among the many beautiful and valuable gifts to the bride was a cabinet of Sterling silver from Centreville congregation, also an address of appreciation for her excellent services in the choir Sabbath School and W.F.M.S.

After congratulations, guests to the number of fifty partook of a dainty dejeuner.

FINING DRUNKARDS

In an address to the city council, of Tittsville, Pa., Mayor Dickerson, spoke strongly on the absurdity of fining drunkards, who appeared in court. This practicehas been the subject of a good deal of adverse criticism from those who have considered the matter from the standpoint of those dependent on drunkards for support as well as from the standpoint of the state and of the innocent victims. Mr. Dickerson, in his remarks to the council, said:

"Almost every dollar received at that source takes away some comfort, if not necessity, from innocent women and children. Assuredly, taking a few dollars from a household to pay for an imaginary injury to the municipality by a intoxicated individual is poor record foundation. It would seem more like justice to me if the police were empowered to search a defendent and send any money they find to the wife and mother."

It does not seem that this method of punishing drunkards is keeping with his crime, and it certainly is a hardship on wives, mothers and families of the unfortunate man.

CANADIANS GET CORONATION HONORS
DR. WM. OSLER MADE A BARONET

London, June 20.—The coming coronation of King George is signalized by a free-handed distribution of honors. Sir Joseph G. Ward, Prime Minister of New Zealand, is promoted to a baronetcy. Andrew Fisher, Premier of Australia, and Sir Edward Morris, Premier of Newfoundland, are made privy councillors.

The bestowal of a baronetcy upon Dr. William Osler, regius professor of medicine at Oxford, and formerly professor of medicine at Johns Hopkins University at Baltimore, Md., and McGill University at Montreal, is the most interesting item in the honor list to Canadians. The Earl of Crewe, who was the Liberal leader in the House of Lords until the Liberal triumph recently on account of illness, is made a marquis. Lord Rosebery, Lord Curzon of Kedleston and Lord Brassey are made earls. Rosebery hereafter will be known as the Earl Sir Wilfrid Oslar, Bart. of Middlethian.

The Right Hon. Alexander W. Murray, Master of Elibank, the chief Liberal whip in the House of Commons; Baron Knollys, the King's secretary; Baron Allendale, and the Right Hon. Aretas Akers-Douglas, Unionist member of the House of Commons for Kent, are made viscounts.

Both of the King's secretaries are recognized, Lord Knollys and Lt.-Col. Sir Arthur J. Biggs, the latter being one of the nine new baronets created. The others are Lord Mountgarret, Sir Charles De Worms, Sir Ernest Cassel, Sir Acland-Hood, the chief Unionist whip; Sir William T. Lewis, the noted mining expert; Sir James L. Mackay, Earl of Inchcape, given much time to Indian affairs; Archibald C. Corbett, member of Parliament for Glasgow since 1885; Thomas Gair Ashton, M.P. for Bedfordshire, and Sir Thomas Lipton, yot.

Altogether twenty new baronets and forty knights are created. The stage has been recognized by the knighting of George Alexander, the actor-manager.

Sir Frederick Borden becomes Honorary surgeon-general to the King; Sir R. Isaacs, the Attorney-General; Sir McKinnon Wood, Parliamentary Secretary of the Foreign Office; Dr. T. J. MacNamara, Secretary of the Admiralty; Sir T. Vezey Strong, Lord Mayor of London, and Frederick Huth Jackson, a prominent banker, are among the new privy councillors. The baronets and knights include men conspicuous in commerce and science.

Several hundred decorations have been bestowed. The Grand Duke Adolph Frederick of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, the Duke of Argyle and the Duke of Fife are given the Order of the Garter. Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, Chief Justice of Canada, has been created Knight Grand Cross of St. Michael and St. George, while Dr. Robert Alexander Falconer, president of Toronto University, and Charles C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, Toronto, are made Companions of St. Michael and St. George. Prof. Adam Shortt and Arthur G. E. Sladen, secretary to the Governor-General, are also on this list.

Max Aitken, M.P., of Montreal and Halifax, is a knight and the Canadian Knights Bachelor are Hon. L. Melville Jones, Judge Routhier of Montreal and William Whyte, vice-president of the C. P. R.

TORONTO HAD A HEBREW RIOT

Toronto, June 19—Eight Hebrews are under arrest in the Agnes street police station, and all the "Ward" is in excitement as the result of a fierce fracas at the corner of Agnes and Teraulay streets, for nearly an hour last night. Those arrested are Harry Perchowsky, 91 Agnes street, butcher, assaulting the police; Nathan Ardelson, 102 Ontario street, obstructing the police; and Samuel Gleck, 43 Chestnut street; Morris Hans, 218 McCaul street; Samuel Goldberg, 109 Elm street; Herman Katz, 83 Elizabeth street; Isadore Fink, 96 Elizabeth street, and Morris Coleman, 109 Elizabeth street, for disorderly conduct. From two or three hundred joined in the fray, which lasted from seven to eight o'clock.

Mrs. Harry Perchowsky is at her home, 91 Agnes street, more or less seriously hurt. It is declared by Hebrew bystanders that a policeman in rushing into her house to make an arrest, wantonly struck her with his baton. She is said to have sustained a broken rib.

A meeting which will view the protests of the Hebrews both against the Christian missionaries and police treatment, will be held in the Lyric Theatre to-morrow night. Such is the announcement of Dr. John Shaynl, president of the Zionist Association.

LONDONERS ARE DODGING CORONATION

Londoners Are Going Away During Coronation.

London, June 20—Thousands of Londoners are fleeing the city to escape the hordes from the provinces and abroad whose capacity for "carousing" is so boundless this year, night, so far as sleep is concerned, has become a decidedly curtailed period.

Years of parle following an accident within the walls and barriers erected by the police have also influenced thousands of the more nervous to fly away from the crush.

The railroads have been quick to take advantage of the situation, and are widely advertising excursions to attractive rates to seaside and country resorts of the days of the big events.

No less than $75,000 has been expended on the construction of gates shutting off the main approaches to the processional route. These barriers have been built so massively that they could withstand an onslaught of a regiment when once closed, and the gates, however unsafe, will be unable to make the least impression upon them.

THE POWER PROPOSITION

In last Monday's issue we published a letter from His Worship Mayor Beal on the power question, and we were extremely glad to get this letter and publish it.

A feeling prevails in the town that we have not sufficient information to deal with such a large question intelligently. Many people are of the opinion that we should have the fullest details in regard to this power question, especially as the ratepayers are to vote on it within a very short time.

As a matter of fact, we should not allow ourselves to be misled by technical arguments or phrases. We are all precisely well aware that the question of production, speaking generally, when couched in expert phraseology, is beyond the comprehension of the average ratepayer. What we want is plain facts, put in plain English, so that the voters will know the situation, and be guided by experts.

The letter from His Worship contains some good information but a great deal of the letter is technical, and is not understood by the everyday man.

After all, what the town wants, and what we are after, is cheap light and cheap power, with as small expenditure and liability as can be procured.

His Worship points out that a proposition for interest bearing bonds, Sinking fund $4,140, the depreciation fund $8,488, the further points out the sum is available for depreciation and at the end of thirty years, provide a sum to retire the debentures. To sum up the matter that the annual charges are $26,29, of which $46,00 is for operation and administration, leaving a balance of $19,29 we must pay annually for owning a plant. It is true he shows a surplus of $19,920

After all who pays? The people who use the light and power and the ratepayers taxes.

It is not possible for this town to manufacture light rates for electric ed engineering without incurring this immense annual charge? A load that we must continue for 30 years, a burden that if we once take up, we must carry out to the end.

And what are we to get for all this? Only sufficient power for all our present requirements, no provision for the future.

If it was advantageous to group the municipalities in other sections as a means of obtaining cheap power, and this is the great argument advanced by the Hydro-Electric System and also advocated by the eminent engineers? Can we succeed if we pursue a course contrary to all the arguments produced in support of the Hydro-Electric System? Too groping of the municipalities distributing the light and large consumption have always been the strong and admitted argument of nearly all the supporters of the Hydro-Electric Scheme, but all large power companies.

We are not supporting any particular scheme, but we believe Lindsay as in as good a position to get cheap power as any of the other towns in the district, and this power should be secured without incurring a large debt, if we can get cheap rates without going into debt at all. Why incur the debt? Of course, if we cannot get satisfactory rates without expending our own money, then by all means let us buy our own plant.

But let us remember that Lindsay wants and should have rates that will compare with other municipalities. We are now, we think, paying for lights more than any town of similar size in the province of Ontario.

Now is the time for Lindsay to make haste slowly. It we have any doubt about branching out in the future, a large reserve of cheap power is absolutely necessary. The country is growing, it is developing fast and we must, if we act with good judgement and make proper provisions and arrangements, keep pace with our neighbors.

Sunday Drunks Down the River

Pleasant Point, June 20—Special—A very noticeable act of one man from town in a gasoline launch on Sunday and took no their question on the back of the lake, near the mouth of the river. They came for a good time and in their way, a good time they had, which could easily be seen by their leaving a wake consisted empty flasks and kegs. But they received a great deal of grain belonging to the property owner and disturbed the peaches of the vicinity by their not too good language, shouting and with some musical instrument which they possessed. It was the same as this last year. Every Sunday a gang of these rowdies would land somewhere along the bank and act as no common sensed person would. The same thing is starting this year again and the farmers concerned in this are setting their heads together to have it stopped, or at least take care of them until they are sane at Orillia or some other place where the disarranged cogs of their upper storeys can be set revolving in the right direction again, if they succeed it will be a relief to many, for people ready for the lunatic asylum are not very safe visitors.

The people who are interested in the fizzy tribe are once more on the old fishing grounds, and they are receiving rather poor luck this year. A few succeeded in getting enough for a "feed" but there were more who were cheated out of it also.

Mr. Chas Hadicott, sr. and his daughter Miss Minnie, of Lakeview farm, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hadicott (jr.) spent Sunday with friends at Millersmith.

The Carpenters are busy erecting Messrs. Robert and John Wallace's new barns at present.

Mr. Jas. Hancock, who had the misfortune of having his house by fire a few weeks ago has almost completed a neat little house in its stead.

Baby's Life Threatened By Summer Complaint

The life of every baby is threatened during the hot summer months by that dreaded trouble—summer complaint. Thousands of children die every summer from this trouble—towards the end of August when the days are hot and sorrowful because a precious little life has been snuffed out. Not mothers, though you have the trouble, you can yet fight it—you fight it and defeat it with Baby's Own Tablets. Concerning them Mrs. Joe Stubbs, Cowtie, Alta., says:

"During the hot summer days my little boy took ill with summer complaint. He lost his appetite, was wasting and nothing helped him till I got Baby's Own Tablets. They restored him, and made him a strong healthy boy. The tablets are for sale by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams's Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DOMESTIC HINTS

Some Information About Bottles, New Tinware, Sponges and Pantry Shelves.

Bottles should never be cleaned with shot, as there is danger of lead poisoning.

When Peeling Apples pour boiling water over them and the process will be more easily carried out.

Tin Pots will not easily stain if they are well polished several times before being worn for the first time.

If New Tinware is rubbed with a fresh lard and then thoroughly heated before being used it will not rust.

Sponges should be kept as sweet as possible. Wash in a mixture of borax and water.

Pantry Shelves should be covered with white oilcloth, which can be easily wiped and kept sweet.

COMMUNICATION

To the Editor of the Post:

In regard to the purchasing of the Fenelon Falls power by the town of Lindsay, there are a couple of points that should be borne in ratepayers should not lose sight of. The Mayor has already been communicated with by the Kinmount and Fenelon Falls and Canals to the effect that the spirit of the lease originally granted to the R. C. Smith estate of the surplus water of Fenelon River, should be carried out by the town of Lindsay if it takes over this lease. The lease says "that all rents and leases of whatever description that may be lawfully imposed—shall be paid by the said lessees to their representatives. Now the taxes are based on an assessed real estate value of $38,000 but the Hydro Electric Commission has valued it at about $80,000 (that is $161,161 less the cost of transmission line) and the villages of Fenelon Falls will next year levy taxes on the amount on which it is assessed at or near the actual value. This will increase the taxes from the present amount of between $1200 or $1300 to at least $2000.

More important still is the agreement made between the Lindsay and Fenelon Falls Power and Fenelon Falls earlier which the firm chose to remove the power was generated. The agreement shall offer for sale and distribution power anywhere along the lines so constructed or to be constructed in the vicinity of Lindsay, Fenelon Falls upon as good terms, prices and conditions, as they shall do in the vicinity of Fenelon Falls at the time come, and it may not be for distant that Fenelon Falls required more power than is developed by the Kinmount plant, the company shall offer for sale and distribution power——to Fenelon Falls. This would be a great advantage to the city that would be left for distribution in Lindsay. Then there is the right given Fenelon Falls to buy or sell power, right within a distance of twenty miles, which might act adversely to Lindsay if put in operation.

NOT HOW CHEAP BUT HOW GOOD

With the great majority of clothing, little or no attention is paid to important details. It is a question of "how cheap," not "how good." We have found that cost looks after itself in the satisfaction the wearers of "20th Century" and "Progress Brand" Clothing enjoy, and the persistence with which they demand these garments.

The makers permit no extravagance or waste and they never allow prices to debar betterment

GIBSON MULTIPLANE IS A MARVEL
INVENTION OF FENELON FALLS MAN

The Vancouver Daily Province gives the following description of W. W. Gibson's new multiplane, which will be exhibited at the "Mafe in Canada" fair at Vancouver this summer—

The Gibson multiplane is the only one of its kind in existence. The outstanding feature of difference, from other aeroplanes in the fleet that it has 40 planes, whereas the greatest number any other has is three. Moreover, the planes are manufactured from wood, while planes on the other machines are made of silk cloth or silk. Mr. Gibson tested the latter kind, and found they sag too much, this wasting the lifting power of the machine. The wood planes will carry one thirs more weight with the same power.

The planes are made of the silver spruce. One of the propellers 8 feet long, is made of Douglas fir, and the other, which measures 8 feet 6 inches, is cut from a log taken out of the Fraser River.

The machine weighs 800 pounds and has 325 feet of lifting surface. It can attain a speed of twenty miles per hour and is easily handled. Owing to the peculiar construction of the planes, it it were turned over in the air it would right itself without injuring its own length. The front and back planes are 20 feet apart which helps to retain an accurate balance. It is equipped with a 40-horsepower Gibson gasoline engine, which provides ample power. The machine is capable of carrying two passengers besides the driver.

The Gibson multiplane may be taken apart in two hours by three men, and this feature is Mr. Gibson's opinion should make it valuable for army service. It may be used in all kinds of weather and the wooden planes will not stretch as silk does. The frame work is of light, but very strong construction, and the wings all comes on springs, which lessens the jar when alighting. Should the engine stop working in the air the machine would not turn over, but would float gently to the earth on her perfect control.

Mr. W. W. Gibson, the inventor is a Scotchman, who came to Canada, when five years old. He lived in the Province of Saskatchewan until four years ago, when he came west to Victoria, and interested himself in aviation. He did some flying in Victoria last year with another machine, which he, himself made. He is assisted by Messrs Wood, and Sinclair, of Victoria. If his invention proves a success, he proposes establishing a factory in British Columbia, for the manufacture of Gibson multiplanes. He figures that the machine will cost about $600. He will be exhibiting the machine in Vancouver at the fair this summer he is also determined to be the first to fly from Vancouver to Victoria.

THOS. SULLIVAN FRACTURED HIP

On Sunday afternoon, Thos. Sullivan, a ten year old boy, met with a painful accident at the new C. P. R. bridge near Distillery Creek. He was playing on the trestle work when he fell to the ground and fractured his hip. Dr. McAlpine attended his injuries, which were very painful.

MR. BORDEN BEGINS WESTERN CAMPAIGN
HIS SPEECH WAS CAREFULLY GUARDED

Winnipeg, June 20—Mr. R. L. Borden, before an audience of 2,500 people, who packed the Walker Theatre to overflowing, had, perhaps the Herculean task of persuading the people of western Canada that reciprocity is a thing, not of trade, but economic, national and Imperial objection is a subject, all that can be said in its favor. He marshaled in support of his contention, logical or otherwise, that have been sagely against reciprocity in the Commons during the past four months, and very frankly declared his answering opposition to the policy of free trade, which the farmers have been emphatically and insistently demanding. The reciprocity issue formed the kernel of his speech, but the pill was sugar-coated. To palate the bad taste of his corrective medicine he first humored his audience by offering a few relishes.

Mr. Borden was given a rousing greeting when the audience rose to its feet, and the cheering lasted several minutes.

The cheers continued, too.

Mr. Borden began by announcing that he had received a cablegram from Premier Borden in London. Premier Robin wished "hearty success" to Mr Borden in his campaign, and confusion to those who seek to disintegration of the Dominion and the British Empire."

Mr. Borden then went on to analyze his platform for the west. He proposed, if returned to power, to carry out this policy

1. To appoint a permanent tariff commission, which would form a tariff on the basis of the needs of the country and not on political exigencies.

2. To give the western provinces the control of their own lands

3. To give the operation of the Hudson Bay Railway to an independent commission.

4. To place the terminal elevators under public ownership and Government operation.

5. To provide aid for the children of Canada who are not of the United States.

Mr. Borden attacked the reciprocity pact on economic grounds, and met with some interruptions. But he found some supporters.

Then he passed on to deal with the question on national ground. He declared that the pact meant "commercial union, and that commercial union would mean "political union."

This was greeted by loud cries of "No!"

"Edward Blake does not agree with my young friends in the gallery," retorted Mr. Borden.

The crowd laughed. Somebody called out "Increase the British preference."

Mr. Borden did not hear it. Instead, he went on to comment on Sir Wilfrid's attitude in London.

The mentions of Sir Wilfrid's name drew loud cheers.

"We'll see whether you will cheer soon," answered Mr. Borden, and then went on to describe Sir Wilfrid's utterances at meeting that Canada would be loyal in time of peace, but "neutral" in war.

There was silence.

"I call that a dishonor to Canada," said Mr. Borden, in reference to Sir Wilfrid's utterances.

Mr. Borden concluded by asking the people to "make Canada British, her work which she began in 1867."

Again he was greeted with cheers, which kept up some time after he had taken his seat.

New Health and New Strength for Suffering Women

Aching Backs, Tired Limbs and Splitting Headaches Need Not be Endured

In silent patience nearly every woman endures suffering that casts a shadow over half her existence. An aching back tired limbs, attacks of faintness, and backaches and headaches, need not be part of a woman's life. Such sufferings are plainly that the system requires the new blood that is supplied through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Thousands are valued by suffering women, who have used them above all other medicines, because they give the rich red blood that makes women bright and at their best. Mrs. Fred Colliard, Poplar Point, Man. says:

"I can give you but a very small estimate of the suffering I endured before I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After the birth of me first child I was so weak and nervous that I could not leave my room. I had no appetite and was so low-spirited that I could not bear to see my friends, and from a healthy young woman weighing 140 pounds I fell away in weight to 95 pounds. I grew so weak I could hardly walk across the floor and then were at times I hardly knew what I was doing. So great was my weakness that I went to Brandon and told a doctor who said that nothing would help me but an operation for kidney troubles, and that I would have to remain in the hospital for at least six weeks. Being a farmer's wife I did not see how I could do that and while in Brandon I met a friend who strongly urged my to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills telling me that they had cured her trouble similar to mine after an operation had proved of no benefit. She had such strong faith in them that she gave me the first box, and I began using them. It was not long before I found much relief. I continued to use the pills the rest of that summer, and the result was that they restored me to perfect health. I can tell the world what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had done for me, and his reply was that he considered what they had done for me little less than a miracle! I have since recommended the pills to many others who have suffered from women's troubles and they always produced beneficial results. I hope that this statement will be of benefit to some other suffering person who doubtful of the value of medicine dealers or may be had by mail at the 50 cents per box or $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. Brockville Ont.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT OAKWOOD
MRS. WM. COAD THE VICTIM

One of the most serious accidents that has taken place in this village for years, occurred yesterday, a short distance East of Oakwood, as the people were driving home from service in the Methodist Church.

A horse attached to a covered buggy in which were Mr and Mrs W Coad and daughter Miss Coad, became frightened and suddenly bolted, throwing Mr. Coad out, and dashed away at a terrific speed. Mrs. Coad is endeavouring to free herself from the buggy, jumped and fell on her head, fracturing her skull and injuring herself badly. Her daughter also jumped but escaped with a sprained ankle. The horse ran into a buggy in which were Mr. and Mrs. James Webster, throwing out Mr. Webster and breaking two of his ribs. He is also suffering from internal injuries. The horse was secured before any further accident. Mr. Coad's horse ran for about a mile before it ceased running, no damage occurring to either animal or conveyance.

Dr. Hall, of Little Britain, who was at Oakwood, was on the scene of the accident in a few minutes and was able to render all necessary aid to Mr. Webster. Dr. Brown and Dr. Rich, of Lindsay, both arrived in automobiles shortly after, but their services were not required.

The unfortunate affair cast a gloom over this entire community as the deceased lady was highly respected and the family very prominent in the neighborhood.

The late Mrs. Coad, whose maiden name was Annie Brokenshire, is survived by her husband, three daughters, and three sons. They are, Ray, at home, Frank and Pearce in the west, Mrs. Carter, Elsie in Toronto, and Mrs. Howard Davidson, of Oakwood.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Coad took place this afternoon from the family residence to Oakwood cemetery and was largely attended.

PETERBORO MAN WAS ELECTOCUTED

(Special to the Post.)

Peterboro, June 17.—Frank Wagner, an electrician, in the employes of F.R.J. McPherson, met a terrible death on Sunday afternoon, from electrocution.

The unfortunate man, in company with several other workmen, were doing some special work on Otonabee Power Co's lines, about a mile from the power house, which is four miles from the city. Some one at the power house turned on the current and Wagner was killed instantly. His body was literally broiled. The deceased was married and came to this city from Guelph.

An inquest will be held tonight.

HOW ENUMERATOR GOT HIS AGE

A local census enumerator, while on his rounds recently came across an unmarried lady, who refused to tell her age. She considered it a piece of impertinence on the part of the government to even hint that a lady should answer such a question.

The quick witted enumerator then proceeded to quote for the lady a clause which he said was found in the regulation governing all enumerators in such cases as this. It was to the effect, he said, that when any elderly lady refused to tell her age, the enumerators were instructed to put her down at 40 years. The lady then became indignant and remarked, "I am not 40 years of age—I am only 34."

SECOND HEBERT CASE.

Montreal Man Wants Annullment on Religious Grounds.

Montreal, June 21.—George Howden seeks the annullment of his marriage, solemnized thirty years ago, on the grounds that his marriage is not valid according to the Roman Catholic Church, to which his wife belongs.

While Mrs. Howden (nee Poitras) was born a Catholic, her husband was never baptized, and for that reason the marriage cannot, it is alleged, be recognized by the church. The second reason is that the two contracting parties were married by a Protestant minister, and a third allegation is that the woman, when she married, was under the age of 21, and that she had not the consent of her parents.

Mrs. Howden claims that they have been married 28 years, and that her two sons and daughter will fight for her honor. She claims that her husband has not been near her for sixteen years, and that she had to educate the family, and now has to keep boarders.

Rode on Wagon Tongue.

London, Ont., June 21.—Mrs. Achenburger, a farmer's wife, had a remarkable experience here yesterday when marketing strawberries.

She was standing in her rig when the team bolted. When crossing the car tracks at King street, the jolt parted the wagon from the horses, and the woman was shot forward between the animals. She twisted her arms and legs around the wagon tongue, and in this position the horses carried her for several blocks. The tongue finally broke from the yoke, dropping her in the street, none the worse for her thrilling experience.

Condemn Declaration.

London, June 21.—A score of prominent British admirals met yesterday afternoon under the presidency of Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, and unanimously condemned the Declaration of London, the international agreement governing prizes of naval warfare, adopted at a conference of the chief naval powers two years ago.

One hundred and four admirals already have signed a petition to Premier Asquith, pleading with him not to ratify the declaration.

Canadians Honored by Baptists.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 21.—The Baptists of North America elected A. L. MacCrimmon, Winnipeg, Man., president, and A. P. McDiarmid, Manitoba, a vice-president.

Died From a Cut.

Montreal, June 21.—Rene Martin of 114 Drolet street, a pupil of the Olier School, died last Tuesday night, as the result of a cut which he received while playing on the mountain.

The youngster played truant from school Tuesday afternoon, and with six companions went for a ramble on the mountain. Climbing a steep knoll he came suddenly on a man sleeping. The man awoke and sat up suddenly startling the lad, who slipped down the face of the cliff, severing an artery on a sharp stone.

The bleeding was checked at the hospital, but the boy died later from shock and loss of blood.

Montreal Sued for $50,000.

Montreal, June 21.—A damage suit against the city for $50,000 is the sequel to the Chinese egg seizure case, in which judgment against the city was rendered.

The city seized $100,000 worth of canned Chinese eggs as unfit for human consumption, but, on the case going before the courts, judgment was rendered to the effect that the eggs were harmless.

Charivari Proves a Tragedy.

West Orange, N.J., June 21.—The party of farm folk that gathered early Tuesday under the windows of J. Walter Force, a young bridegroom, in the village of Livingston, with the intention of giving the bridal couple a "charivari," were welcomed with buck shot. One serenader fell mortally wounded, and another was seriously hurt.

ANNEXATION AGAIN.

Minnesota Man Raises Bogey In the United States Senate.

Washington, June 21.—Statements in the Senate yesterday by Senator Heyborn of Idaho, that "whatever we have taken from England has been taken at the point of the bayonet," produced the only tense moment of yesterday's short debate on the Canadian reciprocity bill. Senator Heyborn's remark, which he later explained, extended only to governmental acquisitions, was challenged by Senator Bacon of Georgia as a "grave matter," in view of the pending arbitration negotiations with England.

"We have more to enjoy that we have received from England than from all the rest of the world put together," said Senator Bacon.

Senator Gallinger brought on the controversy by asking if this nation did not owe more to England in the way of reciprocity, than it did to Canada, because of the free made market that England had always given to this country and the rest of the world.

Senator Nelson of Minnesota declared that his only hope of benefit from the Canadian reciprocity agreement was that it might lead to annexation of Canada. He met Senator Gallinger's argument that reciprocity ought to be given to Mexico and all other nations, if given to Canada, by saying that this country could not hope to annex the rest of the world.

"But if we can accomplish the annexation of Canada we will have done a great deal," said Senator Nelson.

"Canadian annexation at this time is an irridescent dream," said Senator Gallinger, who is a Canadian by birth. "At one time it was seriously considered by the leading men of Canada; but now that country has grown to be a big, strong, self-asserting nation, and by this treaty we will further strengthen it.

"I am convinced," added Senator Gallinger, "that when this bill passes there are many Republicans on this side who will join the Democrats in kicking out the foundation stones of the protective tariff system. We will be fortunate if the whole structure of protection does not fall."

Senator Lodge of Massachusetts renewed his argument yesterday that the reciprocity agreement as it stands is not reciprocal on wood pulp and paper, and that the Root amendment is necessary to correct and make it conform with the original agreement between the two countries.

"This amendment had been offered in no spirit of hostility to the bill," said Senator Lodge, "and I am supporting it in no spirit of hostility. I think it will make the agreement better and stronger. I intend to vote for the reciprocity measure because I think in the long run it will draw the United States and Canada closer together."

Senator Cummins yesterday introduced a number of amendments to the bill which were calculated to enlarge the list of articles which will be admitted free from Canada.

Beamsville, Ont., June 21.—Residents in Beamsville and district early yesterday morning were alarmed by a trembling of the earth, which caused dishes to rattle off shelves and windows to come down with a bang.

[illegible] June 21.—Charles F. G. Masterman, Under-Secretary of State in the Home Office, yesterday was deprived of his seat in the House of Commons for the north division of West Ham by the law courts, which found that his election was aided by corrupt practices on the part of his agents.

The judges said that no fault rested upon Masterman personally.

Fort William, June 19.—The closing session of the Women's Council in Port Arthur was marked by an address Saturday evening from Miss Fitzgibbon, the superintendent of the Women's Welcome Home in Toronto. Miss Fitzgibbon told of her work and urged the local council of West Algoma to take immediate steps to secure a hostel here. I. L. Matthews, who was in the chair, upon the behalf of the men of Port Arthur, promised help. The local council met yesterday morning to consider the proposition, and decided that they would make this their work for the coming year. The hostel will likely be placed between the two cities.

Appealed to Labor Men.

Montreal, June 20.—Declaring that James McNamara, held for complicity in the dynamiting of The Los Angeles' Times' building, was innocent, Mr. Butler, who was with McNamara when the latter was arrested, appealed to a small gathering of Montreal labor unions to aid in the cause of his defence.

There were only some forty representatives of the various organizations present at the meeting.

President Geroux of the Montreal Trades and Labor Council, characterized as an outrage by capital the arrest of McNamara, and declared that the men who had been hounded down at the instigation of capital, should be helped quickly and well.

RECIPROCITY NOW HAS MAJORITY IN THE UNINTED STATES SENATE

Washington, June 17.—The determination of the Senate finance committee to push through the Canadian reciprocity bill with all possible speed and the confidence of the Senate leaders that there is a clear majority in favor of the bill without amendment was made plain yesterday, when Chairman Penrose of the committee forced the bill into its second reading before the Senate, and announced it probably early passage.

In reply to questions from Senator Gallinger, Chairman Penrose said he believed no amendments would be ready before next week.

He had hoped, he said, that few friends of the bill cared to speak on it, but preferred to vote as quickly as possible. The opponents of the measure, he said, wanted more time to prepare their arguments.

"So I understand that no one wants to speak in behalf of the bill," he added Senator Smith of Michigan.

Senator Paynter said that for his own part he was ready to vote to-day. Other members suggested that the President and many other leading Republicans and Democrats had explained and endorsed the bill.

"I am not surprised," returned Senator Smith, "that a measure so devoid of merit, similar to the treaty of 1854, which President Lincoln was in reason for condemning in force, and similar to the projects rejected by Grant and Blaine and others, should find no one in the chamber willing to stand up and risk his reputation as the champion.

"I did not intend to make a speech I thought when the time came there would be greeted by a great burst of wisdom that would shake the country with light and that would cement the people of the country together in support of this agreement. Instead all lights are out. The country is in darkness so far as anything has been revealed in favor of this measure.

"Don't you consider the President's speech at Chicago as enlightenment on this bill?" asked Senator Kern of Indiana.

"The President has been able to make intelligible many public questions," replied Senator Smith, "but it is amazing that if all the things he has discussed, and of all the suggestions he has made, this reciprocity agreement is the only one that has found favor on the Democratic side of the chamber, and that finds no championship on this side."

Chairman Penrose volunteered no statement as to the Senators who would speak for the bill, if any. The Senate decided by unanimous vote of the measure, which brought it officially before that body for amendment, and Senator Root's pulpwood amendment, which had been adopted by the finance committee, was then offered. Mr. Penrose said he was not prepared to speak upon it no attempt was made to vote.

The Senate adjourned until Monday on the conclusion of the second reading.

At that time forward speeches are expected every day, and the bill until it is finally disposed of. Senator Townsend of Michigan announced that he would offer an amendment instructing the President to undertake further negotiations looking to a wider reciprocity arrangement with Canada.

HOW JARDINE MET HIS FATE

Goderich, June 17.—The sentence of death was pronounced upon Edward Jardine at the county jail yesterday morning just before eight o'clock.

Early in the morning Rev. Geo. E. Ross, pastor of Knox Church, who has been the condemned man's spiritual adviser throughout his confinement, was with him, and the young man showed deep concern for his future welfare. For half an hour he broke down, but he recovered and walked to the scaffold apparently without a tremor.

Those present at the execution were Sheriff Reynolds, Jailer Griffin, Dr. Dick, Toronto jail surgeon; Rev. Mr. Ross, Constables Whiteside and Postlethwaite, Guards Murphy and Hoy of Math, and Owen Geiger, warden of the County of Huron.

No representatives of the press were allowed to be present.

Jardine was secretly baptized until Thursday evening, when at his earnest solicitation the rite was performed by Rev. Mr. Ross, in a room beside the condemned man's cell, in the presence of the jail officials and guards.

INTERESTED IN ALBERTA REAL ESTATE

The following is from the Gazette Olde, Alberta, date June 9th:

"S. A. Soanes, who has been in business in Olde, for the past four years, left on Sunday for Calgary, where he will meet Mrs. Soanes, and then proceed to Toronto, and other points in the east. Mr. Soanes has been laid up nearly all the past winter with rheumatism, being over eight weeks in a Calgary hospital, as well as several weeks at Banff, and being advised by different doctors to take a change, he decided to sacrifice his business for his health, and will spend several months in the east. The Gazette joins with his many friends in wishing him a complete recovery, and that he may soon be back in Olde, again. He orders the Gazette sent to Lindsay, Ont.

Mr. Soanes is representing two real estate firms in the west, Lumsden and Bond, real estate agents in Calgary, who offer some fine lots, which will double their value in two years, and the Central Alberta Land Co., Olde, Alberta, who have some fine farms for sale. Any one thinking of getting information of the west, could do well to write Mr. S. A. Soanes, or see him personally, who will be glad to give prices or information required.

EXPERIENCES IN CENSUS TAKING LITTLE TROUBLE IN GETTING ANSWERS

Every day you can see one or more of the census enumerators, whose duty it is to find out the news of the land, say, walking along the streets with those canvas bags containing the schedules to be filled out.

"The work is a snap," says one of those steady men who has been on the job before in the 1901 census. "I could have been through already but I'm not in a hurry for there is no need of it."

Asked if the 21-day limit was effective, he said no, it was a very definite time set, this is only as a guide. The total figures for Lindsay and the riding will not be complete until the end of the month it is expected.

The money made is good. The only objection the man finds in the long walks necessary is evidence from home, or insufficient knowledge.

One of the enumerators has the plan of visiting a few neighbors in one district and then going to another. Meanwhile gossip works, one tells another and when the agent returns the people are ready to answer all questions. He was told Mary Jones what she wanted to know.

No boxes have been placed on the local men so far.

The question about fowls and cows the number of eggs and the amount of milk come in for a good share of laughter and ridicule. These are primarily intended for rural communities. Still you have to tell what hen gives.

There have been a couple of cases where the man of the house was out lately. One it was thought would be an opportunity to answer in court, but the fine imposed on a man in Picton recently has worked wonders in his mental attitude. A sly move on the part of one enumerator was made by the wife of a wild man that the county could be resorted to the ruse work.

The territory of some of the enumerators is very extensive and farmsteads and ranches are left.

No difficulty is anticipated here, although some ladies before they meet the enumerator have asked if it is their express "a piece of impertinence", saying that the government "had a lot to do" etc., but the polished enumerators disarm their fears and schedules are filled out.

MURRAY GOVERNMENT WAS SUSTAINED YESTERDAY'S ELECTIONS IN NOVA SCOTIA

Halifax, June 16.—The Provincial general elections took place yesterday and resulted in a victory for the Government, who have carried twenty-seven of the thirty-eight seats in the province. Halifax elects three Liberals with a majority for the highest of 1,056, and for the lowest of 906. The Liberal candidate in Halifax City had a total of 2,741 votes, compared with 4,888 for the highest Government candidate. Cape Breton elects two Conservatives, but that party is definitely expected at least four.

A recapitulation of the elections is the defeat of three members of the Government, Hon. C. Chisholm, Commissioner of Works and Mines, who ran at the foot of the poll; Hon. B. F. Pearson in Colchester, and Hon. Dr. Leblanc in Yarmouth. Premier Murray was returned by acclamation in Victoria, and his colleague also has a big lead. The issues were chiefly local. The Liberals in this province will now have five years more to add to their 29 years of rule. The Opposition in the last Legislature numbered 19. They will now have eleven, and they have the advantage of having been attired in pink, blue, silk and white. Norma Suggitt, of Valenta, dress in pale blue tissue. The groomsmen were Messrs Norman Bulwer of Lindsay, and Harvey Davidson, of Fleetwood.

After the ceremony the happy pair were showered with congratulations as the assembled guests after wishing they all sat down to a delightful repast in the wedding hall.

The popularity of the bride, is attested by the large number of costly presents received.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold and pearl pins set in brilliants, and to the groomsmen stickpins.

Mr. and Mrs. Davidson left for a 5 o'clock C.R. train for Toronto, Niagar Falls, and Buffalo On their return they will reside in Fleetwood.

DOUBLE PRESENTATION AT COLLEGIATE PLEASING EVENT THURSDAY AFTERNOON

Yesterday afternoon the students of the Collegiate Institute assembled in the auditorium to witness the presentation of the Miter shield to Company A, and also the presentation to the popular janitor, Mr. Wm. Walsh.

Mr. A. R. Kirkconnell acted as chairman. He referred to the excellent record of the year in the past but believed that they had taken a step forward.

Capt. Donald then called Major Miller, Capt. Joe O'Neill and Lieut. counts W. Anderson, and R. Anderson to the platform. Major Miller in making the presentation, thanked his officers and men for the way in which they had stood by him. He spoke in glowing terms of the future of the battalion, when they would have their 250 new Ross rifles and the new uniform. Target practice is to be a feature of next year's drill. The ammunition with which the company is entered into the competition is reward enough for offering the medals.

Capt. J. O'Neill and Lieutenants W. Anderson and R. Anderson each made a little reply to the address of Major Miller.

The presentation to Mr. Walsh then followed. Mr. Kirkconnell complimented him on the very amiable way in which he and the boys got on with one another.

Capt. G. A. Dunn read the address, Capt. J. Stokesbury making the presentation.

The following is a copy of the address:

Dear Mr. Walsh:

We, the members of the Lindsay Collegiate Institute Cadet Battalion wish to make use of this opportunity to record you of the fact that we appreciate your many earnest efforts to make our life in connection with the school pleasant and agreeable, in so far as it is within your power.

We have interest in our undertakings of every kind, and your desire to be of as much assistance at possible to us has been manifested on several occasions, and we wish to hold in make our functions and festivities successful and enjoyable, has been ever apparent.

You have, perhaps, been brought into closer touch with us through our work in the gymnasium and in military drill. There, you have done what you could to make our surroundings agreeable. You have always been an interested party at the time of our annual inspection, and have rendered assistance to us in a thousand ways. In you our efforts to have rifles and other accoutrements in the very best of condition, we feel that we have always appreciated by us and we wish you to accept this a five-dollar gold piece as a token of our appreciation of all for our very many favors received and of our best wishes for a long and pleasant future with us. Signed on behalf of the battalion.

Capt. J. O'Neill, A. Company.
Capt. G. A. Dunn, B. Company.
Capt. M. C. Brokenshire, C. Company.

Lindsay, June 15, 1911.

Mr. Walsh was taken completely by surprise and gave a few words in response to the members of the battalion for their kindness. The boys then sang, "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

The singing of God Save the King brought the meeting to a close.

The medal, which was prepared by Mr. Miller, for competition among the companies of the Lindsay Collegiate Institute Cadet Battalion, is a heavy bronze medal, about the size of a dollar, surrounded by a number of small shields and mounted on white oak. In the reverse of the wreath is a representative of a cadet in uniform. Under this is a small shield on which is to be engraved the name of the winner.

A picture of the shield has been taken, which will be printed on postcards.

DOCTOR SAID SHE WOULD DIE

"Fruit-a-tives" Saved Her Life

RIVIERE A PIERRE, THOR., May 8th 1911

"I took many medicines without nothing short of a miracle. I was for eleven years continually suffering from Chronic Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Constipation. I was last two years of my illness, I was confined to my bed nearly all the time. I was so thin I weighed only 90 pounds and I vomited everything I ate. Even water would not stay on my stomach.

The doctors gave me up to die as the stomach troubles produced heart weakness and I was frequently unconscious.

At this time, a lady friend strongly advised me to try "Fruit-a-tives" and how thankful I am that I did so. When I took the first dose, I was much better and after three boxes, I was practically well again and had gained 20 pounds.

I have taken three boxes in all and now weigh 150 pounds and am absolutely well—no pain—no indigestion—no constipation—my food is sound and complexion clear."

ELECTION RIOTS IN THE LONG AGO

Famous Scraps in the "Good Old Times" in Edinburgh, Cardiff, Carnarvon, South Devon and Other Places

Is the "good old times" it no riot occurred during an election it was generally noted a very dull affair, especially as the rival parties would often hire burly ruffians to keep order at their meetings or defy their opponents during demonstrations.

One of the worst election riots occurred at Stonlbridge, in County Clare, on 21st Sept. 1852, when the military fired on the mob, killing no fewer than five of them.

Mobs in Edinburgh

But England not being quite the finger of scorn as Ireland, became hardly a General Election passed but what some constituency shown that it considers disorder a good argument, because on the other hand, takes its elections very quietly, trouble rarely being met with in the rougher districts.

However, those modern disturbances, during other times are nothing like the wild riots that occurred during the Reform Act General Election of 1831. Scotland was especially rebellious in by-gone days, Edinburgh being broken and voters against Reform being prevented from exercising their constitutional rights.

In Edinburgh a bust erected the Lord Provost on election day and threatening to blow out the brains of Sir Brian White at Lanark the Conservative candidate was seriously injured. At Jedburgh a lighted tar barrel was rolled at Sir Walter Scott. He wrote in his diary "The mob behaved shamefully rather rous and brutal as they usually are. Cowards! Had they attacked Sir Walter in formidable numbers—a thousand from Hawick—they would have."

Trouble at Cardiff

At Dumbarton the Conservative candidate had to be carried out of his carriet, as his life was in danger, while at Ayr, the same candidate found refuge in the town hall. A captain of a vessel in the harbour was in great danger to a steamboat.

In Wales a riot took place that occurred in London at this time that caused the Duke of Wellington and Sir Edward Lowes Cuninghame, Bart., to be drawn out of their carriages and pelted with the famous iron shutters. The popular were so enraged at the dissolution of Parliament and the coming of a General Election, they smashed the windows of all who had opposed the Reform Act of 1831.

But there have been some pretty good riots in modern times. There ran very high in 1886 in some places and serious disturbances took place at Cardiff. Sir Edward Reed, the famous naval constructor, was the left at Carnarvon, and Sir Edward afterwards Viscount Hampden, the Colonial.

The contest was a very stormy one. The Liberals had the Tory Party, the greatest exultation. After the declaration of the poll, estimates, counted 10,000 strong, armed with brickbats, canes, and a good proportion of the politics of the Conservative newspaper contact on every side.

The local police had been reinforced by numerous fresh constables from Liverpool, and they charged the mob with drawn truncheons. A fierce battle ensued, and the streets were besprinkled bloodshed, even women and children were not spared. Mr. Lloyd George, Liberal Office-seeker Sir John Bridge, the Conservative Mayor, Mr. Lloyd George is quite into the matter, after peace had been restored.

Lloyd George's Town

Carnarvon is a town in which feeling ran very high in the Liberal part for elections, trouble occurring both in 1886 and during the Boer war. The quarrymen sometimes show their feeling in a very marked way. In 1886 the first-named year hundreds of them marched to the Castle Square, with known opponents off the streets, Mr. Lloyd George, who was then a bachelor, his evidentent support ra.

But matters were worse a year ago. The Carnarvon quarrymen came into Carnarvon and caused a reign of terror. The windows of Tory and Liberal ladies assailed. Fifty extra police were sent to the town to preserve order, but they were powerless, and at the declaration of the poll Mr. Lloyd George pointed because the result was not what they had expected, the Liberals were quietly withdrawn, but the mob got to hear of it, and a scene of riot were roughly handled as they mobbed Mr. Lloyd George.

It was a crowd largely composed of quarry and pottery workers that caused the riot at Newton Abbot, South Devon, about two years ago, when Captain Morrison Bell was returned at the by-election. Mrs. Pankhurst had a narrow escape, and the premises of the Conservative Club were nearly wrecked.

Last January a riot occurred at High Wycombe after the close of the polling a "dummy" shop being wrecked and its contents burned in the middle of the street. For the declaration of the poll 1,100 police were imported to keep order.

SURPRISE

SERIOUS WRECK NEAR BOWMANVILLE ONE MAN DEAD AND SIX INJURED

Bowmanville, Ont., June 17.—Only one man killed and six injured in a wreck immediately west of Newcastle at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when the tender and seven coaches of the the "International Limited" left the rails and turned over on the south track, to be wrecked and torn by the shutters of the engine until the coupling broke and left the shattered car upon their inside.

Dead.

James Madill, 47 years, a commercial traveler, married, 90 Spencer ave., Toronto. Head crushed and leg almost severed. Body held at Newcastle for inquest.

Injured.

Fred Allison, commercial traveler, 35 years, married, 82 Dearborn ave., Toronto; ribs fractured; serious; taken home.

Thomas P. Smith, sailor, 44 years, single, Kingston; left side crushed; taken to St. Michael's Hospital in Mattawa; prob. fractured skull; not serious.

Hector Dauphinais, shoemaker, 42 years, married, St. Hyacinthe, Quebec; cut on head; taken to St. Michael's Hospital; not serious.

Mrs. Simpson, sold to live on Laurier avenue, Toronto, and taken home; sprain ankle.

Mrs. Palister, Ottawa, bruised leg; at Palmer House.

Miss Sweret, Philadelphia, Pa., sprained ankle; at the King Edward.

The cause of the wreck is unknown, save that it appears there has been trouble with the rails, which for years to have spread or broken after the engine passed over it, allowing for heavy tender and cars down upon the sleepers, which are placed at a considerable distance.

There were 200 passengers in the five passenger coaches and diner, and the cars were terribly shaken, as, one by one, in rapid succession, they left the rails. The engine still held to the tracks and pulled the trucks from behind the labouring coaches. These fell to their sides and were wrecked and torn until the couplings broke and left them free from the rear of the engine. Fortunately, not even the diner, which held the only fire in the coaches, was set ablaze, and so the danger of fire was avoided in the wreck.

When the rocking coaches came to a standstill, all those who were able, left the cars and ran back to meet the doctors who were aboard, immediately begun to aid the injured. The injured were taken to Newcastle in automobiles and then the train moved seriously wrecked was carried out from that place, in charge of Dr. Gordon, G.T.R. surgeon, a special train being made up from Bowmanville, and a crew sent to Port Hope to take it out.

The body of James Madill of Toronto, the only fatality, was taken to Newcastle, where, under the instruction of County Crown Attorney W. H. Kerr, Coroner A. E. Tiller set about investigating the wreck, preparatory to holding an inquest.

Rev. Father Morrisey

Father Morrisey's "No. 11" Cures Stomach Troubles.

When your stomach is working right you don't know it is there. But when it feels as heavy as lead—when you have Heartburn, Belching of Wind, Sourness, a gnawing hunger, with distress after eating—when you feel irritable and depressed—then you may know that the digestive fluids in the stomach are not sufficient to digest what you eat.

Father Morrisey's "No. 11" Tablets supply these fluids in concentrated form. Each tablet, dissolved in the stomach, will digest 1½ pounds of food, which is more than an average meal.

Read what Father Morrisey's treatment did for Mr. Coolins, of Salmon Lake. He writes Nov. 30, 1908:

"I was troubled with Dyspepsia, so severe that I really thought I had cancer of the stomach. I took much doctors' remedies, till I was forced to seek another resource, and this was the Rev. Father Morrisey. His treatments worked miracles, until I have been entirely cured, so that now I do not look for the quality of the diet but to the quantity."

PUFF BOX IN PARASOL

Handle Also Contains Lip Salve or Rouge

Men as a rule delight in criticising the frailties of the weaker sex. This is especially fine amusement in alluding to the pleasure women take in using powders and lip salves. A page into a woman's carrying bag will generally reveal a tiny powder puff or some other equally efficient beautifier. When opportunity offers they slyly slip the puff out and use it.

Just how much more infinitely more convenient to have these little adjuncts stored in the handle of a parasol, where they can be quickly reached without fooling around. Parasols and umbrellas with these novel appurtenances are now obtainable, because of the thoughtfulness of an up-to-date inventor. The top of the handle of the parasol is hinged, so that it can be easily raised. Beneath is lid is a small cup, containing powder puff, etc. In another direction the top is then raised reveals a small mirror, which is convenient, because that will naturally be appreciated.

Other personal ornaments that conceal the powder puff are the hat pins with large heads in which a puff can be accommodated under a hinged top, the chain and watch brooches, in lieu of the watch bracelets, which have a receptacle for the puff in concealed beneath the watch in a little cavity just the right size and place.

P.G.FONS AS CORRESPONDENTS

For Short Distances They Have Carried Three-Quarters of an Ounce

For more than two thousand years carrier pigeons have been used to carry messages when no other means offered, and during the Siege of Paris, when 362 birds were sent out from the besieged city, one of the birds performed the almost incredible feat of carrying its message over the one trip no fewer than 40,000 messages, averaging twenty words each. This was 800,000 words, or the equivalent of 1,600 words average each.

This marvel was accomplished by means of microscopic photography, the messages being first printed with ordinary type, and then photographed and photographed until they had been reduced several hundred diameters. The photographs were taken on films or pellicles of collodion, each of which, about two inches square, contained 50,000 words. A dozen of these films, rolled up in a quill, weighed but one twenty-eighth of an ounce. The messages could, of course, be read with a microscope, without the necessity of re-photographing and enlarging.

Under favorable conditions, and for comparatively short distances, pigeons have carried as much as three-quarters of an ounce. Using the photo reduction methods, it would therefore be possible for a single bird to carry messages equal in words to no fewer than 120 ordinary volumes.

POWER MEETING HELD LAST NIGHT EVOKED RATHER LIVELY DISCUSSION

The citizens meeting in the town hall, called in the interest of the power proposition, attracted only a fair attendance. There was not as many present as their should have been, when the question of the expenditure of $300,000 of the people's money is considered.

Those who attended the meeting, however, expected to hear the three representatives of the Hydro-Electric Commission present, explain the report made on the local plant as will furnish them with information, which would assist them in recording an intelligent vote on the measure.

Unfortunately, however, owing to the discussion indulged in by a number of citizens present, the engineers outside of Mr. Acre did not get a chance to address the meeting. Mr. Acre simply imparted information that had already been given in the Hydro Electric report on the local plant, and explained how they arrived at their deductions concerning the pacity of th Fenelon Falls power. He also answered several queries from Ald McCrae, Wm. Flavelle, Thos. Brady, J. Aplebee and Geo. Rae.

MAYOR BEAL PRESIDES

His Worship Mayor Beal was voted to the chair, and in opening the meeting, read a letter he had received from the Central Ontario Power Co. regarding the resubmission of their franchise. His Worship said he did not know who composed this company—he could find out nothing about them,—not even in Dun's. In their request they asked for a thirty year franchise for power light and heat They had forwarded a check for $5,000 as an evidence of their good faith. Mr. Beal said the citizens were told some time ago that this company did not want to come here. A gentleman well known to the citizens, had stated the had prevailed upon the company to agree to come here. However, they had gone to the village of Millbrook, where they had secured a thirty year franchise and now they were so eager to come to Lindsay that they had sent a marked cheque and were prepared to sell power and hold the light for profit according to his interpretation of clause 9. Later on in the evening the Mayor repeated the statement that the Seymour Power Co, had offered $5,000 more for the local plant than the town's proposed purchase price.

DISCUSSION IN HYDRAULICS

Mr. Acre, an engineer of the Hydro-Electric was next called upon and stated that he was prepared to answer any questions which the citizens wished to ask. He said that as far as the financial side of the argument was concerned the figures which have been given out were cold facts. The most important point was the rating of the hydraulic capacity at Fenelon Falls. Two primary points to be touched upon, were the drainage surface and rainfall. The Trent Valley Canal made isolated methods of the flow in order to indicate the potentialities of the river from the standpoint of navigation. These,, however, had not been systematized sufficiently to give any indications of the power potentialities The watershed of Fenelon River had a drainage area of 1200 square miles. In the Hydro-Electric report, they figure a sum off 30 per cent, and only one third of the run off found its way at Fenelon Falls. In the 130 square miles of lake aeca there were 84 miles controlled by dams of the T.V.C.. The power was capable of supplying 20,000 h.p. The above deductions was the assumption on which they based their figures. The extreme minimum flow of Fenelon Falls power at extreme conditions would generate 720 h.p. with no storage. The facilties for storage were, however, almost unique. All the assumptions made, said Mr. Acre, were open to question, but he doubted if they could be discounted.

The local plant, which has been in operation eleven years, has never suffered from shortage. The town could operate it with the present power, even if they did not get any more. The town was absolutely safe regarding a possible diminution of power owing to the enlargement of the canal. Their interest had been safeguarded in this matter. The reservoirs in the north country could be increased by building storage dams.

If the town spent the $70,000, mentioned in the report, on the plant it would generate twice as much power and the town would therefore have more power to sell, which would mean additional revenue. The present plant was serviceable and in good condition The full capacity at the Falls was 2,000 h.p.

UP TO HYDRO-ELECTRIC

Mr. J. Aplebee said he felt that the citizens should have an itemized statement of everything in connection with the plant before they considered its purchase. It was up to the Hydro-Electric to show the people where they were getting value for their money.

Mr. Acre said that the commission firgured out their value of the plant by getting the prices of equipment, during the years of its existence. They also figured on the depreciation and deducted the figures of depreciation from the cost of the plant.

would have to build a new line from Lindsay to Fenelon Falls. This would Ultimately, Mr. Acre said, the town come under the heading of maintenance.

NEW FLUME NECESSARY

Mr. George Rae said he was familiar with conditions at Fenelon Falls and had seen the water so low that a person could walk across. To double the capacity of the plant, it was necessary to open another flume. In that case where would they get the extra power to run the flume?

Mr. Acre said it was a case of regulation in the storage. The regulation of the watershed was not primarily for the benefit of Fenelon Falls.

MR. KYLIE SPEAKS.

Mr. Kylie was the next speaker. Referring to a magazine article which he had with him, Mr. Kylie said the estimated horsepower that could be developed from the waters of Ontario was nearly eight million. We want power which can be had on short notice so that if an industry desires to locate here, we will not loose the industry because of lack of power.

In Western Ontario, where the Hydro-Electric Commission have its lines, the people have a sense of security. There if twenty farmers apply for power they can get it. Electricity on the farm will do much to keep the young man there.

The town commenced to deal with the local comapny two years ago, At that time the Seymour Co. was not known to us or the Hydro-Electric either. The local company would never have reduced their price had not Mr. McLaughlin used his influence with the Seymour Co. to get them to come to Lindsay.

The Seymour Co. have capital and brains and they are developing the Trent Power. There is plenty of power on those waters. They are doing for the East what the Hydro-Electric is doing for the West. The Seymour Co. are going to have their agents bring industries to the towns and cities buying power from them. We must reckon with them because they are here to stay.

Mr. Kylie said the report should have contained some information as to the feasibility of hitching some of the north country powers on to the Fenelon power.

The mayor has told you that by investing, $300,000, you will make a profit of $5,000 a year. We are not buying the plant to make a profit. It is being bought for the benefit of the people. Now Mr. Mayor I am surprised at the stand you take in advocating profits. After we have supplied the town people with light at cost price and power if they want it, how much is there left for new industries?.

MR. HORN OBJECTS

His Worship, Mayor Beal next proceeded to address the meeting, but Mr. Alex Horn rose in his seat and stated that they had invited engineers from Toronto to address the meeting. They knew what they were talking about, and the citizens did not come to hear those woo did not know what they were talking about.

EXCEPTION TAKEN

Ex-Mayor Begg took exception to the Mayor's interpretation of clause, 9 of the Seymour Co. franchise. Mr. Begg contended that we could buy the whole plant while the Mayor insisted that it meant only the power.

The chief engineer of the Hydro-Electric, said the clause was ambiguous

AN ACCUSATION

Ald. McRae accused Mr. Kylie of not taking the people into his confidence in regard to the option on the Minden Power. Mr. Kylie said negotiations were commenced with the Seymour Power Co.at that time and he dropped the Minden Power.

SUPPORT PROPOSITION

Mr. Jno. Carew was strongly in favor of purchasing local plant. He said he would buy it himself in a hurry. Mr. Carew thought if the people turned down the proposition they would down the best proposition the town had had for a long time.

IN FAVOR OF BY-LAW

Mr. Wm. Flavelle was also in favor of by-law. The speaker thought that if we bought the local plant we would be in a better position to treat with the Seymour Co. We could get them to supply power.

Mr. R. Kylie explained the history of the Minden option and said the reason he held it was that there was not at the time any information concerning the Hydro-Electric. He had not flopped on the power question but wanted to have the engineers ascertain the possibilities of Minden power and have it hitched to Fenelon Falls power.

HER MAJESTY'S PERSONAL GIFTS

Queen Mary is Fond of Music, is a Great Reader, and Follows Events Attentively

Sir Clement Kinloch-Cooke contributes to The North American Review a sympathetic character sketch of her Majesty Queen Mary. Intended mainly for American readers, it will be read with pleasure by Canadians generally. Her Majesty, says Sir Clement, has a very retentive memory. Once she has mastered a subject, it seldom goes out of her mind, and months afterwards she will astonish her friends by reference to a conversation they themselves had forgotten. Driving through the streets of Hobart, she recognized a man in the crowd, and remarked to her lady-in-waiting that he had been a curate at East Sheen when she was a girl and his name began with C, and that she had heard him preach two or three times. On inquiry it turned out that he was the same man and that his name was C——n. It would be clever to have remembered him had the Queen met him after an interval of ten years, but in a passing crowd in far-away Tasmania it was extraordinary. As a mutual result of such good memory the Queen has something to say to everyone, and the personal touch this gift imparts to her conversation gratifies and charms all with whom she is brought into contact.

Fond of Music.

Music had a great share in the home life at White Lodge, the musical hour in the drawing room being at one time a regular institution, and often the Duchess would sit down at the piano in the evenings and sing ballads from the popular operettas of the day. The Queen has a sweet voice, a soft soprano, which greatly matured under the skilful guidance of Signor (now Sir Laulo) Tosti. Of late years, however, Her Majesty has given up her singing; and, although retaining her fondness for music, she rarely finds much time to devote to the piano.

Dramatic art of every kind appeals to her, and there are few plays of importance, or that have attracted public attention during the last two decades, she has not seen. Like her mother, she quickly seizes upon the humorous side of a question. Thus she has a keen appreciation for a sparkling comedy or a farce, and on returning from the theatre, or afterwards in conversation, often makes allusion to some particularly amusing part of the performance.

The Queen is greatly attached to the historical part of her country, and has collected together quite a number of interesting things connected with the Royal Family. As a girl she always enjoyed going over museums and inspecting articles of antiquity, a trait in her character which has widened with years. She has an intimate knowledge of old silver and china, and possesses a valuable collection of objets d'art.

A Great Reader.

The Queen has always been a great reader, and her boudoir at White Lodge contained a little case of favorite books, prominent amongst them being Tennyson's Poems. Books of travel and biographies are seldom missed, for the Queen does not read for mere passing pleasure, but for instruction and information. Novels of themselves do not appeal to her Majesty, but she has read and re-read classic works of fiction; and any novel by a well-known writer, or that is specially recommended to her, at once receives her attention.

Her Majesty follows events attentively. She reads the newspapers daily, and as Princess of Wales attended the more important Parliamentary debates, occupying a seat in the Peeresses' Gallery in the House of Lords and in the Speaker's Gallery in the House of Commons. A chance meeting in a country house led to my being invited to White Lodge, and being honored with the friendship of the Duke and Duchess of Teck. At the time I was helping with the House of Lords' inquiry into the sweating system, and well do I remember the great interest taken by the Queen in the evidence. She never tired of hearing about the workers, and would ply me with questions about the chainmakers, the seamstresses, and the other toilers for long hours and low wages, until I thoroughly believe she knew as much about the conditions and requirements of these people as I did myself.

PUSHING WORK ON GRAIN LINE

Yesterday afternoon a Post reporter visited the construction work on the new C.P.R. grain line near Baker's mill, and it was a busy scene that greeted his eyes. The contractors have had a cement mixer placed near the corner of Caroline and Colborne-sts. The mixer started work this morning, mixing cement for the concrete piers, where the railroad crosses the street.

INDUSTRIAL TRUSTS

Former Ontario Residents Tell of Their Injurious Effect in the United States

Mr. John M. Downie, a resident in Ontario a few years ago, but now a broker in San Francisco, wrote to the St. Thomas Times recently, showing the injurious effect upon the United States of the large industrial trusts. Mr. Downie said:

"I could cite a half dozen instances of the ruinous workings of the trusts right here in San Francisco. If it was not for the United States Steel Trust and other big trusts, this town would be 25 per cent. better off than it is. The Union Iron Works, a few years ago, running as an independent concern, gave employment to 10,000 men in San Francisco. The United States Steel Company looked on it, saw that it was good, and proceeded to gobble it up. . . . To-day about 500 men are employed just doing repair work. That is what the trusts do to a country. Instead of having a thousand independent factories scattered all over the country helping to build up and make prosperous hundreds of different communities, they concentrate in one or two places, and make one plant do what otherwise would give employment to a dozen."

"POINTS" OF THE FACE

Here are a number of "points" in the face which are generally supposed to indicate character:—

Brown eyes are most kindly.

Black eyes are the most rash and impetuous.

A pouting upper lip indicates timidity.

An insignificant nose indicates an insignificant man.

Very large thick lips are a sign of sensuality.

An open mouth is a sure sign of an empty head.

Coarse hair always indicates coarse organization.

Large ears are found on the heads of coarse people.

A projecting upper lip shows malignity and avarice.

Pointed noses generally indicate meddlesome people.

A retreating chin is always bad, it shows lack of resolution.

Large eyes in a small face always betoken maliciousness.

Blue eyes belong to a people of an enthusiastic turn of mind

Oblique eyes are unfavorable; they show cunning and deceit.

Short, thick, curly hair is an indication of great natural strength.

Freckles, like red hair, are an indication of an ardent temperament.

A long forehead indicates intelligence; a short forehead activity.

Grey eyes are generally found associated with prudence and foresight.

An irregular knotty forehead is a sure sign of a bold, original, and investigating mind.

Prominent, arched, eyebrows show great power of perception in regard to form and color. All great painters have such brows.

Large clear blue eyes generally denote persons of great capacity, but sensitive, suspicious, and often unreasonably jealous.

Horizontal eyebrows, full and regular, show great understanding, deliberation, and capacity for planning and execution.

The typical religious enthusiast has a thin, pale face, retreating forehead, small, keen eyes, pointed nose, and retreating chin.

A perpendicular, a very high, or a very short forehead is always bad; either invariably indicates lack of sympathy.

A face which does not change expression in conversation either indicates caution or stupidity.

A flat forehead or an abrupt descent at the back of the head are both unfavorable, either indicating limited understanding.

A person who habitually looks out of the corners of his eyes is to be avoided; his natural tendency is certainly towards deception.

Large noses are invariably associated with strong traits of character; whether good or bad is determined by other characteristics.

Men of marked ability in any line have usually one deep, perpendicular wrinkle on the forehead, with one or two parallel to it on each side.

MODISH AFTERNOON DRESS

For informal bridges, afternoon calls, etc., a dress of this sort is ideal and almost essential to every woman's wardrobe. Black pin-striped poplin, in a rich shade of dark green, was used for the model from which our sketch was taken, and it makes a most becoming and serviceable gown. The design is very good, especially of the bodice, where the stripes are cleverly used in bands which outline the yoke and stock of allover lace, which are veiled with black chiffon. Jet motifs are used on bodice and skirt in effective fashion, and add much to the beauty of the dress. The deep hem is black satin, above which are three folds of the striped poplin.

WOMEN IN PARLIAMENT

A Glance at the Reigns of the Early Edwards

In the very early times the affairs of the nation were not wholly in the hands of the sterner sex, for in the reigns of Henry III. and Edward I. four abbesses at least were summoned to Parliament—namely, those of Shaftesbury, Barking, Winchester, and Milton. To one of the Parliaments of Edward III. there were summoned by writ ten ladies of noble birth, seven of them countesses. Gurdon, in his "Antiquities of Parliament," goes back still further than this, for he says the "ladies of birth and quality sat in council with the Saxon Mitas." A certain Abbess Hilda, according to the historian Bede, presided at an ecclesiastical synod. In Wighfred's great council at Beccanfeld, A.D. 694, the abbesses sat and deliberated, and five of them signed decrees of that council along with the King, Bishops and nobles. King Edward's charter to the Abbey of Crowland, A.D. 961, was with the consent not only of the nobles but also of the abbesses, their names appearing among those who signed it.

MONEY AFFAIRS OF YOUR CHILD

The Advisability of Giving Them a Definite Allowance and Cultivating Thrift

One day last summer a mother took her children to a popular picnic park. After the fashion of children, they came to her at frequent intervals throughout the day with requests for money for pony rides, merry-go-round trips, ice-cream, and all the things that children think essential to their pleasure on such occasions. When the mother counted up at night, she was astonished to find how much money had been spent.

"I think," she said to her husband, "that our present method with the children will make unprofitable ones. Every time they want a little money they come to me."

When next they were going to the park, the mother gave to each child a sum of money in his own pocketbook. She explained that this money was for the picnic, and when it was spent they could not have more. They considered the spending of money carefully, often consulting with their mother. They watched different things and decided which they would rather have, and, when the money was gone, gave up looking or whining.

The mother decided, too, that each child should have a weekly allowance, instead of coming to her with their little pennies. The children were five and six years old, and they were given little cents, a nickel apiece, and the rest of the week they was all spent the first afternoon. They bought some candy, and the rest went for candy on Sunday they were sadly distressed because they had no copper for the day school. Mother did not supply any, and they never forgot again. In a very short time they wanted things that cost more than five cents, and so they learned to deny themselves and save for a worthy object. After this an mother's suggestion, they put a nickel in the bank each week—the bank that was to take them through college by and by. Of course they made many mistakes, but the parents argued that it was better to make the mistakes with the nickels than with the dollars after awhile. When the nickel outgrew its first layout that they had money, they used to save them for a dollar. Mother helped them to bear the disappointments in getting things that they had planned, they learned to resist the temptation.

By the time the boy had can always be given in stores, the mother felt quite trained them to buy for himself and satisfy his appetite with some harmless indulgence. When the child from year to year other, the allowance was increased.

In one of the recent magazines, a writer argued against giving children an allowance, saying that it gave them the feeling that the world owed them a living. In my experience I would draw an inference exactly opposite. The child who is accustomed to receive whatever can he asks for from his parents would be very likely to get the impression that the world owes him a definite sum to depend upon, and knows that he must use it wisely, developes a sense of thrift. The child in a well-ordered home always has some little duties, and, while he should regard them as a labor of love and not feel that he is rendering paid for them, yet they make him, to the extent of his ability, a part of his working household and thus give him a share of its earnings.

Our grandfather wisely phrased it, "Pay to your owner, he as you are our dear little boy."—Colin Margaret Wallace.

FORMER LINDSAY RESIDENT GETS A PENITENTIARY TERM FOR COUNTERFEITING

The Orillia Packet says:—

About the middle of last week Mr. John Scott detective Chief Ward that a counterfeit five-dollar note, of the Bank of Montreal had been offered at the market of the Dominion Theatre. Later, another of the same was taken to the Merchants Bank for deposit. On Monday afternoon a young man came to the police to complain that the circus people were putting out counterfeit money, he having taken one of the same $5 bills in change at the ticket wagon. Constable Reid went to the grounds and kept a sharp look-out but there was no developments until evening, when the ticket seller recognized a young man named Hudson, who came with another five as the youth who had passed the counterfeit on him earlier in the day. Hudson was arrested and he told the Chief that he had got the money from a chum named Watson, a young fellow about his own age, who had given him the bills to buy tickets with, and return him the change. On the way to the police station they met young Watson, who also was arrested. On the way he dropped one of the bogus bills on the sidewalk and another was found in his pocket. Watson's father's house was next visited under a search warrant, and the police found two more of the $5. bills on Watson, senior's person. He was then arrested and lodged in the lock-up with the others. The three prisoners were brought before the magistrate on Tuesday morning, and remanded till one o'clock yesterday, to await the coming of county Crown Attorney Cotter.

Before the Police Magistrate yesterday the two younger prisoners pleaded not guilty, and elected to be tried summarily. Crown Attorney Cotter pointed out that the offence alleged implied guilty knowledge and he was not able to produce sufficient evidence that the boys were aware that the bills were counterfeit. The charge against them was therefore dismissed. Watson pleaded guilty and was sentenced to two years and a half in the penitentiary at Kingston. It was proved by Hudson that he had a delicate wife and son, and that inquiries at Lindsay and Uxbridge show that his previous record was good. Before the opening of the court Watson told the County Attorney a story of his acquaintance with a strange, and consequent meeting with a masked man, who gave him $50 in bogus money, and was subsequently to get $20 for it. Magistrate Clarke frankly told the prisoner that he did not believe a word of this story, and said that it was evident that he had one was shielding somebody. At least thirty dollars was got out in Orillia and thirty dollars in Bracebridge. The bank authorities say that last March about $5,000 of these counterfeits was in circulation. Watson will be taken this Saturday to Kingston.

The Watsons came to Orillia, from Uxbridge about two months ago, the father taking employment in Miller's tannery. They had been in Uxbridge about two years and before that had resided for six years at Lindsay. Watson senior, gives his age as forty, he is an about cotton and young Hudson is seventeen.

OUR LIGHT RATES AND SEYMOUR CO'S

A representative of the Central Ontario Power Co., was in Port Hope last week and stated the wish that Company were prepared to give local power users should it secure the contract.

He called on a great many citizens and obtained the rates they were paying at present for house lighting. For certain reasons some of the citizens did not wish their names published, but below are given a number of comparisons which should be of interest.

Dr. Blanchard's bill for Nov 27th to Dec. 29th was $2.60 net. He consumed 39.3 k.w. He has a house in his house, and had he been using Seymour current, he would pay 10c per kw. on the first 30c and 5c per k.w. for current used during said month. He used 38.3 and 1 lamp. This at 10c which cost him 38c would give him a total of $2.93, which would be his net bill with the Seymour Power Co. against his net bill with the other domiciled of $3.60, a saving of $1.55 on one months' bill.

Mr. J. Gillogly, Simcoe-st had a three months bill running from the 30th of Sept. to Dec. 30th. In that time he used 55.3 k.w. for which he paid $2.18 net. He has a five room house, and the Seymour rate at 10c. a—room for five rooms would be 50c, plus 3c. k.w. for 55.3 k.w. which would be $1.66 plus $100 His total bill would be $3.66 against $5.18, a saving of $2.02 in favor of the Seymour rate.

A six room house on Bond street, owned by a gentleman who did not wish his name published. His bill was from Aug 24th to Sept 24th. He used in that time 37 k.w., for which he paid $4.44 net. Under the Seymour rate, having six rooms in his house, he would have paid 10c, per room or 60c. plus 7c. k.w., for 37 k. w.=$3.11 plus 60c. for room charge, or $3.71 net Seymour power, against $2.44 net, a saving of $1.73.

Mr. G. H. Wilson has a nine room house. His bill from Sept 29, to Oct. 29th was $3.51. He used 3.74 k.w. in that time. Seymour rate, he would have paid 90c. for room charges, and 3c per k.w. for 38 k.w.'s or a total of $2.04, against $3.51, or a saving of 1.47.

Monster Beds.

Though the beds of the royal personages of England were elaborately carved and hung with rich curtains even so late as the Tudor period, it is recorded that King Henry VIII.'s bedstead contained only straw beneath all its finery. A curious order exists as to precautions to be taken against the possibility of intended mischief to the royal person in the making of the bed, for the state was to search the straw through with a dagger "that there be none privily therein and to tumble over on the down bed for the better search thereof." The bed of Henry VIII. was nearly eleven feet square, and of very proportionate dimensions is the great bed to which the wanderer came in a well-known passage in "Twelfth Night," which was twelve feet square. This "great bed of Ware" has been a marvel for centuries.

Appropriate music was rendered by the choir. Notwithstanding the heat, a large number assembled to witness the ceremony, after which tea was served by the members of the ladies aid on the parsonage lawn. This was a most successful affair, both socially and financially, the handsome sum of $117 being the receipts from the tea and refreshments. Liberal offerings from members of the congregation and others were also donated.

FIRST TRANSCONTINENTAL C. P. R TRAIN TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO TODAY

Twenty-five years ago today, the first transcontinental train of the Canadian Pacific Railway pulled out from Montreal for the Pacific coast it was a memorable occasion marking the consummation of the greatest work that Canada has ever undertaken.

For a country with less than four millions of people to build a railway across the North American continent—the first, and still the only actual transcontinental line connecting the two great oceans—was a remarkable achievement whose importance was accentuated by the fact that many hundreds of miles lay thinly traversed regions altogether unknown—where men did not live—around the rockbound northern shores of Lake Superior, across the far western plains, through the solitude, and over Nature's majestic sky scrapers in the Canadian Rockies.

No less wonderful has been the growth and expansion of Canada's great national highway since the intervening quarter of a century. The company did not merely remain a company but became more—a developer and an Empire builder—and so potent a factor in filling the wants of others, as well as the vast army of travellers that both on land and sea the C.P.R. today is a name to conjure with. From comparatively small beginnings, as seen by twentieth eyes, it has developed into a world encircling institution with magnificent fleets on ocean and the inland waters—an immigration agency that has peopled half a continent, even furnishing ready-made farmers for the homesekers—a forceful factor in the development of mines and mining—the inaugurator of huge irrigation works that are reclaiming a kingdom. The company too, headed by its extensive works at different points where thousands are employed in building its rolling stock has its own telegraph and express services that reach everywhere, and a chain of palatial hotels to comfortably...house those who travel, and it even employs Swiss guides to pilot daring mountaineers to dizzy heights and runs sanitariums and summer resorts where the pleasure seeker may holiday and the invalid's health be restored. Its revenues are in keeping with its greatness, the company did not merely receive a comparatively small subsidy but became a developer and an Empire builder—and so potent a factor in filling the wants of others, as well as the vast army of travellers that both on land and sea the C.P.R. today is a name to conjure with. From comparatively small beginnings, as seen by twentieth eyes, it has developed into a world encircling institution with magnificent fleets on ocean and the inland waters—an immigration agency that has peopled half a continent, even furnishing ready-made farmers for the homesekers—a forceful factor in the development of mines and mining—the inaugurator of huge irrigation works that are reclaiming a kingdom. LINDSAY, FRIDAY, JUNE, 30th.

A DESERVED REBUKE

The Kingston Standard Conservative, administers this rebuke to the rapid anti-reciprocity journals, which have been abusing Bishop Mills because he was not manly enough to expose hysterics in the disloyalty cry which has been their whole stock-in-trade since the beginning of the agitation for a removal of tariff restrictions.

It is an interesting question just how far a churchman like Bishop Mills can or should go in discussing an issue like reciprocity. But since both sides say it is not a political issue, and since the Bishop took no ground what ever for or against it, but urged only that it be considered from the broad standpoint of citizenship we fail to see why any newspaper should make hysterical over it. If a Bishop or Churchman is debarred from discussing good citizenship merely because the citizenship is to be applied to a political issue, we fail to see what benefit teaching along those lines can ever be. If religion is to be of any force or effect it must deal with the problems and with the people of to-day. The musty past is forever buried.

THE POWER PROPOSITION

The gentleman who supplies the articles to the Warder on the power proposition evidently labors under the impression that a policy of ridicule in dealing with the statements made by those opposed to the bylaw will win supporters. In this he pays a poor compliment to the intelligence of the citizens. Sure by this course he will be discussed in his merits. It is a big question, and its supporters should surely be big enough to discuss it with a view to giving the citizens the information they have failed to get to date.

A meeting of the most energetic supporters of the bylaw was held last evening, and a vigorous campaign on behalf of the measure will be undertaken. This, of course, will be in the nature of an educational campaign, and those who undertake it will have an exceedingly difficult task to convince the people that the proposition, as all claim it should be, is a gift. They will have an opportunity of gauging public sentiment, which, they will find is strongly in opposition to the purchase of the local plant.

There has been too much worship paid at the Hydro Electric shrine here. Adam Beck has been placed on a pedestal as an electric god, and the lesser satellites of the Commission have been looked upon as infallible in their pronouncements. The public ownership idea, which is satisfactory in some instances, has been carried to death, in connection with the local proposition which the majority of the citizens have expressed themselves that the power capacity at Pension Falls is genuine or that the citizens will get value for the $200,000 they propose to be expended for the purchase and renewal of the local plant.

The articles in the Warder have not been convincing. They may satisfy a few, but the majority of the citizens look upon the bylaw with suspicion.

Then again, there is a strong feeling that the bylaw is being forced upon the people too hurriedly. A proposition to expend $200,000 of the people's money, should be considered seriously. That is has not received that consideration is apparent to all.

PRINCIPAL McKENZIE HAS RESIGNED

A special meeting of the Board of Education was held last night in the council chamber for the purpose of confirming the appointment of teachers to the Public schools. Moved by Dr. Wood, and seconded by Jas. W. Anderson, that Mr. McKenzie's (Rear Ward) resignation be accepted.

Mr. Jackson then presented the recommendation of the advisory committee re the appointment of teachers to the public schools, which is as follows:

Moved by Mr. Jackson and seconded by Dr. White that the report be adopted.—Carried.

ELEPHANTS AS NURSES,

Children in India Often Cared For by the Big Brutes.

It is by no means uncommon in India for the children of a mahout to be cared for by the mahout's elephant. The whole family of the mahout become, as it were, parasites to the elephant to the extent that the little children trunk while the mother goes to market or to pick wood or unloads to cook the family meal.

No jockey or wolf would be likely to pick up and carry off a baby so long as this confided to the care of an elephant, but most people who have lived in the jungles know now very possible it is for a jackal or a wolf to carry off a baby when it is lying in a hut or when the mother is unprovided with means to fight off the marauder.

Children thus brought up in the companionship of an elephant become ridiculously familiar with the old pachyderm and take all kind of liberties with him—liberties which the elephant seems to endure on the principle that it does not harm him, while it amuses the child. One man saw a little native child, quite naked, about two feet high, straddle the elephant's bare back and taking it down to the water to bathe, meanwhile at the time in most unbecoming terms of native abusive language. On arriving at the water the elephant obediently in obedience to the child's command, lay down in the water, leaving only just a portion of his body, like a small island, above the water. Upon this sort of island the elephant the child will stand and shout, shouting all the more if the child's companions who a few days ago also in charge of elephants, are wallowing in the water around him. If the child should slip off the island the elephant's trunk promptly restores him to safety. Those orchids as they grow up become first mates to mahouts and strenuously arrive at the dignity of being mahouts.—New York Press.

FUN WITH ROYAL INITIALS.

A Pun That Pleased Victoria and One That Hit Albert Edward.

Canadian Gazette, Calcutta, under date of May 24, 1831. Queen Victoria's birthday, just now an egregious pun reported to her famous kinsman, Charles James Fox. "Uncle dear, we have a boy-princess!" Fox was delighted and dazzled by the display on the queen's day and mentioned a little merry quibble perpetrated by my Lord Alemaine, who on her majesty's birthday, "I wonder if my good people of London are as glad to see me as I am to see them?" pointed out as their precedent cockney answer to the query "V. R."

Jokes run in cycles. Sixty-five years later Edward VII. was on the English throne. Sir Walter Parrott, professor of music at the University of Oxford, was practicing with part of his band in the music room at Christchurch where all the furniture was covered with sheets bearing the royal cipher, "Edward the seventh is the person and said, "We all know that the king is king, but why is he?" The men looked astonished, but said nothing. Charles E. B., of course," chuckled Sir Walter as he pointed to the initials around him.

A more humorous jest of this sort is found in the "Life of Richard II. Harvey," author of the "Ingoldsby Legends." On the night of Jan. 25, 1842, the late king of England was christened Albert Edward. Burham, going out to see the illumination and observing in almost every window the initials "A. E." on the transparency, drily remarked it was himself. "Ah, he'll make requisition with the Pope for more cupids before he comes of age!"—New York Tribune.

COUNCIL GETS OPTION ON STINSON POWER ON GULL RIVER ABOVE MINDEN VILLAGE

At last evening's special meeting of the council a letter was read from the owner of the Stinson water Power on Gull river, above Minden village, giving the council an option on the property the price being fixed at $12,000. This is the power upon which an option had been secured last year by the special power committee. The council covers the property on either side of the river and the flour and saw mill at this point is also included.

Those who are in a position to judge state that excellent power can be obtained at this point, and that this supply of water in the north country is well nigh inexhaustible. There are myriads of lakes, it is claimed, which serve as feeders to Gull river, so that nothing of note never failing springs which help to fill these lakes.

The committee appointed together with the Hydro Electric engineer will look carefully into the power possibilities at this point and will make a report to the council. mf

ROOT AMENDMENT GOES TO DEFEAT RECIPROCITY BILL IN BETTER POSITION

Washington, June 27.—The Canadian reciprocity bill emerged from the first ordeal in the Senate last night unscathed. The Root amendment, proposing a modification of the wood pulp and print paper section of the agreement, was defeated after seven hours of debate, by an overwhelming vote. The friends of the amendment were so satisfied of its defeat that a roll call on the vote was not demanded.

This leaves the reciprocity measure open to the general fight that is to follow if amendments of important provisions of the Payne tariff law. Senator Lafollette announced in a speech opposing the Root amendment, that he would give to the Senate a chance to pass on general tariff amendments for free paper, free lumber and lumber products, and for reductions in many other schedules. Senator Gallinger announced his intention of offering a free paper amendment later, and other Senators have evidence of their purpose to force, from few an consideration of a tariff revision on the widest plane. Speaking for the Root amendment was interspersed with attack on the whole reciprocity measure in the debate that ran throughout the afternoon, and which resulted in the defeat of Senator Root's proposal to change the House bill by requiring that all Canadian provinces should imposed the same restrictions on pulp wood and its products before the reciprocal features applied to the wood pulp and print paper items of the agreement.

"I am opposed to this so-called reciprocity agreement as a whole, because I believe it is wrong, harmful and unjustifiable," said Senator Lafollette. "If it must pass, I want to see it made as nearly perfect as possible. I shall vote against the Root amendment because I believe it will divorce the very purpose of the wood pulp and print paper paragraph of the agreement."

Senator Lafollette declared there was no justification for any duty on print paper. He analyzed the figures of the tariff board to show that the best mills in the United States actually produce paper cheaper than the best mills in Canada. To continue a duty upon print paper, he said, was to put a premium on the "inefficiency and slothfulness" of the protected industry, and to make the protective tariff "dragon-toothed instead of fangs for the development of efficient management."

Senator Lafollette criticized the newspapers for having taken so unreciprocity measure as a means of getting relief from the oppressive duties on the print paper manufacturers. He said that the publishers, with few exceptions, the railroads, the flour millers' and millers' trust would secure advantages through the passage of the reciprocity bill.

Senator Lafollette declared that in the testimony taken by the finance committee it had to be shown that the newspapers had suppressed the facts of the reciprocity proceedings, but on this point Senator Stone, who is to a member of the committee in charge of the matter, declared the Wisconsin Senator was mistaken.

Perforated Stamps.

The man who invented perforated sheets of stamps made a big fortune out of the idea. It is said he first occurred to a hunting man who wanted to stamp a letter, but could not lay his hand on a knife or scissors. He suddenly bethought himself of a spur. Running the rowel along he perforated the edges of the stamp, quite well enough to start a revolution.—London Tailor.

Practical Religion.

The story is told of a little housemaid, far over the sea, who, when asked whether she realized that she was in any way different after uniting with the church from what she had been before, thought for an instant and then, smiling brightly, said, "Well, I always the corners! She could hardly have given a better demonstration of the reality of her religious life.—Christian Herald.

Precise.

"I jump up and down when I'm happy," declared the small girl from New York, according to the Louisville Courier-Journal, the Boston child looked at her gravely and replied:

"I can imagine your jumping up, but I think the law of gravitation must be responsible for the alternating descent."

Important Distinction.

"What do you think of our patient?" asked one physician.

"Wholly irresponsible," replied the other.

"Mentally or in money matters?"—Washington Star.

GRANT WAS JESTING.

But the Plucky Southern Woman Was Ready for Ready Retort.

During his Virginia campaign General Grant found it necessary one day to encamp some of his troops on the beautiful property of a Mrs. Stoutonburg and to take a room in the house for his own accommodation. He did so, however, with great tact and gentleness, quite winning the heart of the estimable lady. As he prepared to depart she turned to her:

"New, Mrs. Stouton, we've enjoyed your hospitality very much, and I'm prepared to pay the bill," said Grant.

She protested, but the general insisted—for that it was a mutual transaction and she was entitled to that compensation for the expense they had consumed and the comfort they had enjoyed. He counted the money, and then the general said, with a roguish twinkle in the eye:

"Now, Mrs. Stouton, would you like it in United States banknotes or in Confederate money?"

She pressed her lips together, her eyes flashed fire, and without a moment's hesitation she said:

"In Confederate money."

Grant looked at her with admiration.

"I was only jesting," he began softly.

"I was not," she quickly interrupted, "I am in earnest—deadly earnest. I've made my choice, and I'll abide by the consequences."

And Grant, with his eyes full of admiration for the plucky little southern woman, paid her in Confederate money.—Sadlier Home Journal.

REV. J. P. WILSON SAID FAREWELL TO HIS CONGREGATION ON SUNDAY

Rev. J.P. Wilson preached farewell sermons at Cambridge Church Sunday, before large congregations.

In the morning Mr. Wilson took as his text part of Matt. 15:25, "Lord Help Me." The central thought of the discourse was that the powers of the Almighty were at the call or service of His people. However great the trial, however complex the situation in which anyone may be placed, the Divine Father knows all about it and stands ready when called upon, as in the text, to help.

In the evening the text was the latter clause of II Cor. 13-11, "Finally Brethren, Farewell; Be perfect; be of good comfort; be of one mind; live in peace and the God of Love and Peace shall be with you."

As a farewell message to his people, Rev. Mr. Wilson emphasized the admonitions of the text. The sermon was a powerful appeal to the congregation to strive after Christian perfection, to trust entirely in Christ, to be of one mind in maintaining the strong fundamental doctrines of our faith and to uphold the hands of the pastor in the spiritual work of the Church.

These two impressive and eloquent sermons closed the ministry in Lindsay, of the pastor of the Church, Rev J. P. Wilson.

At the close of the evening service Mr. Wilson, in a kind and tender way referred to the separation which is to take place as between people and pastor. The kindness of his people to him, the harmony which has existed in the Board of Management and the excellent support from the services of the choir were feelingly referred to. Several invitations to other churches were refused because it was his intention to complete the full term of four years in Lindsay but a call to Nanaimo, to the Church which his father had been pastor, and of which he himself, in his earlier ministry had been pastor, proved too strong to resist, and a little after a ministry of thirty-five years he should be invited back by his own people to his father's Church to conduct a funeral and moved him to accept the invitation.

Rev. Mr. Wilson thanked not only the members of his own church but also the many friends of other communions in town who had extended to him, and his family, many kindnesses. The press of the town were also remembered by the pastor in his closing remarks.

Mr. Wilson said as a closing message to his people he would say, "Men and women, God wants YOU, not so much your gifts, but YOUR SELVES in wholehearted service.

The itinerant system of the Methodist church, which it is undoubtedly one of the best systems in the world, it bears heavily on a congregation when it removes from a community, such a gentleman

Rev. Mr. Wilson.

Possessed of rare pulpit ability of a juvenile disposition, of a tender and sympathetic manner, Mr. Wilson embodies those qualities, which make up a strong pastor, and pastor. In the pulpit, in the prayer meeting, in social gatherings, on the street, in the places of business, in the house, Mr. Wilson was the same courteous, kindly, gentleman, beloved by all classes of people. A human man, modern in his reading, and thought, but staunch in his convictions, and firm to the old doctrines which have stood the test of time. Mr. Wilson preached a practical christianity—one which can be lived in every circumstance of life, and this high ideal of life was made so attractive that one was inspired to desire to attain to it.

Perhaps no where more than in the home of sorrow and bereavement, was the influence of Mr. Wilson felt. In the course of the present pastorate, it has been his duty to visit many such homes, and in these homes he will never be forgotten. That sympathetic nature refined itself in the fire of affliction has made its impression on the lives with which it has come in contact.

To know and to associate with this gentleman, is to receive an uplift in one's own life.

Cambridge-st church, and the people of Lindsay, wish Mr. Wilson, and his daughter, God speed from their very hearts.

Mr. and Miss Wilson left on the C.P.R. this afternoon for Toronto, where a week will be spent with Mr. Wilson's daughter, Mrs. Jack Robinson, before going to settle in Nanaimo. Members of the official board were at the station to bid him good-bye.

"CONNED" MAN IN THE CELL

Welland, June 27.—While Thomas Ward was languishing in the police cells at Port Colborne Hell awaiting trial on a charge of vagrancy, an angular woman, well dressed, bobbed her hair, strode into the room adjoining the cells, and announced himself to a detective of same name.

He consented to get the prisoner a good square meal if he would hand over his watch. This formality was agreed upon, and the "detective" strode out of the door.

He did not return, and when the prisoner was taken to court he explained matters. Later a woman named T. Overholt was arrested on the charge, and admitted having had the watch. He was remanded to jail.

WITH THE CORONATION CONTINGENT

Another Letter From Sergt. Henley of Past Staff

The following interesting letter was received by Sergt. Henley's relatives. The Post's representative on the contingent has forwarded several other letters, which will appear in these columns—

Empress of Ireland, Thursday June 8—This is the last night on board, so I am getting this letter ready to post at Liverpool. We have had a splendid voyage across, and the weather has been very good. Yesterday, there was an awful fog, and the boat ran at slow speed all day. Her big fog horn blew about every three minutes from ten o'clock yesterday morning, until nine o'clock this morning. It makes an awful low rumbling noise, and in the night when it would blow, you could hear it almost going through the bunk under you.

On Monday we had an awful storm, and the waves were something fierce. I was sick all day but about four o'clock in the afternoon, Prestige and I went up on deck for a while, and were only there about two minutes, when a great big wave came right over on the lower deck, and we were soaked to the skin with slimy salt water. Some of the biggest waves must have been 21 feet high, and the boat rocked like a cork on them. Mitchell and I were pretty sick, but Prestige, the old seadog just went on as if he was on the land. He is a great Brad, and so is Mitchell, and I couldn't wish to be with better fellows. We are different bunks from each other, that is, Prestige and Mitchell are together, and I am with a fellow from Port Hope. The London boys, who were with us in Levis camp, are in the other side of the boat.

The steerage passengers have one large lavatory for the whole bunch. Every morning I have fresh water soap, towels, and hot water, and a steward gets us anything that we want. If you are not feeling well, he brings you ginger wine, or does anything you ask him. We have dandy meals, served in a large dining room, seating 300 men. The food is good, and every day we have ice cream, and oranges after the meal, some times at dinner, and some times at supper. The tables seat ten men each, with a waiter at each. He does this we pay for the privilege of getting soda biscuits and cheese every night before going to bed. It I told you everything about the ship I could be writing all night, so I will leave the rest, and write to the Post, and you can read it then.

My arm, which was vaccinated, is fine now, and I never feel it at all. Prestige never took ill, but Mitchell was an awful man, he has not been able to do a thing on board. His arm is swollen right from the wrist, and all red and inflamed around the wound. He is put on as guard over the baggage, which is easy work, until he gets better.

We had to drill on the boat every day from 8.30 until 12 and 2 to 4. There was plenty of room for the whole 800 to drill.

I heard a commotion up on deck just now, and on investigation I found that we have just sighted land. It is Ireland, and is 10 hours sail from Liverpool, so the captain says, so we will be in port about noon tomorrow, (Friday) We boat travels at an awful rate and shoots the water up in a great high off her bow. She has averaged 21 miles an hour, since sickness commenced, and is now running at a pretty good rate. "Pretty Fast" launch at Fenelon Falls or Lake Ontario, is not none of them could keep up to this boat. We have watching her engines and stokers for a long time today. There are 157 stokers, and they are stokers are bare to the waist, and their pants are made of oil skin to protect them from oil and inches below the knee. The coal is and the water drains down into a gutter along the front of the boat and shoots them out of the hogt. The firemen are as black as coal, and seem to work like machines. Each stoker has only two hours, and by the looks of them when they come out. They look as if they could stand a trips. They are stripping flues all the ship finish, and just before I come down, a sailor was perched on the top of the mast, about 100 feet above the deck. The rope holders only run to about feet from the top, and he climbed the rest of the way to fasten a rope, string of flags runs from the back of the boat up over the top of the mast, and then down to the front of the boat, and each flag is 2 feet wide by 4 feet long, and it looked lovely.

There are about 50 men, all singing a different song in the room, and I hardly know what I am writing, so if this letter reads kind of mixed you will know what is the matter. You can get a fairly idea of the size of this boat, when I tell you what is in her. She has room for 2400 passengers, with 7 large lavatories, all fitted up and tile and enamel, with tile floors, 3 large dining rooms, capable of seating the 800 passengers in three sittings, private bath rooms for all first class passengers, and bath rooms each for 2nd and 3rd class and 3rd class sitting rooms, a large dancing pavilion, two beefs, each about as large as Robson's grocery, private offices for the ship's officers, which, in sailors, stewards, stokers, engineers, and all other members about 600. There is a hospital with a doctor, and three nurses; three large kitchens, one is a whole lot cooks, a barber shop, a dentists shop, and then the engines, engines and all hold taken up a whole lot of room. But the thing I least expected to find on board was a money order office, and a good one at that. A paper is published every morning with interesting stories in it, and "Marconigrams" received by wireless telegraphy, the day before. They print bills and menu cards, and when a concert is held in the evening, they make programs. On the top of the steering cabin, and Marconi station.

FOUR HUNDRED HOUSES CONDEMNED

Toronto, June 27.—The inspectors sent out by the health health department to investigate housing conditions condemned no less than 400 houses in various parts of the city, and notified the owners to put them in proper condition. The houses condemned are chiefly situated in the ward and on Eastern avenue and adjoining streets. Some were in an indescribably dirty condition and unfit to accommodate beasts. Sanitary conditions in some places were unendurable.

In most places the owners complied with the orders to put the places in better condition.

HOUSE OF LORDS AND VETO BILL

London, June 27.—Parliament reassembled yesterday after the coronation recess, and the struggle over the veto question in the upper house is already resumed.

In the House of Lords, Lord Landdowne gave notice of a series of amendments to the Parliament Bill, providing for the exclusion from that measure of bills which are for raising the Irish home rule, for a joint sitting in cases of disagreement between the two Houses, and for a referendum in other cases. It is understood that the Government will not accept these amendments, and another deadlock and overhauling the action of 500 additional peers seems the only outcome, unless the Lords yield.

First English Letter.

The oldest letter written in English of which there is record was that to Sir Thomas Stanley, Knight of the Garter, who was then in Kent. That letter is dated 1415, and was sent to London by messenger. Up to the commencement of the reign of Edward I. all letters, even of the most private nature, were written in Latin. About the time of Edward's accession French, which had been the spoken language of the court from the time of Merovingian, began to be used in written correspondence. In the reign of Edward III. the English language, in pursuance of the statute of Parliament was made the language of legislation.—London Globe.

The meeting was opened with singing and prayer, after which a nice programme was rendered, consisting of solos, quartettes, and addresses by members of the church. After the programme was well advanced, Mr. and Mrs. Whattam were invited to come forward and the following addresses were read.

Dear Mr. Whattam,—

Soon our Master's call will lead you away from the Farewells are not pleasant, but ours with you has many pleasures, because of your genuine friendship and love toward us.

It has been an atmosphere which has given life abundant life, making us stronger and better men. You will go to other fields of harvest, but your memory will remain to help us carry on the work you have lead us into. We shall faithfully work with your successor footin unto Christ, the Author And Finisher of our faith. You lead others as you have lead us to work in Christ's vineyard.

We ask you to accept this small token of our love and esteem hoping it might rest you when you weary, and always remind you of the hand of fellow builders in Woodville. Signed, Bert Hillmond, President, Alfred Foulter, sec.

Dear Mrs. and Miss Whattam,—

We, the ladies of the congregation, could not let you go from our midst without some more permanent measure show our appreciation of your many kindnesses to each of us during the past four years.

In parting with you we feel we are parting with friends that cannot easily be replaced. You indeed have a rare and unselfish, and sympathetic tact, has always been shed for each one in trouble. Your home has always been open to us whenever we had occasion to use it, and your willingness to assist in the different organizations of the church, have been untiring. To say we love you is to repeat what you must already know. Out of the fullness of the heart the mouth speaketh, but words do not always answer our purpose. We like to put them in some tangible form, and so tonight, We ask you, Mrs. Whattam, to accept these chairs, and Miss Whattam this pin, not for their value, but as tokens of the love and esteem in which you are held by your many Woodville friends. Although severed from us, we feel assured that we will still have your sympathy and prayers in our work here. Signed on behalf of the Women's Missionary Society, and the Ladies' Aid.

Mr. and Mrs. Whattam, and Miss Ing the people for their kindness to Whattam, although take by surprise, made a suitable reply thanking them in the past four years. The meeting closed with singing "God be with you till we meet again."

There the country stone crusher has been on that beat for a week and the said road covered with finely crushed stone so it bids fair to be one of the best roads in this township.

HEAD MORMON ON THE GRILL

Washington, D. C., June 28.—President Joseph F. Smith, of the Mormon Church, was the principal witness at the opening hearing of the House committee investigation of the so-called sugar trust. He said he was administered to him by Chairman Hardwick, the Mormon leader remaining seated while being sworn.

"Have you any official connection with the Utah-Idaho Sugar Co.?" asked Chairman Hardwick.

"I am president of the company," Smith replied.

"Do you own any stock?"

"Yes, sir; I own about 9,000 shares individually, I hold 43,215 shares for the Church."

It is worse than useless to take any medicine internally for muscular or chronic rheumatism. All that is needed is a free application of Chamberlain's liniment. For sale by all dealers.

MONTREAL CHURCH HEAP OF RUINS LOSS ESTIMATED AT $200,000

Montreal, June 29.—Lightning yesterday struck the Church of St. Jean Baptiste on Rachael street, and completely destroyed the splendid edifice, the loss of it—at $200,000.

This was the second time the church had been burned, but the present fire was much the more disastrous, since after the fire in 1898 it had been rebuilt into one of the finest edifices in Montreal.

At midnight there was little left but the walls and the tower, facing on Rachael street, which still stood, although it was momentarily threatening to fall.

There was, fortunately, no loss of life in connection with the fire, which started about 9.30 o'clock, very shortly after a service had been held. The only person injured was Fernand Bourgeoin, who was thrown from a ladder by a lightning stroke and suffered a broken leg and other injuries.

At a late hour this morning the fire is still raging within the almost bare walls of the church, and it is said by Chief Tremblay that it will probably be noon before the firemen would be able to leave the ruins.

While the loss is very heavy they are well covered by insurance, it being stated that there was $175,000 insurance on the main building, spread over a number of companies, while the insurance on the organ amounted to 14,000. Oddly enough the organ insurance had only been concluded at noon yesterday, the organ having been recently installed by the Casavant Company of St. Hyacinthe.

Ottawa Fireman's Escape.

Ottawa, June 28.—Two firemen were seriously injured, and several others partly overcome by smoke, in a blaze on Somerset street, in the west of the city, at noon yesterday.

The fire was in a shop, and Fireman Gravelle fell through a trap door into the burning cellar. It was some minutes before he was rescued, but his life was probably saved by Capt. Alex. Fraser, who ran down on a line, and dragged Gravelle out, Fireman Garner, who made a heroic rescue, was also hurted. Both were taken to the hospital.

ALL RED LINE TO SHORTEN TRIP

(Special to the Post)

Montreal, June 28—The all-red line railway company, of which notice of charter has just been given at Ottawa, will result in the shortening of the sea voyage between England and Canada by two and a quarter days, if the scheme upon which the company is working is carried out.

This, at any rate, is the statement of Hon. Achille Bergevin, legislative councillor, who has interested influential authorities in the project, both here and in Great Britain.

The proposal is to build a railway from Montreal or Quebec to a point at or near Cape St. Charles, on the Labrador coast.

This point is on the 52nd degree of latitude, which is the same as London and Bristol. It is proposed to establish a port. The only months when it possibly could not be used are May and June, when the big fields of floating ice come down the coast. At this time, however, the harbors of Montreal and Quebec are open.

PRINCE OF WALES MAY VISIT CANADA

(Special to the Post)

London, June 28.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Yesterday the Prince of Wales, Prince Mary and Prince George visited Sir Ivor Herbert's house at Chelsea, and afterwards the Prince of Wales and The Prince of Wales especially asked to see the different compartments of the Indians came from, and begged a bull-kon from the Indian chiefs. This request was promptly complied with, and all commandants gave him their badges, whereupon Prince George demanded a similar gift.

The South Africans gave their peculiar lion's roar, and the Canadians the Iroquois yell children three cheers and a "tiger," and sang "O Canada."

Hon. Louis Botha and Smuts visited later in the day. To-day the Canadians at the Coronation Camp in Delhi officers take to an Earl. Lord Strathcona dines the officers and wives at night, and on Friday the King presents the coronation medals at Buckingham Palace.

On Saturday the Canadian camp will be struck at one o'clock, and the men will embark on the Empress of Britain at Liverpool on a week's leave. On Monday the officers and men have been mostly killed with kindness and hospitality.

A Nasty Accusation.

New York, June 28—Ernest T. Rossiter son of the late Sir E. V. W. Rossiter, once vice-president of the New York Central Railroad, was held in $1,000 bail yesterday for trial on a charge of having murdered his parents of children. A ten-year-old girl claims that the murders occurred in a trolley car Monday night. Her mother beat Rossiter with an umbrella.

Mr. German Won't Resign.

Welland, June 28—W. M. German, M.P., in reply to a question of a correspondent yesterday, stated that he intended paying no attention to the challenge of J. F. G. Gross, an ex-M.P., made in the Liberal convention, in which he said: "If I were in his (German's) place, I would resign at once, and test the issue by running against reciprocity."

Mr. Gross, Mr. German, "I'll do it if the People wants me to."

Weather Forecasts For July Month

A reactionary storm period a central on the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th with the moon on the celestial equator, and at first quarter. By the second expect very marked rise in temperature, falling barometer, and vicious electrical storms in the western states. During the 3rd, and 4th, these storms will pass eastwardly over the country, preceded by excessive warmth. In eastern parts of the country, a hot wave and Fourth of July thunder storms should not surprise the people. In most sections west of the Mississippi river, storms will have passed eastward, leaving fair? and more pleasant weather.

A regular storm period comes the sixth to the 10th, with probably rain or snow preceding the full Moon on the 11th. The Venus influence is still dominant at this period, which fact may reasonably excite hopes of rain over many sections of the grain growing regions. We believe that a very serious lack of general rains will be upon very wide sections of the agricultural regions to the northwest, west and south, from the middle of July until late in September. Those who figure and plan to mature crops at the earliest possible part of the summer, will, we predict and advise, come out winners. A possible reaction to fair and cooler may come on and touching the 10th.

A reactionary storm period extends on the 12th, 13th and the 14th with possibility of threatening conditions holding over from the preceding storm period. Falling barometer, increase of temperature, with cloudiness and moderate rains, will be due on Wednesday the 12th to Friday the 14th, all followed by change to fair and cooler weather up to the 16th. Do not forget that all storms and weather changes progress from west to east; they do not strike the whole country at the same time or day. A seismic period is central on the 11th, affecting the 4th to the 18th.

A regular storm period begins on the 16th and extends to the 22nd. We prolong this period to the new moon on the 25th for the reason that storm periods are often drawn forward in their culmination by pending new moon dates. A probable storm crisis will fall on the 19th, 20th, and 21st, causing rain wind, and thunder, leaving high temperature and threatening conditions to continue over the 22rd.

A reactionary storm period falls on the 24th, 25th and 26th. This period falls at the centre of the mercury period, at the close of the Venus period, and at per moon, in perigee and at extreme north declination. Expect excessive warmth at this time, with low barometer and fierce thunder gusts. Squalls and local downpours will visit localities but far-reaching general rains are not indicated. Mercury circuitness, and moderate drizzle may touch most parts for several days, including much of the mercury period. A seismic period of very positive character extends from the 22nd to 26th, central on the 24th.

A regular storm period is in progress as July goes out. It is central on the 30th, at the crisis of the Mercury period, with the moon on the celestial equator.

This uniform success that has attended the use of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea remedy has made it a favorite everywhere. It can always be depended upon. For sale by all dealers.

PURIFIED HIS BLOOD

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Healed Mr. Wilson's Sores

When the sewers of the body—bowels, kidneys and skin ducts—get clogged up, the blood quickly becomes impure and frequently sores break out over the body. The way to heal them, as Mr. Richard Wilson, who lives near London, Ont., found, is to purify the blood. He writes:

"For some time I had been in a low, depressed condition. My appetite left me and I soon began to suffer from indigestion. Quite a number of small sores and blotches formed all over my skin. I tried medicine for the blood and used many kinds of ointments, but without satisfactory results. What was wanted was a thorough cleansing of the blood, and I looked about in vain for some medicine that would accomplish this.

At last Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills were brought to my notice, and they are one of the most wonderful medicines I have ever known. My blood was purified in a very short time, sores healed up, my indigestion vanished. They always have a place in my home and are looked upon as the family remedy."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cleanse the system thoroughly. Sold by all dealers at 25c a box. 6

SERGT. HENLEY'S INTERESTING LETTER
POST'S REPRESENTATIVE ON CONTINGENT

S.S. Empress of Ireland, June, 8—Under strict drill on board during this voyage, the contingent is in fine shape to do credit to the country they were sent to represent. The officers are very strict, yet the men are used well, and no complaints are heard. Every one is anxious to do his best, and the three representatives of the Post are no exception. Sea sickness was not very hard on them, and with only a slight attack the first couple of days the three Lindsay men were able to keep up with the rest, and in a good many ways were ahead of the average, only one man failing to parade during the voyage, and that through a sore arm caused by vaccination. That the 48th regiment has a name for itself throughout the country, is evident on this trip. The officers seem to take particularly close notice to the badges, which are without a doubt, one of the nicest in the contingent. The three plaid bands on the caps are also a distinguished feature, being the only caps in the Co., with a band of that nature. The Mc Kenzie plaid is worn as one of Sir Wm. Mackenzie, the honorary Col. of the regiment. On this account it is beyond the power of the officers to do away with them, and so they are the search light of the 48th in the Canadian contingent.

Tom Prestige and W. Mitchell are together in a cabin and I am with a fellow from Port Hope. We are all on the same deck and spend the evenings together in the best way possible under the circumstances. Concert parties and singing passes many an hour by pleasantly and the trip is thus not so monotonous as might otherwise be the case. Tom is the life of the party around his part of the ship, and has made quite a name for himself throughout the trip.

SPORTS ON THE TRIP.

A bad crate was handed out to the ship's passengers and crew the other night, when a jar like a collision with another vessel took place. But it was only a spill in cabin no. 611. Tom Prestige's berth slipped a cog and landed our friend on the floor. Some sixteen asleep woke round and was trying hard to swim across the floor.

The Captain of the Empress made himself a favorite with his passengers Wednesday night by furnishing a first class entertainment, consisting of moving pictures and gramaphone selections. Each and every evening the contingent holds an impromptu concert in the large dining saloon, with numbers furnished by the men.

A pleasing feature of the trip is the absence of rowdyism of any kind, and the men are true gentlemen all ways. No accidents or serious sickness is yet reported and it the good record only keeps till the end of the journey, the voyage to the old country will indeed be an ideal one.

Seasickness is a lunny thing, for a man feels like giving up everything in life and wants to crawl into the darkest hole he can find with nothing to bother him. We had a good laugh on Mitchell Sunday, when he offered a steward a dollar if he would put him in bed.

Two cowboys from the west, who are representing the Lord Strathcona Horse, light cavalry, are a source of much interest to the rest of the men. An exhibition of rope throwing and such stunts as are incident to a cowboy's life, amuse everyone. A

BORDEN OPENS CITY HALL IN BRANDON
CELEBRATE FIFTY-SEVENTH BIRTHDAY

Calgary, June 27.—The Conservative party celebrated his fifty-seventh birthday yesterday by addressing two audiences on reciprocity and by opening the new City Hall of this city with a golden key. Mr. Borden came up to Calgary from Lethbridge yesterday morning, and on his arrival here was presented with a civic address of welcome. A large number of citizens turned out and gave him an enthusiastic, though non-political reception. At the ceremony of the City Hall, the party was driven to Brandon the city, and then returned to High River, where he addressed a public meeting attended by about six hundred people.

The audience at High River consisted largely of the Reciprocity wing of the United Farmers of Alberta, who had arranged for a debate on the reciprocity question. An address was also presented to Mr. Borden at this place. It was couched in the same terms as that at the city, and was from the Provincial Secretary of the organization.

Speaking at Brandon, Mr. Borden frequency which has been rare during the tour. Of Mr. Perley, the first speaker, met with it when he was discussing the origin of the reciprocity agreement.

"We asked Laurier for it," came a voice from the crowd.

"Did you ask for reciprocity?" Mr. Perley asked back.

"We asked for free trade," was the reply.

"This is not free trade," replied Mr. Perley. "It is like climbing a ladder by beginning at the top."

MOONLIGHT WAS SPLENDID SUCCESS

From Tuesday's Post.

The moonlight excursion last evening per steamer Stoney Lake to Bobcaygeon Falls, in aid of the Central School Piano fund, attracted a large number and a most delightful outing was enjoyed. The committee in charge is to be congratulated on the success achieved.

Weak Stomachs Made Strong
Through Tonic Treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

After all has been said about indigestion and stomach trouble, there is only one way to get a real cure. The stomach must be made strong enough to do its own work. Indigestion disappears when the stomach has been made strong enough to digest ordinary plain food. This strength can only be given the stomach through the tonic treatment supplied by Dr. Williams Pink Pills, which enrich the blood, strengthen the nerves and consequently enable the stomach to perform the duties which nature intended it should. In every neighborhood you can find people who have been cured of indigestion or other stomach troubles after a fair use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and this is the best proof that they are the one remedy to successfully do this. Mr. D. B. McLean, Sterling, N.S., says:—"For a couple of years I suffered very much from indigestion with most of the symptoms accompanying painful symptoms. As a result I became very much run down, and as the medicine I tried did not give me any relief, I grew melancholy and unhappy, and felt as though my constitution was breaking down. Quite accidently my attention was called to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided to try them and I am happy to say that they effected a complete cure, and made my stomach as strong as any man's ever been. I am glad to say a few words in praise of the medicine that cured me, and I hope my experience will benefit some other sufferer.

Darken the blood and you banish most of the every day ailments of humanity, and you can enrich it quickest and best by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail, at 50c. a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Med cine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WAKELYS

From Morgan to Kaiser.

Kiel, Germany, June 27.—J. Pierpont Morgan yesterday presented Emperor William with the autograph letter written by Martin Luther to Emperor Charles V, and for which the American financier paid $25,000. His Majesty was immensely pleased and at once conferred the Grand Cross of the Order of the Red Eagle on Mr. Morgan.

The letter, which is in Latin, is of great historical importance. It was written in 1521, when Luther was on return journey from the Diet of Worms, and described the proceedings and defended his attitude. The Emperor reached Luxembourg safely, as its contents were such that no one dared deliver it.

C.P.R. Train Derailed.

Vancouver, June 27.—All the passenger cars of the Toronto train which left Vancouver at 8 o'clock Sunday morning, were derailed at six o'clock near Agassiz, about 70 miles from the short distance east of Ashcroft. The train was going slowly when the cars were overturned. Five passengers were slightly injured.

Fatal Fistol Duel.

Anderson, W. Va., June 27.—Foster Ridgeway was fatally wounded, and Wm. Ridgeway was shot through the leg when two men engaged in a pistol duel here yesterday afternoon. Fifteen shots were fired by each man. Both are members of prominent families.

Canadian Boys' Brides.

Recently two Canadian boys led to the altar prominent English ladies. The story of how Mr. Hamar Greenwood met his bride during the earthquake in Jamaica is well known, but it is not generally known that the other Canadian, Mr. Lionel Bryan of Toronto to the niece of Lord Parmoes grew out of a casual acquaintance made on board ship while crossing the Atlantic. The future Mrs. Bryan has literary tastes and naturally the two found many in common. It was not surprising that the friendship ripened into love.

When Mr. and Mrs. Bryan settle down in their town house in London, they will have as next door neighbor Lord Beresford. Across the street is the residence of Miss Melba.

QUITE A CLIMBER.

Sir Walter Gilbey Has a Reputation in the Swiss Mountains.

Sir Walter Gilbey has created his eightieth birthday at Elsenham Hall, Essex, surrounded by members of his family, grandchildren, and other relatives and friends. The village was gaily decorated with flags, and ringing on the church bells, and various entertainments were made on behalf of the tenantry, friends, and neighbors. Sir Walter is a long-established friend to say saying that a rolling stone gathers no moss, for he has gathered much moss and had tried many things, from a Cockatoo farm in Queensland to work in an estate agent's office to service in the Army Pay Department in the Crimea, before joining his brother in the modest wine and spirit venture, which his business-like methods have placed amongst the one of the most profitable concerns of its kind in the Kingdom.

Despite his age, Sir Walter is still wonderfully hale and hearty. This explained by his fondness for climbing in the open. He is still as keenly interested in the sport as he was a quarter of a century ago. It was he who was mainly responsible for the London Cartoonist Parade, an event which takes place in Switzerland. Sir Walter never fails to attend.

At Grindelwald, Sir Walter Gilbey presents a striking contrast to the average sportsman, merchant-prince and scientific expert. In dress he wears knickers bearing he still clings to the old-fashioned tweed, a Tyrolean shirt, with a small white cambric tie and a high-collared, with a buff waistcoat, and closely-fitting drab bowler hat, although he carries a leather and clubland. When out walking he invariably carries a long Tyrolean alpen-stock, and a little ash stick cut from the Alpine forests forms a record of ornament or lavrale.

In his early days Sir Walter used to devote some portion of every year to mountain climbing, and he has ever retained an intense interest in the sport. He was about to make an ascent when he was stopped in the night as well make some inquiries about the guide who was to accompany him.

"Is he a thoroughly skilled climber?" he asked his hotel-keeper.

"I should say he is," was the reply "He has lost two parties of tourists down the mountain within each time came off without so much as a scratch on himself."——

A General's Last Orden.

It is over a hundred years since General Mullet was shot for a conspiracy against Napoleon. The circumstances of his death dwelt in all. Dumas in "Shadows of Old Paris") were curious. He had asked that in consideration of his past services to the nation he might give the command to fire to the soldiers who were to execute him. "As they lifted their muskets to take aim the general's practiced eye discovered a want of unison in their movements, which he reproved, ordering them to start over. Proceeding to the wall thus retired on his lips he felt, pierced by the bullets of twenty muskets."

STARTLED THE BISHOP.

An Untimely Royal Letter and the Message It Conveyed.

One night at 3 o'clock the bishop of Orleans was roused by a report of a courier who had in hot haste brought a dispatch from his majesty Louis XV. The bishop imagined that something terrible had happened. Trembingly he opened the package and read:

"Monsieur the Bishop of Orleans—My daughters wish for some preserved Orleans quinces. Pray send some. If you have none I beg that you will—

In this part of the letter there was a drawing of a sedan chair, and underneath the chair the king's letter continued thus:

"Send immediately into your episcopal town and get them, and, monsieur the bishop, may God have you in his holy keeping. Louis."

Lower down on the page was this postscript:

"The sedan chair does not mean anything. It was drawn by my daughter on this sheet of paper, which I happened to find near me."

Greatly relieved, the bishop hurried to server into Orleans, procured the preserves and sent them to his royal highness.—Thomas R. Watson in "The Story of France."

District Attorney Accused.

Parker yesterday filed a bill of complaint in equity to honor the requisition of Governor Tener of Pennsylvania for the extradition of Blakely and Mellon. Blakely and Captain T. W. The Cableman

AN EXCITING PRESENT-DAY ROMANCE

BY

WEATHERBY CHESNEY

CHAPTER I.

A Message in Code

Horace Scarborough was sitting in front of the siphon-recorder in the Instrument Room of the cable station at Ribeira Grande. The faint whisper of electrical apparatus was round him, and the afternoon sun shone on the Azores and crept into the room and chilled the air. He had been on duty for nearly eight hours, but though he was tired, he was hardly conscious of the fact, for the strain of watching for a message, extended but now delayed, had braced his nerves and driven away all thought of fatigue.

The message for which Scarborough was watching meant peace or war, amongst the nations of the world.

For International crises had reached a crisis. A certain diplomatic "note" had been presented, and the answer was expected hourly. If the issue were peace, the public would probably never know that there had been a crisis at all. But the servants of the great cable companies necessarily have greater and earlier knowledge than the rest of mankind; and it is by no means the fact, as many suppose, that the most important news always passes through their hands in unintelligible cipher. Diplomacy is a shy monster, hunting by tortuous paths, and loves to shroud her tracks in obscurity; but sometimes even diplomacy spoak out, and when they do, their words are apt to be momentous.

In every Chancellery of the world anxious men were waiting for the answer, which an Imperial courier was bearing post haste to the court of St. James's.

Scarborough glanced for the fifteenth time at the ribbon of paper which came from the siphon-recorder, and saw that it remained a blank straight line. Nothing was passing over the cable just now.

He dropped his chin on his hand, and stared at the instrument as though by staring he could force the news from it. There was no hint of impatience in the attitude or movement, rather on a strong patience that would be likely to win its way in life by meeting adversity with a square front, and taking what wearing it down. He was about twenty-five. The lines on his face were deep for a man of his years: but they were lines graven by character, not by dissipation—by a grave habit of thought, rather than by any knowledge of suffering in the past. He looked like a man who might take life hardly, because he would shirk none of its responsibilities; who would fight, if he had to fight, bravely and vindictively, but who, as yet, had been called upon to show the grit that was in him. When an animal—or man was often—the lines vanished, and showed the face of a strong, good-humored boy.

But though his nerves were tense with excitement now, he had not been able to inform him his own apprentice, the man who was on duty with him. A luxuriously elaborate yawn, from a wicked-looking Italian, echoed round the walls of the Instrument Room, and caused the dark smile to move itself on Scarborough's face. Scott, the man in the cradle, was supposed to be sharing his watch; but he was one of those who take life easily, and his method was to read a French novel in a big chair until Scarborough should tell him the word that the instrument were waiting, then he would rise slowly, stretch himself, and take his share of the work.

"What a disappointing beggar you are," said Scarborough. "Enormous issues are being decided, and the news may come at any minute, and I don't believe you've even interested in it."

"Right: I'm not," Scott answered cheerfully. "I'm on for politics. Don't understand 'em, you see. Don't fathom what they're in for, anyhow.

"A European war is generally counted a pretty important thing," said Scarborough.

"Oh, yes, if it comes off!" said Scott. "Well, I'm all of something lively eating. Going to the circus?"

Scarborough laughed.

"What circus?" he asked.

"There you are!" said Scott triumphantly. "You're just as ignorant as I am, in your own way. My ignorance embraces European politics—an admirable unsavory mouse; yours concerns the things that happen in place under your nose. What circus? Val B. Montague's American Circus Combination, of course. The whole island of Terceira is plastered with the pictures of beautiful ladies on bare-backed steeds, balancing at extraordinary angles. It's the most exciting show that ever went in the island for a year. I went across to Ponta Delgada to see it yesterday."

"Oh? Good show?" asked Scarborough carelessly, keeping his eyes fixed on the ribbon of paper which came from the siphon-recorder.

"Pretty fair!" said Scott, whose nerves had bored him, and made him want to talk, even though he failed to interest. "There's a nice little girl who rails herself Mademoiselle Mona de la Mer, and does the bareback business—not like the pictures, but decently enough, and there's a very English-looking cowboy who shoots glass balls and things with very moderate success. I'm a bad shot myself, and when they miss, I'm as good as any one. Oh, the whole show was fearfully amusing."

"What does he do?" Scarborough asked next.

"Nothing in the ring. But he runs the whole show one-he-less and, preserves breaches of the peace amongst the troupe. Now, you pick that, I guess, when I've been touring the Atlantic Islands and the West Coast of Africa for a year and a half in a two-hundred-ton schooner, and the clown hasn't murdered the ring-master yet, though Val B. seems to be very much inclined to offer odds that he will very soon. Five fellows, Val B. Took my whisky and soda with the air of conferring a favor, and I wish he was grateful—pleased to say that he would come over here on Tuesday to have supper with me, if his children can't what he calls the troupe—did not need him. I fancy he is nervous about the clown and the ring-master."

"What's the trouble between them?" asked Scarborough, more for the sake of continuing the conversation than because he cared. "Is it Mademoiselle Mona?"

"No," said Scott. "I understood that it was merely a case of professional jealousy. They've been boxed up together on that schooner for eighteen months, you see, with nothing to do but sea except quarrel, and nothing to interest them in the show they drive when they're ashore. Come over with me tonight, and make Val B. Montague's acquaintance."

Scarborough did not answer. A message was coming through at last. The ribbon of paper from the siphon-record showed an irregular, wavy line now and a dot and dash, as the waves in the hills and valleys of the horse code as the instrument passed in through. "Page: Grand Hotel, Ribeira Grande. Danger—circus."

"That was all. It was obviously not the message for which he was waiting; nor was it, at first sight, anything interesting or intelligible, unless one happened to know, as did the few who knew those two words "danger—circus" were to be interpreted. Scarborough did not know the code; and yet, because of the interest to him of the message, the cableman interested him profoundly. He had to try to force some sort of sense which its arrival would presently make to him. his interest would perhaps have been even greater.

"Anything?" asked Scott lethargy.

"Private message in code," said Scarborough, and Scott returned to his chair with a grunt.

Scarborough sent the message through to the Post Office or delivery, and then rose and went to the window. Ribeira Grande is a little place, with one about a mile away a white-washed village of Ponta Delgada, and the vast masses of grey volcanic stone that tropical vegetation struggles with and green hill. The two rocks were called, in Portuguese, As Chiveias,—the silly-looking donkeys—because, we know ever very striking, which they were supposed to bear a close resemblance to, the down-at-heel slippers. The white-washed house took in a wide sweep of them.

It had been in the possession for the last two years, of an Englishman, who, having made his fortune in the Azores as an idle seeking for health, had not found it in the place which he sought, but had stayed, because the place had suited him. His daughter kept house for him at the Chiveias; and in this face was the explanation of Scarborough's interest in the message which had just passed through his hands.

Scott broke suddenly into his meditations.

"You haven't said whether you'll go with me to the circus tonight," he remarked. He did not believe in leaving matters of real importance unsettled.

Scarborough started. The cablegram had coupled the word circus and danger. A coincidence, of course. It was surely impossible that it should be anything else, and yet Scarborough felt a sudden misgiving. Was danger coming to Elsa Pane? Oh, nonsense! code messages often combine words curiously. It was nothing but a fine queer coincidence.

"Can't," he said. "I've promised to play chess with Mr. Page tonight."

Scott pursed up his lips, and looked at his friend doubtfully.

"Oh, all work and no play Chiveias!" he remarked slowly. "Do you care much for chess?"

"Loathe it!" admitted Scarborough, with a laugh.

"Why go tonight. And yet you play at the Chiveias every second night, or so, nights. Why go tonight?"

"What do you mean?"

"Why, You know your own business best, of course. Miss Page is a pretty girl, pretty too, but—Well, I know off."

"But what?" demanded Scarborough, with a quick flash of anger. "Do you mean Miss Page?"

"No," said Scott. "I believe she's as good a girl as you think a very English-looking cowboy who shoots glass balls and things with very moderate success. Hain't a bad show though, on the whole, and Val B. Montague is beautiful."

"What does he do?" Scarborough asked next.

"Nothing in the ring. But he runs the whole show one-he-less and, preventa breaches of the peace amongst the troupe. Now, you pick that, I guess, when I've been touring the Atlantic Islands and the West Coast of Africa for a year and a half in a two-hundred-ton schooner, and the clown hasn't murdered the ring-master yet, though Val B. seems to be very much inclined to offer odds that he will very soon. MILLERS MERGE.

Union of Western Ontario Companies A New Announced.

Guelph, June 28—Another big merger has been formed. The latest capsule of a union of the various milling companies scattered throughout western Ontario. The stated object is to secure, if possible, a larger share of the export trade, and to do away with overlapping of orders. Six companies are interested, being the only players of mills situated in Chatham, Blenheim, St. Mary's, Stratford, the John Campbell Milling Co., with two mills at St. Thomas, and the Goldie Milling Co. of this city.

When interviewed yesterday, the officials of the Goldie Milling Co. stated that the matter has been under process of formation for some time past, and that the arrangements were concluded at a meeting of the millers, held at Toronto on Monday. The capital has not yet been announced, but it will be large. The merger will not affect the output of the Goldie Milling Co., for some time at least, and the mill will be kept idle. It may mean, however, that some of those who have been at the head of the Goldie Milling Co. for many years, will retire from active participation in the business, and will allow the younger men to have the control.

Value of New Ideas.

Some large business firms employ a man whose sole duty it is to read every trade journal, every technical paper or pamphlet and every magazine in order to get new ideas about the conduct of their business. Such information is laid each day before the heads of the various departments, who in turn pass it down the line to men further down and see that the new idea is tested. By this method each worker is kept in touch with what other men who are doing the same business, and his personal efficiency is increased. Almost everything can be done in a manner a little better than the present way, and modern business demands to know and practice the best. Dioggenes carried around a cup to drink water out of the one he saw a dog lapping water with his tongue. He threw away his cup and afterward drank water out of the palm of his hand. He got from the dog a new idea.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Gold That Blackens.

Blackening of skin and shirt fronts by the rubbed off gold is a matter of common complaint by jewelers when their customers come back, claiming they have bought brass. The skin on the neck as well as on the fingers is frequently discolored by fourteen carat gold, and, some say, pure gold. An expert says that even in the case of pure gold this coloration of the skin is not due to any particular properties of the metal, but, rather, to the result of chemical changes in the body or, rather, in the perspiration and natural oil of the skin.—Exchange.

Globe Trotters Plus.

A number of tourists were recently looking down the crater of Vesuvius. An American gentleman said to his companion:

"This looks a good deal like the infernal regions."

An English lady, overhearing the remark, said to another:

"Good gracious, how these Americans do travel!"—Lippincott's.

Precise.

"I jump up and down when I'm hungry," declared the small girl from New York, and, according to the Louisville Courier-Journal, the Boston child looked at her severely and replied:

"I can imagine your jumping up, but I should think the proper gravitation must be appreciable for the alternating cause."

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, June 27.—Disclosure of an unusually large short interest in July wheat gave a boost to-day to market as a whole. Prices received spirited support from the big owners of the contracts issued here in consequence of the figures here. July closed 3c higher than yesterday, after a rise of 4 cents at one time, and onto a rise of 4 to 5½ to 1½. The outcome in hogs produces was traced from the greater cost to the decline.

The Liverpool market closed to-day 3d lower to 3d higher on wheat, and 3d to 6d higher on corn, compared with yesterday. Berlin closed ½d lower on wheat. Shakspeare Mc Sigbee

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, June 27.—There was an increased inquiry from European sources for Manitoba spring wheat for July shipment, but as the prices asked for it were all from 2c to 3c per bushel out of line no business was done. The foreign demand for oats also showed some improvement, but there were sharp advances in prices in the Winnipeg market this week too low. The tone of the market was very strong for oats, sellers were asking an advance of 4c per bushel, but the demand was slight. American is a trifle cheap in cargo lots offoat here now and Canadian is not in sufficient supply to meet the requirements of buyers for spring wheat. Flour was better, and the tone of the market for wheat grades were 3d 2d back below sellers' views.

FIRST TRANSCONTINENTAL C. P. R. TRAIN

To-day the figures are for passengers 1.93 cents per mile and for freight 0.300 cents per ton per mile. A comparison of the equipment now and 10 years ago shows how the company has kept pace with the requirements of the traffic.

	1866	1913
Locomotives	372	1,629
First and second class passenger cars, baggage and colonist and baggage cars	364	1,757
First-class sleeping and dining cars	47	311
Parlor, official and paymasters car	27	63
Freight and cattle cars	8,253	50,863
Conductors vans	178	880
Boarding, tool and auxiliary cars	71	3,684

Still more marked is the increase in the marine department. In 1866 the C. P. R. fleet consisted of two steamers on the Great Lakes. To-day it has white checkered house flag floats over sixteen Atlantic liners, four Pacific liners, twenty-two on the Great Pacific coast service, five on the Great Lakes service, twenty-two on the Atlantic coast service, twenty-three on the two in the ferry service on the Detroit River—a total of 71 vessels—and this number will be increased by the building of several new steamships for the ocean service and by the acquisition of the Dominion Atlantic Railway and steamship service.

There seems to be no finality to the company's work. In addition to the large original cost of the railway and equipment mentioned, millions of dollars have been expended on improvements such as double tracking, reduction of grades, curves eliminated replacing wooden bridges with steel structures, erecting new stations and enlarging old ones, laying the policy of extending branch lines wherever needed is still being vigorously pursued.

In one way only has the C. P. R. remained "as it was," and that is in the retention of the services of officials and employees. It is practically manned to-day as it was manned a quarter of a century ago, with, of course, the addition of the many thousands required to operate the present day road. The total number employed now reaches 80,000 and these are stationed in almost every civilized country on the face of the earth. There was no pension fund in 1866, for none was needed. To-day there are over 500 of the old faithful employees on the pension roll, none of whom receive less than $20 a month—a positive contradiction of the statement regarding that corporations have no souls.

All this shows that the Canadian Pacific is, as is stated, more than a transportation company in the generally accepted sense of the term. It is an Empire builder and its name will ever be remembered as the creator of Western Canada and a great developing factor wherever its lines penetrate.

FREIGHT TRAIN STRIKES STREET CAR BADLY COLLISION AT LONDON, ONT.

London, Ont., June 28—Timothy O'Leary, a watchman, was killed, McNutt, a B. Farey injured, ten passengers badly frightened and three freight cars were wrecked across the tracks, obstructing traffic for several hours, as the result of a collision between a street car and a freight train at Rectory street and Grosvenor street crossing last night.

Watchman O'Leary had thrown the derail for the car to cross the tracks. A freight train backing down a siding failed to stop on signal and crashed into the front end of the car.

The car was thrown entirely around but remained in an upright position, allowing the frightened passengers to escape. The caboose of the freight train left the rails, striking the county in which O'Leary was sitting. O'Leary was crushed to death under the wreck, which proved the sharp to pieces. The caboose then struck a third car, knocking two other cars, which were piled in a pyramid on the tracks.

Motorman Farey jumped just in time to save himself from being crushed in the vestibule of his car, which was broken to splinters. He struck the track with his left leg dreadfully mangled. On examination, it was found that several muscles had torn. Aside from a few minor bruises and bruises none of the passengers were injured.

AFTER TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience: "I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the NEW METHOD TREATMENT and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

VERDICT OF THE JURY AT OAKWOOD THE CAUSE OF MRS. WM. COAD'S DEATH

The inquest into the death of Mrs. Wm. Coad was held at Oakwood Wednesday afternoon before Dr. Blanchard, coroner for Victoria county.

Mr. Wm. Coad on being called, said that he was driving a four year old horse, and Mr. Webster was about a rod ahead of him. Mr. Coad said his horse was restive, when another horse was passing, but that he usually quieted down in a few minutes. Mr. Grahsm turned out to the left and there was six or eight feet between his rig and mine. Mr. Graham was up to Mr. Webster before my horse attempted to get away. The horse became unmanageable, and when he came up on the right. Mr. Graham rig, he came outside of the hind wheels with the thaft on the inside. When Mr. Coad's horse got free it went into the ditch. Mr. Coad, fell out. The horse ran on about 20 rods when Mrs. Coad fell or jumped out. Miss N. Coad jumped from the rig.

Mrs. Jas. Webster whose husband was fatally injured in the accident, said that the first she knew of there being any trouble was when Mr. Coad's horse came in contact with their buggy. Mr. Coad's horse came up on the right. Mr. Graham had just passed on the left, there being a distance of about 8 feet between his buggy and Mr. Webster's. Mr. Webster's rig was turned over to such an extent that he fell out. Mrs. Webster hung onto the buggy which righted itself when Mr. Coad's horse got free. Mrs. Webster stopped their own horse. When Mrs. Webster returned to the scene of the accident she found her husband seriously injured. Mr. Webster apparently had been under the feet of Mr. Coad's horse.

Mr. Geo. Graham on being called said that he heard some shouting after passing the two rigs but thinking it was some boys he drove on home. He had no, knowledge of anything serious having happened. Nothing was said to him of Mr. Webster's injury.

Dr. Brown said he was called by telephone and that when he arrived Mrs. Coad had been dead thirty minutes. Her death wae caused by a fracture of the base of the skull.

Miss Nellie Coad, on being called corroborated the evidence of her father. She jumped out of the rig, after her mother fell or jumped out.

The other witness examined were Messrs Geo. Martindale, Jas. B. Webster, Samuel Brass, Stephen Clare, Jas. Bruce, David Trumble.

The jury was as follows: Edgar Lytle, (foreman) Geo. Dean, Rich. A. Tretheway, E. R. Rogers, Thos. J. Webster, John W. Hancock, D. Rogers, Chas. Jenkins, Wm. Rich, Oscar Wakely, David Dundas and F. Brass.

The verdict of the jury was as follows:

"The said Mrs. Wm. Coad, came to her death, purely accidental, by being mixed up in a runaway, and thrown from a buggy on Sunday, June 18, 1911, on the public road immediately east of the village of Oakwood. We wish to express our disapproval of the conduct of Mr. Geo. Graham, after the accident in not rendering assistance.

BOARD OF TRADE AND CITIZENS ASK POSTPONEMENT OF POWER BYLAW VOTE

The following is the resolution passed last night at the meeting of the Board of Trade and citizens: "That this meeting of the Board of Trade and citizens, after discussion are of the opinion that it will be in the interests of the citizens that the vote on the bylaw now before the ratepayers be postponed, and that steps be taken to secure from every available source the volume of power available on waters tributary to the present power plant at Fenelon Falls, and the cost of making it available, and also secure all possible information as to the alternate plan of giving franchise to the Central Ontario Power Co., and entering into a contract with that corporation, for electric energy for Lindsay's needs and that the information obtained will be placed before the electors."

The above resolution was moved by William Flavelle, seconded by D. Cinnamon, and endorsed by nearly all the speakers.

The meeting held last night in the council chamber by the Board of Trade, and to which the citizens were invited to discuss the power bylaw was not as largely attended as it should have been, considering the importance of the question under discussion.

WM. FLAVELLE.

was the first speaker. He thought the more the proposition was discussed, the more likely it would be to carry, so he therefore made the motion.

on rising to second the motion said that he thought the people needed more information. If the purchase of the local company is a good thing for an outside company, why is it not a good thing for the town? If the Seymour Co., buys the local plant, we are the people they will sell power to, and they will charge enough to make it pay.

R. KYLIE.

said he agreed with Wm. Flavelle, and D. Cinnamon in saying that if the proposition was a good one it would not lose by waiting. We have the dry season coming on now. Why not wait and see the plant at low water. Have north powers investigated. Other powers around are being developed, and if we don't get our share now we never will.

J. B. BEGG.

said the longer the bylaw was put off the more trouble they would experience in carrying it.

disagreed. He thought if the proposition was good it would not suffer by waiting.

ALEX HORN.

said the people ought to understand the proposition better. It is a matter for engineers to investigate. Some people are contrasting what old settlers say about the water with what the engineer's report. I would accept the engineer's report. Mr. Horn could not understand what Lindsay was going to do with surplus power.

W. B. SPARLING.

said the motion appealed to him very strongly. What interested him most, was the amount he could save on his light bill.

B. L. McLEAN.

thought by waiting they would dampen the ardour of the people. We will habe no more information now, than in September.

WM FLAVELLE.

spoke again explaining the amount of horse power, capable of being developed, and the profits from the local plant. If we could get market we could develop 1000 horse power more and thus make more money on cut rates. The situation of the Fenelon power is unique lying as it is between two lakes. If we could get the plant into our own hands, it would do more to increase happiness and prosperity than anything we could do for Lindsay.

R. KYLIE.

spoke again saying that we had two months in which to investigate and satisfy the people as to the fact that power was there. Mr. Horn says Lindsay may got grow. A town is not worth two cents that does not make provision for future. It will cost nothing to investigate and see how much power there is in the north country.

J. B. BEGG.

said he believed there was lots of power, but what would it cost to bring it here?

WM. FLAVELLE

thought we should buy the local plant and then deal with the Seymour Co.

JAS. GRAHAM.

said the town would lose an opportunity if it did not purchase the local plant. The people think the purchase price is too big. Some of the papers say the people will not be taxed to pay for plant. Mr. Graham thought more time for investigation should be given.

B. L. McLEAN.

raised the question of the management of the plant if the bylaw carried. He favored a commission elected by the people.

DR. WOOD.

said the people were alarmed by the adverse criticism to the bylaw. He thought it would be unfortunate if the bylaw was turned down. Electric power is needed more and more.

JOS. STAPLES.

said there were two propositions— to purchase local plant or grant a franchise to the Seymour Power Co. We should take time to look into them both, and then we will be in a position to judge wisely. The information should be given to the people in pamphlet form.

JAS. GRAHAM.

thought it would be well to avoid technical language in the report.

WM. FEE.

thought it would be well to postpone the vote and secure more in-thought it would be wise to postpone the vote, and secure more information. Mr. Beal said he could not understand why Mr. Kylie advocated the purchase of the local plant two years ago, and now turn dead against it. (Kylie "No.") He said that one of the papers published that it would take $70,000 to repair the plant. Mr. Beal said this was not the case—it would take $70,000 to double the capacity of the present dlant. (On referring to the Hydro Electric report we find that it will take $70,000 to IMPROVE and douqle the capacity of the plant.)

There was some discussion as to the management of the plant should the bylaw carry. The following resolution moved by B. L. McLean, and seconded by Joseph Staples was carried. "That this meeting express its approval of managing the new plant, (should the bylaw carry) by a commission elected by the people.

BUTCHER WAS CRUELLY MURDERED

(Special to the Post.)

Biddeford, Maine, June 24.—On the strength of information given to the York county authorities in support of an allegation that Charles Weymouth, a Saco butcher, who disappeared in September, 1908, was murdered, the sheriff arrested Joseph Buzzell, of Dayton; Olney Merrill, of Gardiner, and Mrs. Maude Snow, of Dayton, yesterday. All three were taken to Alfred, the two men to answer to charges of murder and the woman to a charge of having been an accessory to the alleged crime.

The authorities announced the information had been obtained from two persons, whose names they withheld, and who claimed to have seen Weymouth beaten to death at Mrs. Snow's home. According to their story as given out by the sheriff, Weymouth's body was then placed in a box and buried. Officers yesterday went to the alleged place of burial, near the Snow home in Dayton, to endeavor to locate the body.

EIGHT YEAR OLD TRIES SUICIDE

Montreal, June 24.—A boy named Scravini, eight years old, presented a pitiful sight in the dock before Judge Leeton on a charge of attempted suicide yesterday. He has only been here a few weeks and tells a story of a search for work, which proved unavailing. He jumped off the Allan Line dock to end it all, but the captain of a barge pulled him out. He has been remanded until the 26th, and an attempt to secure his a position will be made.

On Coronation Day, Bobcaygeon, was en fete, the occasion being the annual picnic of the combined parishes of Galway, Kinmount and Fenelon Falls and Bobcaygeon, of which Rev. Father Galvin is the popular pastor.

It was the most successful picnic ever held in that village, or in the district for that matter and was attended by hundreds from all points of the compass. Lindsay's quota was nearly five hundred, over three hundred going to the village per C.P.R. while others drove or went by boat.

Ideal King's weather prevailed during to say, and the picnickers spent a most enjoyable day. The affair was held in the Agricultural grounds and from early morning until late at night there was one round of enjoyment. Splendid committees had the different details in hand and everything was carried out with commendable precision. The Bobcaygeon brass band, a splendid musical organization was present during the day and was most liberal in providing music. Refreshment booths also dotted the grounds where temperance beverages were dispensed. The dancing platform was the centre of attraction for the young people, and many older heads, too, who renewed thier youth by tripping the light fantastic to excellent music.

The feature of the picnic, however, was the excellent meals provided by the ladies. They were fit for royalty the tables fairly groaning under the weight of good things provided. The ladies are to be congratulated on the bountiful spread prepared.

During the afternoon a splendid programme of athletic events was pulled off, the different items being keenly contested.

Rev. Father Galvin was most assiduous in his efforts to see that everyone enjoyed the day and received splendid assistance from splendid committees from each parish. Everything passed off without a hitch and there was nothing occurred to mar the loyal observance of the day.

Among the Clergy present were:— Venerable Archdeacon Casey and Rev. Father Guiry, Peterboro, Rev Father McGuire, Downeyville, Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, Ennismore and Rev. Father Galvin, of Kinmount.

MR. JAS. WEBSTER SUCCUMBS TO INJURIES SECOND VICTIM OF RUNAWAY ACCIDENT

Death claimed another victim of Sunday's unfortunate runaway accident at Oakwood in the person of James Webster, who was called to his eternal home yesterday afternoon.

The deceased gentleman, it will be remembered, was seriously injured in the accident, and although hopes were entertained at one period that he would recover, he gradually grew weaker, until death claimed him.

The late Mr. Webster, who was in his fifty-sixth year, was a highly respected resident of Mariposa township, and was held in high esteem throughout the district. He is survived by his sorrowing wife, and three sons and one daughter: Arthur, of Mariposa, Charles, of Kerr Robert, Sask., and Mila at home. A brother, George Webster, resides at Mariposa, and his sisters, are Mrs. S. Grandy, Omemee; Mrs. Wm. Thexton, Millbrook; and Miss Margaret, Oakwood. A half brother of the deceased, John Webster, resides in Montreal, and he also has two half brothers, Thomas, and Samuel D. Webster.

In religion, Mr. Webster, was a Methodist, and his funeral will take place at 2 o'clock on Sunday to the East Oakwood cemetery.

NOT THE PARTIES REFERRED TO

In Tuesday's issue of the Post, an item appeared from a correspondent who lives some miles from Pleasant Point proper referring to a party of men who were alleged to be drunk and disorderly on Sunday. A representative of the Post met the gentlemen, who believe they are the ones referred to and their conditioo and conduct would not warrant such a report, should they be the ones the correspondent had in mind. They are strangers and feel very keenly over such a report being circulated. The Post is glad to be in a position to certify to the excellence of their reputation.

IMPORTANT CHANGE AT POST OFFICE

Deputy Postmaster A. Hales, has received notice from the Post Office Department of Ottawa, to the effect that the lobby of the local post office will be open at seven o'clock each morning, and remain open until 10 o'clock, instead of nine.

This change, which has been brought about, through a suggestion of a gentleman, a resident of the Post, will be hailed with pleasure by our citizens.

LINDSAY AND THE POWER QUESTION

Mr. Geo. Martin, of Fenelon Falls one of the oldest and most experienced lumber men in this district, in conversation with a representative of the Post Thursday, said he had no interest in whether Lindsay bought Fenelon Falls power or not, but he was confident that if the citizens of Lindsay expected to get more than 1000 horsepower of Fenelon Falls share, they would be sadly mistaken. In his experience of over fifty years, as a - councillor, lumberman, and as an employee of the Smith estate, he was thoroughly conversant with the Fenelon Falls development. He said he had been one of a deputation one season to wait on the Government to induce them to consent to allow the Howry Lumber Company to use the water after it had gone down so to interfere with navigation. There had been many seasons during his experience when the amount of power developed during the dry season, had been very small. He thought Lindsay would be wise to first have a careful measurement of the water during the entire season to find out positively what power they were likely to obtain and not get bitten as some have done by contracting to deliver more power than the plant was able to produce. He thought that the estimate given by Mr. Elliott Greenshields should not been given proper consideration They would have found their figures entirely wrong, and they looked into the matter more carefully.

In early life, he followed the industry of farming, and in 1858, he was married to Miss H. Scully of Emily, who predeceased him two years ago. MRS. ROBT. COURTNEY

Omemee, June 21.—A month of sorrow hangs over our village, occasioned by the sudden death of Mrs. Robt. Courtney on Friday evening. Mrs. Courtney seemed to be in her usual health until Wednesday morning, although she has not been as well as could have been wished for some time past. On Tuesday at the marriage of her daughter, she seemed to be in her usual bright spirits and kept up bravely at the time of parting. On Wednesday she got up as usual and prepared the breakfast, but acted rather strange, and on complaining of feeling tired, was persuaded to lie down. A very short time afterwards she was found to be unconscious, and remained in that state, her death. Medical help was summoned, and a consultation was held, but she never recovered consciousness. The sad news of her mother's illness was sent to Mrs. Horner, and fortunately she and her husband had not left Toronto, so returned on Wednesday evening. The funeral service took place at her residence on Sunday at 1 p.m. and interment was made at Dunsford. The greatest sympathy is felt for the bereaved husband, and children in their sad loss.

J.F.H. BRYSON

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. James Bryson, who are at present in the west, will regret to hear of the death of their son, Herbert, in Winnipeg. An exchange says:—

He is survived by a widow and mother and father, who have arrived in Calgary from Lindsay, Ontario, and by a brother Milton, of New York. The funeral arrangements are in the hands of Shannon.

"The funeral will be held Monday, at 2.30 p.m. from the family residence, Corydon Avenue, and the members of the Union and Commercial travellers will attend in a body. "One of your travellers called on me when I had one of my raging headaches and had my head almost raw from external applications.

"I had to use any person coming into the store (much less a commercial traveller) and I told him very candidly that I had a headache but he insisted on my trying 'Frutis-a-tives'.

"I did so, with what I would call amazing results. They completely cured me and since then I usually (six months ago) it is only necessary for me to take one occasionally to preserve me in my present good health. the Department of Railways and Canals, operated at "Yankee Bonnet." This morning the tug in connection with the plant left the dredge "Little Lake" with a scow load of dredgings to be dumped at Robinson's Island. Everything went well until the return trip. Costello was in his usual position, at the stern of the scow. The Captain of the tug, Harry Douglas, as was his custom, kept looking to see that the scow was towing all right, and in one of these backward glances, was shocked to find that Costello was not on the scow. Almost at the same instant he saw his head appear above the water in the wake of the scow, and that was the last seen of the unfortunate man. The tug was stopped, but Costello had disappeared before there was any possible chance of rendering him any assistance.

How the accident happened no one knows. Whether he was seized with a sudden attack of dizziness or heart failure, or whether he stumbled over something will never be known.

Mr. J. H. McClellan, the Superintendent of the Canal was notified at once, and the dredging operations were immediately suspended, while the entire staff of the dredge plant proceeded to grapple for the body, which at the time of going to press had not been recovered.

HYMENEAL

O'CONNELL—DIAMENT.

St. Mary's church, Lindsay, was the scene of a very pretty and quiet wedding, when Mr. Jos. D. O'Connell, of Victoria, B.C., was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Elizabeth Maud, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Diament Melbourne-st. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Archdeacon Casey.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was gowned in embroidered Swiss muslin, and wore a wreath and veil. She carried an ivory prayerbook. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Margaret Diament, of Chicago, who was gowned in white eyelet embroidery, and wore a white picture hat with yellow plumes. She carried a bouquet of carnations and lily of the valley.

Only immediate friends of the family were present. The wedding breakfast was presided over by the Misses Killen, Byker, Woods, O'Reilly and Primeau. The house was beautifully decorated with palms, ferns and carnations.

The young couple left on the 10.55 train for Toronto, where they took the Ontario, Richelieu trip by the St. Lawrence River for Montreal, and also New York, for a ten days trip.

The bride's going away gown was emerald green silk, and large picture hat with plumes. The bride's presents were many and beautiful, showing the high esteem in which she was held by her many friends.

A unique gift was received by the bride from her cousin, Mr. J. D. Hutton, Strathcona, Alta., in the shape of a gold nugget in a pin which had been panned by him 13 years ago in the Peace River District. The groomsie gift to the bride was a cabinet of pearls, and to the brides' maid an emerald, and pearl ring. The wedding march was played by Miss Mary Brady, playing the signing of the register, Miss Mary Fleury sang "Because." The ushers were Messrs Harold McHugh and Leo Rogers. On their return trip they will visit Lindsay before leaving for their future home in Victoria, B.C. Among the out of town guests were Mrs. Jos. A. Gould, Miss Margaret and J. J. Fitzpatrick, of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Brady, Brechin, Mr. John Kylie, and Mr. Frank Hurley, Petetborough.

The bride is one of the most popular young ladies of St. Mary's congregation, while the groom, who is an old Lindsay boy, is a rising young merchant, of Victoria, B.C., being a member of the firm of Fitzpatrick and O'Connell.

The Post joins with a host of friends in wishing them years of connubial bliss.

ANGLICAN BISHOP WAS CONSECRATED

Hamilton, June 26.—Ven. William Clark, M.A., was consecrated Anglican Bishop of Niagara, in Christ Church Cathedral here Saturday morning. The ceremony was conducted by Archbishop Sweatman, and was very impressive. The consecration sermon was preached by the Archbishop of Ontario, Toronto and Algoma, Rev. Canon Abbott and a large number of the clergy of the diocese. The cathedral was well filled. A special train was chartered.

The consecration service began at 11 o'clock, when the Archbishop of Ottawa, the bishops, their chaplains, and the clergy, all fully robed, entered the cathedral to the strains of the processional hymn. The communion service was administered by the Archbishop of Ottawa, and the presentation of the epistle by the Lord Bishop of Huron. The gospel was read by the Lord Bishop of Algoma.

KNIGHTS OF MALTA AT ST. KITTS

St. Catharines, June 26.—St. Catharines Chapter General of the Knights of Malta in Canada, opened its annual session here yesterday. There were a large number of delegates from Toronto, Hamilton, London and St. Catharines. The session was held in the Knights of Malta Hall and Grand Master B. Colelli, Toronto, presided. Other officers in attendance were C. Ferguson, Toronto, Lieutenant; Alex Johnson, West Toronto, grand pilot; Dr. Burns, East Toronto, grand capitain; Dr. Harvey, Toronto, grand chancellor.

The principal business on Saturday was consideration of amendments to the constitution.

Yesterday at 11 o'clock Sir Knights paraded at the Presbyterian church, where special services were held and a sermon preached by Rev. de la Ross.

A Generous Gift.

St. Catharines, June 26.—H. E. McCoy, manager of the St. Catharines General and Marine Hospital, has received a letter accompanied by a check for $1,000 from David D. Mills, of St. Catharines' old boy, who has recently been visiting his native city. The money is to be added to the proceeds of the fair of the nurses, which will take place in this week. The memories fore in aid of the hospital.

DEAD SOLDIERS WERE HONORED

Niagara-on-the-Lake, June 26.—An event of great historical interest took place yesterday morning when Brig. Gen. W. H. Cotton and his staff, with an escort of soldiers from the camp and the Canadian Army Service Corps band, crossed the river to participate in the burial of the bones of the four soldiers of the 49th Regiment of Infantry unearthed at Fort Niagara.

The Regular and Militia troops stationed at the fort, the 29th U. S. Infantry, turned out under command of Major Henry D. Styer, the post commandant. At 11 o'clock the columns marched off with the C.A.S.C. band at the head, followed by the American Infantry and the Canadian non-commissioned officers. Gen. Cotton with his staff and escort brought up the rear.

Halting in front of the fort chapel, the bones of the four soldiers were brought out in a wooden casket on the shoulders of six stalwart U. S. sergeants, according to the doleful dirge of the Dead March the cortege proceeded to the old military cemetery just outside of the walls of the fort, where graves were laid for the four French, where the casket was slowly lowered into the grave.

The service was held by Rev. M. Capp of the Ninth Regiment, assisted by Rev. S. H. Wood, chaplain at Fort Niagara, and Capt. Baynes-Reed, chaplain of the 9th Mississauga Horse. After the burial service was read a firing party from the 29th U. S. Infantry fired three volleys over the grave, and four Canadian bugers, Sergt-Major M. Caughan of the 20th Regiment, Sergt. Major Hunter, R.C.D., Trumpeter Foster, G.G.B.G., and Trumpeter Simpkins, R.C.D., sounded the last post.

DOCTOR WOULD DIE FOR WOMAN

Los Angeles, Cal., June 26.—Dr. H. S. Tanner of this city, 82 years old, "the original 40-day faster," has offered himself as a substitute for Mrs. Angelina Napolitan, who is at under sentence of death at Sault Ste. Marie. His offer follows:

To the Hon. Earl Grey, Governor-General of Canada, Ottawa:

Dear Sir,—An Aug. 9 of this year there is appointed to be hanged in Sault Ste. Marie prison one Mrs. Angelina Napolitan, condemned to die because she killed her husband to protect her home.

Her death will leave four children now living motherless. I will also orphan a fatherless babe, yet to be born.

Her exception will be nothing short of murder—the fouliest blot on the criminal calendar of years or any other country.

Permit me to offer myself as a substitute for Mrs. Napolitan. May my life be taken instead of hers. I am prepared without robbing five young children, one a motherless babe, of a mother.

Awaiting instructions from your honor, I remain, yours very truly.

H. S. Tanner, M.D.

First English Letter.

The oldest letter written in English of which there is record was that of Sir John Pelham in London by his wife, who was then in Kent. That letter is dated March 22, 1539, and was sent to London by messenger. Up to the commencement of the reign of Edward I. all letters, even of the most private nature, were written in Latin. About the time of Edward's accession French, which had been the spoken language of the court from the time of the conquest, began to be used for written correspondence. In the reign of Edward III. the Black Prince, who in pursuance of an act of Parliament, was made the language of legislation.—London Globe.

Scene in Westminster Abbey Was One of Unparalleled Magnificence.

London, June 23—King George, eighth of the House of Hanover, was yesterday consecrated to the service of the British Empire, which he inherited the public homage of his loyal subjects.

With his consort, Queen Mary, His Majesty was crowned in the Abbey of Westminster, with all the wealth of pageantry and ceremonial splendor and imposing, were those hundred years ago, when Barnaby Rudge, the actors in the principal secondary parts of to-day's great festival were garbed in reproductions of the multi-colored, gold-embroidered trappings worn by their ancestors in bygone generations. The latter made up a brilliant setting for the central figures of the central figures.

Outside, the usually dull streets had been transformed into a mass of color. The sun shone, and spectators gathered in the early morning to see the royal procession. Buckingham Palace was enthusiastic in its ovation. The route was hedged with a vast polygot host, with a background of the walls and filling the transepts and galleries, were 7,000 spectators, all in the height of opulencing, variegated color. In one group of seats were ranged the rulers of the kingdoms of Europe with their aides, in another the diplomatic corps, competing with the royalties in the wonderful splendor of their decorations. Two blocks facing across the nave were occupied by peers and peeresses wearing red robes and ermine capes, holding in their laps the coronets which the King was crowned.

Places of Visitors.

Another large section was occupied by representatives of the colonial dominions, with their ladies. Some of these were in black coats, others were in black coats, others in Indian dress, Indian, with a gaudy turban, and marvelous jewels formed a striking group in sharp contrast to the rest. A scarlet clock represented the army; a blue one the navy, and a green one, and white, indicated where the judges and legal wigs and robes of the bench of Westminster School, who boasted themselves of ancient privilege to acclaim the King, were high up in the triforium, and were outside of the Cinque Ports in a box close to the throne, made a little patch of dark blue and white.

HIS MAJESTY KING GEORGE.

HER MAJESTY, QUEEN MARY

All the ladies, apart from the peeresses, were arrayed in robes contrasting with white feathers in their hair. Many were Uras. There was a treasure of Indian jewelry, some never before collected in one place, and costly enough to buy the ships of two British navy. The ladies-in-waiting to the Queen in the abbey were four duchesses, each being attired to carry into effect a color scheme of shot gold. One wore gold, shot grey, with pearls; another gold, shot blue and topaz jewels; a third, gold, shot green, with rubies; a fourth, gold, shot green, and emerald ornaments. Princess Mary wore a short white frock and a long dark violet train suspended from the shoulders with gold cord tassels, bordered with ermine and gold braid.

Three-Hour Ceremony.

The ceremony in the abbey consumed more than three hours. The majesty ritual of the Established Church, which dates back to the seventeenth rites, surcharged with the traditions of fabled antiquity and Sir Walter Parratt's impressive music, which continued throughout the original ceremonial arrangement, then the elder intoning the lines of the royal prayer, which, at the culminating points, the roll of the organ and the chorus of worshipers makes every moment one of intense interest.

The Archbishop of York's sermon was on the text "Among you as he that serveth." He said:

"Pray we for our King, that his strong and mighty hand may be faithful to God's trust in him—to be a minister of God's people, and among the multitudes of India, among the millions of Africa, and in Asia, the 600 fain raised above pitiful, and the 300 millions of Asia, all, to care for all, to unite all in one mighty hand, to bring peace and common ideals, common sacrifices. This is the work of a King, and it is God may give the King His grace to live to do it."

Apart from the processions, the solemnity and the paraphernalia of the coronation, the undercurrent of human interest most appealing was Queen Mary, although she kept herself with regal statelliness during her entire stay, as the first consort, very dear. While the King was being anointed, the Queen sat with her handkerchief to her eyes frequently. She was in a dazzling robe, the hangings of her hair, displayed a father's affection.

Crowds Waited Long.

Both routes of the procession were filled up long before the troops had found their places. The early arrival of cavalry in the morning, accompanied by bands, afforded almost the only diversion for the thousands of women in one-horse carriages, who from 6 o'clock carriages in motor cars began to crowd the approach to Royal Ascot, Lord Kitchener, General Gonti-Rogi, the Japanese veterans, arrived in a motor car-riage, a royal one, with scarlet livery, and a driver in a scarlet coat. They were accompanied by British attaches, who, with their uniforms, were given a hearty welcome, to which they crowd in the stands. The arrival of royal carriages, bringing the King's guests to see the coronation, was the signal for spectators and the ministers came in their own carriages, and for the most part in silk hats and morning dress. The royal carriages and state coaches were most gorgeous affairs. They were filled with peers in robes, some wearing their coronets as the easiest way, and others carrying them on their laps. The coaches were with magnificent robes over marvelous dresses.

Although hundreds of carriages drowned their guests at the Abbey entrance, by no means all came by the road. A large contingent of peers and peeresses came down the river by steamer. Even a larger number made their way on foot.

There was a short wait, and then the sound of music announced the approach of the first procession, which consisted of the royal and other representatives. In the last carriage were Crown Prince Frederick William and the Crown Princess of Germany and the Austrian and Turkish ambassadors.

The second procession, the members of the British royal family came half an hour later. The Prince of Wales, in his interlet uniform, followed by his sister and brothers in the last carriage. He received an enthusiastic greeting, which he acknowledged gracefully, smiling and bowing his acknowledgments.

At 11.30 o'clock a royal salute announced the departure of the King and Queen from the palace, and was the most gorgeous of the processions, the one in which naturally the greatest interest lay, since it was through the troop lined streets, which were backed by great crowds in the stands and afoot, a wave of cheering spread from one end of the route to the other.

Immediately behind the royal coach Lord Kitchener, in a field marshal's uniform, rode alone on Mameluke, and then came the Duke of Connaught, Prince Arthur of Connaught, the Duke of Teck, Prince Louis of Battenberg, Prince Arthur of Duke, Prince Christian and Prince Albert of Schleswig-Holstein, all in uniform.

The arrival of Their Majesties at the Abbey was the signal for a shout of greeting, which was continued until they had left the abbey, and was repeated as Kitchener or some other hero was recognized.

Coronation Accidents.

London, June 22.—Two fatal coronation accidents has been reported. At Barnsdale a horse, frightened by a salute was being fired burst and a spectator was blown to pieces.

A barnstable an archway in the street collapsed. A woman was killed and a number of men and women were seriously injured.

During the progress of the royal processions an Indian officer was thrown from his horse in the Mall and trampled on, but not dangerously injured.

A cavalry horse, frightened by the drums, scattered a crowd, but was quickly brought under control before it had done any serious damage.

Perforated Stamps.

The man who invented perforated sheets of stamps, was a Scotsman, one of the ideas. It is said to have first occurred to a hunting man who wanted to know how a letter could not lay his hand on knife or scissors. The solution of Mr. Chalmers was a hole in the envelope, through which he could pass a finger and tear open the envelope, tore it off and thus started a revolution.—London Tailor.

Practical Religion.

The story is told of a little housemaid, for over the sea, who, when present whether she believed that she was in any way different after uniting with the church from what she had been before, thought for an instant and then answered, "Well, I suppose, "Well, I sweep the corners."—Sydney Morning Herald. Ergo, a better demonstration of the reality of her religious life.—Christian Herald.

District Attorney Accused.

Albany, N.Y., June 25.—Assistant District Attorney W. A. Blakely of Pittsburg was arrested here today on a charge of embezzling bankers, in his attempt to secure a divorce from his wife, Adline. The charge was brought made a plea to Governor Dix not to grant the extradition of Blakely, Governor Tener of Pennsylvania for the extradition of Albert George Morphy and Captain T. W. Kirkbride, residents of London, England, who are wanted to testify in the divorce proceedings.

STRANGE SPEECH BY FRENCHMEN

Montreal, June 26.—The celebration of St. Jean Baptiste Day here terminated with the holding of a large banquet, at which prominent French-Canadians from all over Canada and the United States were present.

Many important subjects were brought up by the speakers.

Mr. Justice Constantineau of Ontario drew a contrast between conditions prevailing in this province and in the Province of Ontario. Here the minority lived in peace with the majority, because justice was given all parties. In Ontario, though the French-Canadian minority lived in peace, a spec-ie of armed peace it was. In the great work of opposing assimilation all along the line, French-Canadians of Quebec should be the guiding star of their compatriots scattered out all the provinces of the Dominion and all over the United States.

Armand Lavergne, M.P.P., opened with an attack upon the policy of immigration now being followed, which was threatening to swamp French-Canadians.

Oliver Asselin, in taking up the situation in Maine, declared that matters were critical there for French-Canadians. A bishop had closed a parochial school because the French had their school, and a similar course had been taken in regard to a bilingual school. French-Canadians must needs resist such tactics, which were patiently designed to efface their race.

The First Tea-Party.

It is of interest to know that the first "tea-party" in Canada dates from the reign of Charles II. Early in the reign, Henry Bennet, Baron Arlington, Earl of Lauderdale, a member of the Cabal Ministry, and James Butler, the fifth Duke of Ormond, brought from Amsterdam a parcel of tea, which Colonel Ind had just been brought to Europe by a ship of the Dutch East India Co. In his own mansion, Arlington House, which stood on Buckingham Palace grounds, Lord Arlington gave the first tea-party in England. It was reported that the invited guests, great people of the court, were pleased, made one and all, wry faces when they sipped the novel beverage.

Canadian Boys' Brides.

Recently two Canadian boys led to the altar prominent English ladies. The story of how Mr. Rockefeller's second son met his bride during the earthquake in Jamaica is well known, but it is not generally known that the engagement of Mr. Ernest Bryan, of Toronto to the niece of Lord Furness was the result of an acquaintance made on board ship while crossing the Atlantic. The bride's father, Bryan has literary tastes and naturally the boy's mother is not overjoyed, it is not surprising that the friendship lasted and ripened.

When Mr. and Mrs. Bryan settle down in their town house in London, they will have as their neighbor Lord Burnsford. Across the street is the residence of Mme. Melba.

Willing to Make Sure.

To a London bus conductor who was calling "Hangel wan Tighgate, Hanger and Ighgate" an old lady several times put the question, "Are you quite sure you go to the Angel?"

The man's answer was, "Well, yes, mum, it's wrin all over the bus, and I've been callin' it out for the last half hour, but I'm no boy, but I'll ask a policeman, if you like."—London Telegraph.

EXCURSION TO BEAVERTON SATURDAY

The annual excursion of St. Andrew's Sunday scholars was held on Saturday. As the trains left the Grand Trunk station on Saturday, morning for Beaverton, a very good crowd of the scholars and parents was on board. The day was an ideal one for a picnic, and the shore of Lake Simcoe, makes an excellent picnic ground. Bathing was the favorite pastime. A good program of sports was run off, and the children and their friends enjoyed the day immensely.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AT CONVENT AWARDING OF MEDALS AND DIPLOMAS

The annual commencement exercises of St. Joseph's Academy was held in that institution last evening and was a delightful affair in every particular. Those who were in attendance were treated to a musical and literary programme of rare excellence—a programme which helped to maintain the high standing that the convent enjoys as an educational institution.

The different numbers on the programme were rendered with taste and finish by the different contributors, which is a tribute alike to their ability as well as the painstaking efforts of the teaching staff. The Sea of Space.

The human mind cannot comprehend what is meant by the four words in the expression "the sea of space." If the volume of "space" included within our solar system, which is perhaps but a single plane of planets among hundreds of millions of a similar kind—were occupied by one single globe 3,000,000,000 miles in diameter it would be but a feather in the immense sphere of "vacancy" surrounding it. In fact, it has been calculated by scientists that in the space occupied by our solar system something like 275,000,000 of globes the size of our earth could revolve, each one at a distance of 50,000 miles from the other.

Strong Attachment.

"The young man who marries for money loves the money he gets in it," says a man who knows. "His rich wife is apt to tire of him and throw him out in a few years, or she is apt to limit his allowance to a mere 50 cents a day.

"If I married money," a man once said to me, "I would be a miserable man. I'd have to be with her all the time. I'd be jealous of her money. I'd be afraid she never parted with a penny."

OPERATIONS AVOIDED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Bellevier, Que.—"Without Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I would not be alive. For months I had painful and at times dangerous inflammation of the uterus. I suffered like a martyr and thought death of death. I consulted two doctors who could do nothing for me. I went to a hospital, and the doctors said I must submit to an operation, because I had a tumor. I went back home mortified. One of my friends advised me to take your Compound, as it had cured her. I did so and soon commenced to feel better, and my appetite came back with the first bottle. Now I feel no pain and am cured. Your remedy is deserving of praise."—Mrs. EMMA CHATEL, Valleyfield, Bellevier, Quebec.

Another Operation Avoided.

Poughkeepsie, N.Y.—I run a sewing machine in a large factory and get all run down. I had to give up work for I could not stand the pains in my back. The doctor said I needed an operation for womb trouble. But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did more for me than the doctors did in the time I used the remedy. I hope that everyone who is suffering from female trouble, nervousness and backache will take the Compound. I owe my thanks to Mrs. Pinkham, the kind working girl's friend for health, and all women who are sick should write to her and take her advice.—MISS TILLIE PLATNER, 135 So. Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

Thirty years of unparalleled success confirms the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases.

A UNIQUE DISTINCTION.

Lord Avebury Was the First English man to Be Photographed.

Interviewed the other day, on the occasion of his attaining the venerable seventh year, Lord Avebury, the great bank-reformer, said he had lived regularly and once were the secrets of his good health in the couplet of old: "Always, he said, "I have exercised the greatest care in matters of food, and am still a firm believer in the early to bed early to rise principle. I believe in taking plenty of exercise in the open air—games and so on." He said that he did not mean watching other people play games.

Lord Avebury is no partisan of the sport. He laughed as he quoted stories of Charles Kingsley to convert him to the ranks of those who smoke. Kingsley, Lord Avebury said, was a "highly strung, nervous man," he said, "and I found that tobacco soothed him but an angel to me."

Then he went on Lord Avebury was a familiar figure at meetings of the hounds. "I've given that up now," he said. "Also my cricket and hockey. Now I find my solace in golf.

It is not generally known that Lord Avebury was the first person in this country to be photographed. Daguerre had called on his father, who was, as his son said, amazed to be in the singularly scientific setting and a very prominent place in the laboratory. The subject of the Frenchman's visit was that he was preparing to take a picture. Lubbock, and to gain his support, he had brought his family with him. Lubbock's young son—big, prominent Lord Avebury—playing in the garden, was called, and Daguerre said he should be taken of the child as an illustration of the wonderful effect of his discovery. Sir John consenting, the child was placed in a chair and Daguerre tried, or, as we say, photographed.

A photographic plate was used on the occasion when his lordship had to undergo a second photographing. His friends endeavored to persuade him to take chloroform. "No thanks," he replied, "I would much rather be bored to death by the artist."

At his installation as Lord Rector of St. Andrew's University, Lord Avebury turned the maxims of the game of golf into precepts of conduct: "Keep your eye on the ball; keep straight; keep on the course; take time; do not hurry; keep in temperate; in all things keep your temper or you will lose the game."

The Fuller's Teasle.

No machine or other agent has been invented which can take the place of the fuller's teasle. The little dried prickly flowers of this plant grow on long stalks, are covered with small hooked spines. These heads are greatly used in the manufacture of tweed and other fabrics which require a rough surface. They are set in large rollers, which pass under the cloth, and, while the little hooks raise the nap, they do too slight injury to the material. Other inventions have been tried for this purpose, but none has proved satisfactory.—Pearson's.

A Queer Sight in Holland.

One of the most curious sights which I saw in Europe was a row of wooden shoes outside the door of a Dutch farmhouse on Saturday morning. There were six big sized shoes and the farmer himself, his two grown sized sons, his good wife and several small girls and boys had evidently worn all the line had been scrubbed and freshly polished ready for the Sunday.—"Old Country."

How He Defined Woman.

Father and son were walking the streets and passed a large pink hat which were many ostrich plumes. The boy was puzzled and asked his father:

"Father, what is that?" asked the son, pointing to this particular, conspicuous hat. "Is that a woman?"

"That is not a statute, my son," answered the father. "It is but a figure of speech."

SWINDLER IS JOYOUS

HE IS GETTING READY FOR THE CORONATION CROWDS.

The Passer-of Counterfeit Coin Is One of the Most Subtle Rogues in London and When Uttering Base Money Is Not a Prosperous Trade He Turns Readily to Other Lines—"Matching a Picture."

To the audacity of the utterer of counterfeit coin there is no end. And with the approach of the coronation season in London, when people are apt to grow a little careless, he will be busier than ever.

Not only does this worthy sail comparatively round to the shops selling small bottles of spurious ale, the adulterating of vinegar and water—for testing counterfeit coin, but when occasion calls that he turns his hand to swindling of other kinds.

When a man wants to pass bad money, he enters a small shop, and asks for a packet of cigarettes or some low price article, tendering a five or two-shilling piece in payment. The passers are not coners, and never if any chance does the man who enters the shop have more than one bad coin in his possession. The object of this move is plain.

In order that a prosecution shall be successful it is necessary that more than one base coin shall be found on the person accused, or that there be proven convictions against him for similar offences.

And if the swindler-passer should be smart enough to secure the man of attempting to swindle, he indignantly repudiates it, and demands to be searched. Often the result is a prosecution for assault.

The counterfeit money is carried by the professional swindler in large cars to keep out of sight, and it is handed piece by piece to the man who does the passing.

The actual coiner does not appear in these transactions at all. He pursues his evil trade in the quiet seclusion of just no prying neighbor shall detect the counterfeit which is made when the metal is being run into the moulds.

It costs the coiner about two shillings to make a "bad," as sovereign, in base money. He sells it to the passers for 8s. 6d. Nothing, so that after paying expenses, the despicable calling is a remunerative one.

The places most favored by coin passers are millshops, because the base money rings all right on a marble counter, and cabshops, because the counters are generally greasy, and grease spoils the acid test which is often applied.

Occasionally the game is tried in a public house.

One of the passers calls for two drinks, tendering a bad half-sovereign, and the publican gives him the change. Then he asks for a cigar, and, while the publican is getting it, the swindler-passer has broken half-crowns he has received for a counterfeit one, which he tenders in payment for the cigar.

If the publican says it is bad, the passer becomes indignant, now declares that he has just received it from the landlord himself, and that he has no other coin upon him. And when he turns out his pockets, this proves to be the case, because the good half-crown has been slipped to a confederate.

When the passer is not putting rid of base money, he is probably ringing the changes on the pawnbroker.

He obtains possession of a really good gold ring and one exactly the same size in brass, standard 18 or 22 carat, as the case may be. On the genuine ring he sets a base coin of a sovereign. The pawnbroker takes it away to test it, and returns with the information that fifteen shillings is the most he can lend on it.

"It's my wife's wedding-ring," says the man brokenly, as he makes for the door, "and I'm not going to part it go for that amount!"

Then he pretends to think better of the matter, and, turning to the counter again, he tendered the fifteen shillings. "Very well; lend me the fifteen shillings." But he has switched off the pawnbroker. But not the same ring. The genuine one has been in his pocket all the time, and the brass one has been turned, the rogue has substituted the genuine ring, and, if he is lucky, he can work this dodge on twenty pawnbrokers a day, he makes a fine thing out of it.

Another swindle perpetrated by the passer of bad money is that of matching the picture.

One of the scoundrels purchases a pair of oil paintings at a shop for three shillings. He takes the pictures one to a dealer, and asks that it shall be matched, expressed a great eagerness to pay at least ten pounds if the deal is successful.

A week later a confederate calls, and, pleading poverty, offers the counterfeit pair for sale. The dealer thinks he is in luck, and has been waiting for such a chance to secure for a painting worth a few shillings, to the aforesaid sum, he will make a profit of £4 after he has sold it for half the amount he had paid for it. Neither are seen again.

British business people are very wary of the broken umbrella trick. Go to a very respectable-looking but fussy old gentleman, and ask for or will go into a business establishment and make a small purchase, and has previously taken care to see that there is some bogus shillings in your about. As he is leaving, he will trip and fall over the proprietor's umbrella, immediately make a great outcry about the proprietor's carelessness. Naturally, he points to his broken umbrella, and demands the money for a new one.

No shopkeeper likes trouble with a customer, and he pays the bogus half-shillings for a new umbrella, being in blissful ignorance of the fact that the swindler's "gamp" was already broken in his house, and had probably served a similar purpose on two or three other occasions.—Answers.
